To Messrs. Chamberlain & Sells, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
Madoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

Mary Ann Doughty.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Poetry.

The Land of My Birth.

Old England for ever!
No power shall sever
My heart from the land of my birth,
'Tis the land of the brave,
Which none can enslave,
'Tis the happiest land upon earth

'Tis the land of the free,
So it ever shall be;
Our children no fetters shall bind,
Ere Britons are slaves,
We shall sink in the waves,
And leave not a vestige behind.

If the African stand
But once on her strand,
That moment his shackles are broke;
A captive no more,
He leaps on the shore,
And shakes from his shoulders the yoke

The land of the brave,
And she patriot's grave,
And heroes and sages of old.
We hallow their dust,
And esteem it a trust
More precious than silver or gold.

'Tis the land of the fair,
And beauty is there,
And the gladness that woman bestows,
When the circle is bright,
With the heart-cheering light,
From the eye of affection that glows.

'Tis the land of the wise;
With the glorious prize
Of genius her temples are bound;
And she beams from afar,
Like the bright morning star,
To give light to the nations around.

Literature.

Story of Nell Forsyth.

Nell Forsyth was, in our young days, a handsome and good-looking lass, who acted as only servant to a small family in a country town, and was well known beyond the circle of her masters home, for her discreet and steady character. Like all other lasses, Nell had her sweethearts of various orders; but it did not happen that she came within the danger of matrimony with any of them, till about her thirtieth year. She was then courted by a man named Small, who had recently inherited a little property, and, though of vulgar manners and appearance, was looked upon by individuals in Nell's rank of life as a rather eligible match. This man had not been remarkable in his early years for industry, or good conduct of any kind. While it was generally admitted that his prospects were such as to have entitled him to enter into society a little higher than that in which he had been reared by his parents, he coveted rather the distinction his little patrimony of old houses gave him in the eyes of those who had no such advantages, and liked nothing so much as to sit smoking and drinking with low wretches, who, in addressing him, would use the term, 'laird,' and, for the sake of a free share in his base indulgences, did not scruple to applaud everything he said as the height to wisdom. When it was understood that Laird Small was to get Nell Forsyth, the general feeling was that Nell was a fortunate lass; but one or two, who reflected more deeply, expressed their dissent from that conclusion. Small, they allowed, had almost enough to support him without work; but then his habits were not good; and if he should run in debt, and require to sell any part of his property, as was by no means unlikely, there was little reason to expect that he should be able to supply the deficiency by his labour. Nell, they thought, though apparently the humbler of the parties at present, was likely to be the soonest to complain of the bargain.

Nell, who, in this alliance, had rather yeilded to the advice of a few ordinary-minded relations, than acted from her own good sense, soon found that five or six old thatched cottages, producing a rent of from two to four pounds each, were but a poor compensation for the decent behavior which was wanting in her husband. The very second evening of his married life he spent in a low hovel in the neighbourhood, with a few coarse companions, from whom he did not part till near midnight. It may be conceived with what feelings poor Nell saw the maudlin wretch enter the house which she had that night spent two hours in burnishing and arranging for his comfort. There are many erring natures which it is possible to correct, many uncultivated natures which may be improved, and a vast number that are neither particularly good or particularly bad, and to which the wife may, without great difficulty, accomodate herself. But with a truly low and ungenerous nature, all the feminine merits on earth are of no avail. Such was Small's. The man was utterly incapable of feeling that he was doing wrong; he could neither perceive nor appreciate the force of his wife's remonstrances; he neither cared for her love nor for her anger. 'Will you speak to me?' such was his answer to every rebuke; you who had nothing, and whom I have made a lady! You are the last person on earth that should complain.' He seemed to think that gratitude for having married her was the only sentiment she was entitled to entertain.

Not long after his marriage, the branch of manufacture in which Small had been engaged began to decline, and he deemed it expedient to enter into trade. He therefore converted his property into about four hundred pounds of ready money, and set up a grocery shop and public house. For this line of life his wife was well qualified; and if success had depended upon her alone, it would have been certain. Small, however, marred all, by his irregular and absurd habits. He only appeared in the shop to give offence to customers, to consume, to break, and to spoil. Into every festive company he would intrude, whether the individuals might be above or beneath him; and all alike he displeased by his behaviour. It soon became almost the sole business of the wife to keep the husband from doing harm; and notwithstanding all her exertions, much it may well be believed, was done. He delighted in her occasional in-lyings, for then, without the least feeling for her situation, he would indulge for a week in unrestrained debauchery; while 'the lass,' the only surviving minister of good, would vainly endeavour to help matters square in the shop, and at the same time pay some attention to her mistress. To every complaint, his only answer was, 'What? isn't it all mine—all my property? Didn't I make you Mrs. Small, Nelly?' The monster had fixed the idea in his mind that his half-dozen old houses, inherited from an industrious father, had given him a perpetual immunity from all labour as well as all control; and nothing could convince him of the contrary. Even when ruin came, and the whole proceeds of 'the property' were found dissipated, he had the hardihood to tell his forlorn wife that she was well off in having connected herself with a man so much superior to herself in station. 'He had been the ruin,' he said, and to that could direct him of the title, 'but of the responsability of being his [illegible] with the wreaks of their little stock and [illegible] assistance from Nelly's friends, [illegible] went to a small village a few miles [illegible] and commenced the same line of business in an humble way. Small was full of [illegible] of well-doing. He was to work at whatever chance in his way, while his wife should attend to the business. He would also make all her markets. As for his drinking any more, that was entirely out of the question. He had hitherto been led away entirely by his acquaintances, and as he had none at the place where they were to set up, he would [illegible] free from temptation. In fact, taking everything into account they would be better now than ever. The place was on a much frequented road, and he should not wonder but they would do more business there than even in a town. The fellow had a sanguine way of looking at things, and a plausible, boasting manner of speaking of them, which was very apt to impose on those who did not know him well. Nell was quite aware of his temperament, but nevertheless could not help encouraging a hope that poverty would work some change in him for the better. Whatever might have been her thoughts, she knew that there was no alternative. She already had four children, who, wanting her protection, would have wanted everything; and for their sake felt that she must still struggle on, let her husband behave as he might.

For a short time Small did seem a little steadier in his new situation. As soon, however, as the first difficulties were over, the fellow was as bad as ever. Old acquaintances found him out, and he was at no loss in forming new ones. Even the passing vagrant found a friend in Laird Small, for was, by the way, one of his peculiarities that he liked the company of vagrants.—Under the pretence of studying men and manners, he would descend to the society of the most vicious, and many a person whom others would have passed by as an outcast wretch, he respected as 'a man who had seen something of the world,' and would entertain gratuitously with the best he had. 'They often cheat,' he would say, carelessly; 'but then it is always seeing life.' The man was, upon the whole, more absurd than wicked, and his principal faults seemed to arise from a kind of intellectual imperfection, which prevented him from seeing his duty to his family, and to the world. Even when his wife was working like a slave amidst a complication of household and mercantile duties, almost sufficient to overturn her reason, he, who was sitting coolly all the time with his tankard, enjoying a newspaper or a friend—would remark, in reply to any complaint she might make, 'Nelly, you know I am the head of the concern. I think for you, you know. You're a very active woman, but it would be all in vain, if you had not some one to plan for you. You can sell, but it is I who buy, [illegible] I meet with the merchants, you know.'

'Ay,' she would remark—for the poor woman was not above making a tart reply —'you like to get among the samples—fient else you're fit for.'

'Nelly,' he would say, quietly 'you are very wrong to disrespect the head of the concern. This gentleman, here,—and here he would turn to his crony, perhaps a poor travelling Irish labourer,—'this gentleman will tell you that, without the head, the hands, that's yourself—are useless.'

'Tut, sit about, till I put on the pot,' she would say, 'or faith the hands will come over the head wi' the herin tangs!'

Such violence on Nelly's part may seem derogatory to her character, and take away some of the sympathy which would otherwise be felt for her situation. If we were to pursue the usual practice in fictitious writing, we would represent her all submission and gentleness, while her husband was all wickedness. In the actual world, however, characters are invariably found composed of many various, and perhaps hardly consistent properties. Nelly was a most worthy, respectable, assiduous woman, devoted to the interests of her children, and who executed every duty of life in a creditable manner; but her temper had been broken a good deal by her husband's conduct and its consequences, and no result could be more natural. A constant mild submission to a series of harrowing wrongs and troubles was not to be expected of a woman of her education and habits.

The Smails spent several years in this situation, without making matters any better. Their debts grew larger, their family more numerous, the habits of the father more indolent and self indulgent. Nell's heart was almost broken. 'Oh, ma'am,' said she one day to a lady who took some interest in her circumstances, 'I dare say if it werena for the bairns, I would just lie down in some dyke-side and die. Many a time, when I gang to rest, I wish that I may ne'er waken again; but yet, when I do waken, and hear their little voices spunking up about me, this ane for a peise, and that ane for his claes, and anither ane, may be, gaun yoving and lunchin through the house wi' mere senselessness, I just get up and begin again, and think nae mair about it.' They at length lost their license through the ill-will of a neighbouring gentleman, who had seen Small carrying the bag for a shooting customer, and enjoying the sport with two much the appearance of a practised relish. Hereupon their creditors, finding there was to be no more traffic, seized upon their furniture and stock, and sold off the whole by auction, leaving them with seven small children to seek a new habitation. They took the course which is generally pursued by destitute and ruined people—they hid themselves and their shame in one of the dens of the neighbouring city. Small commenced labour at a public work, and soon tired and withdrew. The mother was then compelled to come forward once more as the bread-winner. By the recommendations of some individuals who knew her, she obtained employment in washing. She also got her eldest son, as yet a very tiny creature, hired as a weeiaal boy at a small salary, the whole of which he brought every week and placed in his mother's lap. For another series of years she persevered in this course of life, suffering inconceivable hardships of almost every kind, and daily struggling whether well or ill, through a quantity of hired labour and domestic drudgery, under which the strongest constitution might have been expected to sink.

Small would occasionally work a little, but he invariably spent his earnings in the indulgence of his own base tastes. Nelly made many ingenious attempts to wile a little of his money from him, but seldom with any considerable success. She had instructed one of her children, who was a favourite with him, to watch his movements on the pay day and try to save a little from the general wreck. This child would follow him to all his haunts, and use every kind of expedient that could be conceived for bringing him home with a pocket not altogether exhausted. The little shivering creature was heard one night saying to him—'Oh, father, get fou as fast as ye can, and come away, for mammy will be wearying for ye!' Nothing, however, could melt the hardened heart of this man. His selfish and uncontrollable desire for exciting liquors had deadened every good feeling within him if any such ever existed. He could, without the slightest sympathy, see his wife work sixteen hours a-day within a week of her confinement. If a shilling of his own gaining could have spared her the necessity of such exertion, it would not have been given to the tavern it must go. She, on one occasion of exigency, was obliged to employ him on an errand for some medicine, which was necessary for herself; and instead of hastening back with what was wanted, as it is to be hoped the most of husbands would have done, he spent the money on the gratification of his own base appetite, and did not reappear till next day. Under every humiliation, and though having the life of a very dog, or worse, he would still talk loftily of his house, his wife, and his children; and still he kept up his visionary title of 'the laird.' He would take his seat as majestically at a meal as if he had provided it himself, and if anything of an irritating nature was said by his wife, he would, with one sweep of his arm, drive every article that stood upon the table into the fire. This he esteemed a grand discovery for the exaction of civility, and no consideration of the deplorable poverty of his household could prevent him on any occasion from putting it in practice.

One of the very few things which the unfortunate woman had saved from the last wreck of her household was a hen, which she designated Peggy Walker, out of respect for the person who had given it to her. Peggy was a remarkably decent, orderly, motherly-looking hen, of the common size, and so very good a layer, that for the whole season she would produce one egg a-day, and on some occasions two. Even in the straitened purlieus of a low suburb, Peggy found it possible to pick up a livelihood; the neighbours indeed had a kind of 'respect for the creature. They knew of what service she was to Mrs Small, in enabling her to support her family, and, not only would abstain from hurting or persecuting her, but would throw many crumbs in her way, which they could not well store. It was seldom that Peggy Walker did not contribute a shilling in the fortnight to the poor family who owned her; and the value of a fortnightly shilling, in such a case, who can estimate. Many a time did Nelly acknowledge that, if it were not for "that dumb creature," she did not know what would come of her family; for it was almost the only source of income upon which she could depend.

The laird was one day on the rumble, as he called it, with some of those low abandoned acquaintances in whom he took so much delight. The party had exhausted all their pecuniary resources, but not their appetite for that base fluid upon which they fed to their own destruction. Already they were a six-pence short of the reckoning, and till that settled, the landlord told them peremptorily they would get no more. What was to be done?

'I, my laird,' quoth one of the wretches, 'haven't you a fine chucky at hame? What's to hinder you to thraw its neck and sell't in the market there? We'll get at least eighteen-pence for't. That would answer finely.'

'What! Peggy Walker?' said Small, not realishing the idea at first. 'Man, the gudewife would never stand that—it would break her very heart.'

'Gae wa,' said the other, 'aren't ye master? Isn't the hen yours?'

'Oh yes, everything's mine,' cried the tipsy fool. 'Nelly must not get everything her own way. Od, I'll do it.' And away he went, seized the meritorious Peggy as she was stalking in her usual quiet and respectable manner in the close, and in half an hour rejoined his companions, having sacrificed, for another hour of infamous [illegible] what would have helped for [illegible] to put bread into the mouths [illegible] children.

The loss of Peggy Walker was a severe blow to Nelly, but it was nothing to another tragedy which soon after took place. During one of Small's rambles, and after he had been absent for rather more than a week, his favourite child, the youngest but one, was seized with a severe illness, under which he quickly sunk, notwithstanding all the exertions of the mother. This fair-haired child was the first that Nelly had lost, and notwithstanding the distressing number of her family, she could not see him stretched out on the miserable bed where he had died, without the usual bitterness of a bereaved mother's grief. It was at her least distress, however, that her husband was absent, and would neither see his darling before the interment, nor render the assistance in that ceremony which was so nearly indispensable. A poor sick joiner, who lived next door, rose out of his bed to make a coffin, which he gave her upon credit—for he was poor. The grave-digger required his fee, but she contrived to obtain it. A sum would have also been necessary to hire a man to carry the infant to the grave; but this she could not furnish. She was therefore obliged, after dressing herself in something like mourning, to take the coffin in her apron, and, with fainting steps, proceeded with it through the crowded streets towards the place of sepulture.—Many an eye turned with wonder to follow her, as she pursued her melancholy walk for in Scotland women are never seen in funeral matters—but the bustle of a large city teaches the eye to treat every extraordinary thing with only a transient curiosity. No one interfered to help her, or to procure her help.—She passed on with the coffin in her lap and the tear in her eye, and laid her child in a grave, where none was present besides herself and the sexton, to do honour to the common forms of humanity, as it was consigned to kindred dust. When the mournful duty was done, she was seen returning through the same crowded streets, bearing amongst the figures of the gay and unfeeling, as sad a heart as ever beat in mortal bosom.

Three days after the burial Small came home quite sober, for a wonder—but he had no sooner sat down, than he called as usual for his darling son.—'Where is the dear boy? Bring my sweet Harry!' such were his exclamations; and the rest of the children stood aghast at what they saw and heard.

'Dinnah ask the name o' the deid, Johnny,' said his wife at length; 'your Harry is lying in the kirkyard, puir laimbie, this three days past.' Small, who at the same time saw confirmation of the words in the black ribbon she wore in her cap, and the tear which was beginning to glisten in her eye, was struck speechless by the intelligence. He covered his face with his hands and wept bitterly, while his wife, in as gentle terms as possible, related the circumstances of the child's death. From that day he was an altered man. He sat plying about the fireside apparently without an aim in life, or a power of action, only now and then asking his eldest daughter to read a 'chapter' to him—it is needless to say out of what book. He survived his child little more than a month, and truly was his death described by a neighbor as 'a light dispensed.'

When relieved from the oppression of her husband, Nelly became comparitively prosperous. By dint of incredible exertions, she gathered enough to buy a mangle and furnish a room as a lodging for a single man; in both of which concern she was successful to admiration. Her children also, as they grew up, got into employment, and contributed to their own and her support. Nothing, however can compensate for the twenty prime years of her life spent in utter misery, or repair the damage which sorrow and poverty had wrought upon her frame. She is constantly one of those beings, alas, how numberless are they!—who seem born only to the worst that life can give, who spend the whole of their days in bearing its through and for others, and are unusually blest if they can only find a little quiet space at last, to enable them to prepare for another, and, it is hoped, a happier state of existence.

Should the British Ministry definitely take action on Colonel Bray's scheme for the initiation of military emigration the North West offers one of the finest of fields, the Royal Canadian Rifles is the best regiment with which the experiment could be conducted. It contains 1,400 men who volunteered from other corps for the purpose of "making up their time," and then remained in the country, and besides, they are nearly all married, and well conducted, and industrious men, who are inured to the climate and familiar with the ways of the country. There are rumors afloat to the effect that they are to be disbanded in March, but this is, we trust, an error. The British Government could not well take such a step at this particular crisis without exposing itself to obloquy, and it is more reasonable to suppose that that other rumour, which assigns the regiment to the North West in the spring, is the more correct one. At least we hope so. The Romans in the old days, Russia in the present, are empires which had a country which has enormous boundaries, fully recognized the value of the actually revived scheme, when they founded military colonies along, so as to protect them. The North-West now calls for equal protection. The Indian tribes in that enormous territory must soon be, if they are not already, aware, of the changes which has taken place in its government through the virtual demise of the Hudson's Bay Company, and as some of the pickers at Fort Garry convention recently discovered, would be all the more disposed to preserve their ancient peaceful relations with the white settlers and trappers if a respectable force were quartered in the colony. Even now the two latter classes are in dread of the complications which may arise through a possible Indian war to the southward, and would therefore gladly welcome military colonists to the settlement.—Mont. Gazette.

A Remarkable Funeral.—On Friday the funeral of the late Mrs Muller, founder of the world-famed Orphan Asylum on Ashley Down, took place at the Anno's Road cemetery, Bristol, and rarely, if ever, has the loss of a private citizen evoked such a profound sympathy throughout all classes of society as that exhibited during the passing of the mourning procession through the city. Not only did the inhabitants in hundreds of cases partially close their shops and exhibit the usual signs of mourning in their several houses, but thousands assembling in the streets and many either join in the procession or accompanied it to the cemetery. The sight of hundreds of orphan children who followed to her last home the deeply lamented Christian lady, who had devoted nearly half a century of her life to their welfare, told at once the secret of the genuine sympathy of the multitude of spectators. Besides the children of the Asylum and the multitudes of people, there were over thirty private carriages. The desire to get within the little chapel in the grounds was so strong that several hundreds of persons blocked up the entrance and its approaches after the mourners had entered. Mr. George Muller himself conducted the whole of the service, and with unaffected simplicity of manner, addressed those present and paid a Christian tribute to the merit of his departed wife.

About half past nine o'clock yesterday morning the dead bodies of a man named Francis Purdy and his wife were found in a small house in which they resided at the corner of Esplanade and Bay streets, by a young man, son of Mr. William Stollery, stone mason. The deceased Francis Purdy had been for many years employed by Mr. Stollery as a teamster, and was unfortunately addicted to the free use of intoxicating liquors. He was last seen alive the evening before, when he was under the influence of liquor. His wife was found dead in bed up stairs, but there were no marks of violence on her, and no appearance of a struggle having occurred. Both husband and wife were said to live happily together, and the latter was said to have been a sober woman. Their rooms, however, were filthy and very unlike those kept by a sober woman.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1870.

Parliamentary.

The Government Banking Scheme is likely to undergo considerable change in committee; but it is likely to pass in some form. Those holding silver would do well to prepare for the approaching change.—Sir F. Hincks wants three or four million of dollars, and he will have it for his shinplasters. Silver will soon be a drug in Canada at 20 per cent discount. The Americans are buying it just when our Government are pretending to desire to get rid of it, but really to get hold of it.

Specie payment is soon to be resumed in the United States, and then we will be offering our shin plasters at a discount to get silver if we want to cross the border on a pleasure trip. Truly we are a progressive people, our country is being ruined by the Government.

There has been very little done yet at Ottawa; not a bill of importance yet urged through by government. They are afraid to act, and are likely to remain so. John A. is indisposed; we did not yet hear what ails him; we shall soon hear it, however; an old attack, it is to be feared.

Mr. McDougall is ill of small pox, but is reported as progressing favourably.

Œcumenical Councils.

The eyes of the world are turned towards the great Council of Bishops now holding their sessions at Rome. The critical world is rigorously excluded, and the 700 or 800 bishops under the direction of the Holy Father decide on the gravest questions of politics, morals and religion, as carefully as if they all belonged to some "secret society." England and America sent their newspaper reporters to tell the world what was going on, but these reporters send us from week to week idle gossip and useless speculations. They know no more of the doings of the Council at Rome than we do who are at home. We shall see by and by what this Council is doing; we can only wait for results; and time alone will make known to us whether Rome accepts of the spirit of the age, or doggedly resists every modern improvement; or, indeed, whether the decisions of this Œcumenical Council shall be acknowledged as of vital importance by Roman Catholics themselves—for some of the so-called Œcumenical Councils have been of no significance amongst Romanists—as for instance, that of Basle, which they call "the Schismatical Council of Basil." Many Councils have already been held, and some of them have changed the decisions of others, or reversed them. The following is a list of the great Councils commonly considered Œcumenical:

Council of Nicæa, or Nice, assem.	A.D.	325
" Sardica	"	347
" Constantinople	"	381
" Ephesus	"	431
" Chalcedon	"	451
" Constantinople	"	553
" "	"	680
" Nice	"	787
" Lateran at Rome	"	1123
" "	"	1139
" "	"	1215
" Constance	"	1414
" Basle	"	1431
" Florence	"	1439
" Trent	"	1545
" "	"	1562
" Rome	"	1869

These Councils have met for various purposes, such as to fix creeds and discipline; to depose or elect Bishops and Popes; to root out Arianism, and to check the growth of Protestantism. The one now assembled has to meet not only its old foes but also Rationalism in a thousand forms. No doubt Free Schools will be assailed with a vigor and a pertinacity foreshadowed already by the circular of Archbishop Cullen against the Irish National Schools. We shall see persistent attempts made, not simply to exclude the bible from schools, but to destroy national systems of education, under the plea of their being either Protestant or godless. If the bible is used in schools they will be considered Protestant; if not, then godless; but in either case they are to be opposed and denationalized.

The present Council is a matter of very grave import, not only to the 200 millions of Roman Catholics in the world, but to the members of the Greek Communion and the Protestant Churches. Though it is true, as Locke says, that "truth scarcely ever carried it anywhere by vote," it is also true that the decisions of former Councils have controlled human thought and human action for generations. Let us hope that this one may show more prudence, and be guided by loftier sentiments than the now famous Council of Trent. Rome once ruled the world—at least the European portion of it—and had she accepted science as her ally she might have reigned over the hearts of Europeans and Americans for centuries yet. But she allied herself to art in one of its leading departments and proclaimed war upon the revelations of science, and thus she lost Northern Europe and divided Central Europe into two rival factions—one bound to the Mother Church and the other casting off her domination and forming Protestant communities. Should the present Council accept science as the "handmaid of religion," the Church of Rome may go on from this meeting with a vigor, an energy, and a power which she has long ceased to exhibit. She may gain back to her communion, skeptical France and rationalistic Germany, and hold Spain and Italy long and lovingly in her grasp. She may, perhaps, make inroads on Protestant countries, especially as there is in some of them a tendency to return back to the fold of the old church, on the plea that Luther and some of the Protestant reformers went too far away from the doctrines of primitive christianity. But should the Council regard science as the enemy of religion, she will find to her cost that she has rejected the only ally that can save her from gradual but certain destruction. It is now deeply felt by every thinking man that "all truths must harmonize," and that therefore the church and science must teach one and the same thing as far as they go in parallel directions; and that the church must not ignore what the scientific men settle by scientific methods. As for us we have no idea that Rome will accept of the lessons taught this age. We expect plans of aggrandisement and schemes for getting hold of the education of the youth; and as a result, commotions, agitations and counter schemes; for we have no idea that Roman Catholicism, or the world at large, will reap any material advantage from the long and serious deliberations of a body of men that refuse to hold conference with Dr. Cumming or to admit Pere Hyacinthe to lay his views before them. Not to seek for truth nor to harmonize religion and science has this Council met, but to affirm dogmas long ago determined on, and to enter on a career of propagandism for which the world is not altogether prepared, and which will be met as it deserves. No Council composed merely of representatives of a single church can be considered truly œcumenical, and therefore the one now met at Rome is only a synod or conference of Roman Catholic Bishops, and neither represents the liberal sentiments of the Gallic Catholic clergy, nor reflects the genius of modern christianity in anything higher than a sectarian aspect.

The New School Bill for England.

Two very important measures are now before the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland. One is the Irish Land Bill and the other the English School Bill. The Land Bill is a noble attempt to settle in a spirit of fairness an unjust and oppressive system of Land Tenure which has kept Ireland back perhaps more than any single thing of which we know; which has made the land-owner in many cases a heartless tyrant and the tenant a kind of crouching serf; and which has led to absenteeism on the one hand and agrarian outrages on the other. If this Land Bill is important to Ireland, the Educational Bill is equally important to England. There are great difficulties in the way of framing a National System of Education for England. The Denominational System is in full vigor and is likely to be sustained by the combined influence of the Church of England and of the Wesleyans. Scotland was fortunate in having in Knox not only a religious Reformer, but also a great and farseeing Statesman, who sketched out with remarkable wisdom a system of popular education that has done for that land more to elevate her in the scale of intelligence than perhaps has been done by any one man, in the last three centuries, for the land of his birth or adoption. All the Scottish system needs is revision; the great and fundamental principles of a National System have been in full operation since the time of Knox. Ireland too has a National System which has for thirty or forty years been a blessing to her. If she can only maintain that system in its leading features free from priestly control, nothing will be needed in the way of change except to add to her common schools something like our Grammar Schools, or the Parochial Schools of Scotland—a class of intermediate schools that shall prepare pupils at once for the professions, and the Queen's Universities and the Colleges. But in England no popular system equivalent either to the Irish or Scotch system is to be found. The Bill introduced by Mr. Forster is an attempt to give England a National System of Common Schools; and it seems to be well adapted to that purpose. The Government of which Mr. Gladstone is the leader seems to be thoroughly in earnest, and should it succeed in passing these two Bills it will render itself one of the most illustrious Governments that have ever wielded the destinies of the British Empire. The school system of Ontario has furnished some useful hints to the framers of the English School Bill and the visit of Rev. James Fraser to Canada and the United States was not without its effects in the formation of the Bill.

One thing more is needed, and that is to cheapen and popularize the English Grammar Schools—nearly 700 in number and most of them costing from 500 to 1000 dollars a year for each pupil. The Curriculum also might be modernized by the introduction of the Physical Sciences and more of the Mathematical. It is now too exclusively Classical. Mathew Arnold in his "French Eton" gave some useful hints tending in this direction, but even he does not seem to have any idea that they can be popularised as they are in Canada, and placed within the reach of all classes of the community. Success to the English School Bill.

Mr. Wm. Wood, Clerk of North Monaghan, has written to us complaining that he is not to receive opportunity to defend himself against the accusations laid to his charge. We can only say that we are willing Mr. Wood should have every opportunity of answering charges preferred, but lately it was becoming a matter of personal verasity, as to who was right, and who was wrong. In that way the dispute never could be settled by the disputants, and after all perhaps there were grounds for the diversity of opinion, each believing himself right. In the dispute with Mr. Collins we believe both parties will feel obliged to us for stopping proceedings. The public have formed their opinions on the questions at issue. Our remarks that all the strife arose out of an order on the Treasurer not having been entered in the books we believe gives the whole gist of the matter. If it had been entered, no deficiency would have been detected; and seeing it was not, there was an apparent deficiency, which each party acknowledges, and that should end the matter. In the matter of charges prefered by Mr. Tully, it was not our intention to prevent Mr. Wood or the Council replying as it is only fair that both parties be heard; at the same time we would rather the whole matter was dropped; perhaps it is the story of Chameleon anyway.

Sabbath School Convention.

FIRST SESSION.

The 2nd Annual County Sabbath School Convention of Peterboro, commenced its Session at 2.30 p. m., on Tuesday, 15th March, 1870, in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. A considerable number of Delegates and others from different parts of the County were present.

Mr. R. Rutherford, Superintendent of the Wesleyan School, acting as chairman pro. tem, called the Convention to order with singing, led by Mr. Coates from Toronto, who kindly consented to take charge of the singing during the Convention.

After the usual devotional exercises, the chairman appointed a committee to nominate officers and committees for the ensuing year, consisting of Mr. Gilmour, Mr. Donelly, Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Brownscombe and Mr. Cameron.

The committee then retired for the despatch of business allotted them.

During their absence the time was occupied with short speeches by the delegates and singing.

A communication was received from Mr. Marling, regretting his not being able to attend through sickness; though he was absent in body, still he would be present in spirit, and would make the Convention a subject of prayer to God.

Mr. T. Donnelly, chairman of nominating committee, then proposed the following list of officers for the Convention, for the ensuing year. President, D. W. Dumble; Vice President, J. W. Gilmour; Secretary and Treasurer, J. A. Hall; Minute Secretary, W. E. James. Leaving the nomination of the business committee to the officers, the nominations were unanimously confirmed.

The chairman then called on the Rev. Mr. Burns of Omemee, who introduced the subject "The end and aim of S. S. Teaching." He remarked that we cannot exist without doing good, no matter how selfish we may be, all do a certain amount of good directly or indirectly. The aim of the Sabbath School is the conversion of the children. The understanding may be instructed and enlightened, but unless the soul is touched, teaching availeth little. He remarked that there were shallows in the word of God, the Bible, pleasant bye ways where childrens ideas could be educated. He thought all Sabbath School workers should be christians, and all the work tend to the conversion of the children.

Mr. Beadle also addressed the meeting on the subject, remarking it should be the teacher's sole aim and object to bring the children under his care into the fold of Christ at once; delay not, time is precious, and souls are fast being called away.

The business Committee reported that through the absence of Mr. Marling, it necessitated changing the programme.—That the Rev. Dr. Hamilton, of Woodstock, take the subject allotted to Mr. Marling in the next session.

After singing, and prayer by the Rev. Mr. Butcher, the Convention adjourned till seven o'clock.

SECOND SESSION.

The second session of the Convention was held in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, at 7 o'clock. There was very fair attendance.

The chair was taken by Mr. R. Rutherford, on account of the absence of the President elect.

The first half-hour was occupied in devotional exercises. After which a communication was read from Mr. D. W. Dumble, the President elect, regretting that he, through stress of business, could not attend to the duties of President, and he begged to decline the office.

The communication was referred to the business committee.

The Rev. Mr. Millard, of Toronto, introduced the subject: "The importance of Convention." They brought those who love the Lord Jesus together for the purpose of doing good. Temperance Societies, Bible Societies, the Church, were all coworkers, and the members should be brought together to get and impart good. The different minds operated on others. Under the spirit of love we were drawn out toward others who differ in external things, but feel that we are one in Christ.

At this point the business committee reported, recommending that Mr. R. Rutherford be President in room of Mr. Dumble, Declined. Report adopted.

Mr. Coates sang "Your Mission." He has a beautifully clear voice, and sings with good effect.

Mr. Beadle, of St. Catherines, followed on the subject of "Conventions." At them christians presented a solid front to the foe; all the denominations uniting for that object; the sole end and aim being the salvation of the rising generation.

The Rev. Mr. Burns, of Omemee, also spoke to the subject, remarking that Conventions had a tendency to do away with bigotry, and brought about a kindly feeling amongst the different branches of christians.

Rev. Mr. Burt, Minden, followed. He referred to his Sunday School work in the back townships. He had received benefit since he came to the convention. He hoped some would go out to his field and inspire the work. Mr. Burt was very happy, and well received in his remarks.

Mr. Coates led "Battling for the Lord."

The Rev. Dr. Hamilton, of Woodstock, introduced the subject of the "Duties of parents and members of Churches to the Sabbath School." He refered to the origin of Sabbath Schools by Raikes, as the act of a philanthropist, not as a religious work. He asked how did the church prosper before his day, and said that the great movement arose out of the genius of the age, not altogether out of Mr. Raikes act. He spoke in favor of parents aiding the work, but he besought them not to neglect their own duty towards their children. He also refered to the progress of religion in Scotland, from the fact that the Bible was used in the family, both on Sundays and other days and hence they were the most enlightened and most religious people in the world. Parents should go to the Sabbath School and should subscribe to it.

Mr. Coates sang "Recollections of Childhood."

The names of Messrs. Hall, Donnelly, and Brownscombe were added to the business committee.

Mr. Wm. Graham remarked that catechisms were one cause why parents did not send their children to the Sunday School, and thought that the sooner they were dropped and the pure word of God made the standard of the Sabbath School, the sooner would the millenial season come about.

Mr. Millard remarked that not the propriety or impropriety of using catechisms, but the importance of aiding the Sabbath School, was under discussion.

Rev. Mr. McDonnell, Peterboro, thought the Sabbath School was fulfilling its duty when it became a feeder to the church.—The scholars should be taught by elders, deacons and parents, and that catechisms should be used if the teachers thought fit, but Sabbath School work should not supercede parental training.

Rev. Mr. Burt followed on the importance of aiding the Sabbath School, and dropping minor differences,

The collection was then taken up,

When the Convention adjourned till ten o'clock on Wednesday.

WEDNESDAY—THIRD SESSION.

After devotional exercises by Rev. Mr. Halstead, of Belmont, Mr. Beadle spoke on the "Sabbath School Teacher," his getting a clear view of his duty; on the getting of verses; his acquainting himself with the Scripture, and the great work of inducing the children to accept Christ.

Dr. Hamilton and Rev. Mr. Burns also made some appropriate remarks.

The Committee on Nominations reported that the following gentlemen be Secretaries of Townships, &c., for the purpose of organising Township, Town and Village Conventions, viz:

J. W. Gilmour, N. Monaghan; Thomas Short, Otonabee; Peter Pearce, Belmont, &c.; J. P. Brown, Asphodel; Jacob White, Dummer; Benjamin Ventress, Harvey; Rev. Mr. Burt, Minden, Galway, Snowden, Stanhope and Hinden; D. McFarlane, Dysart and Harcourt; D. Sherin, Douro; Wm. Wood, Smith and Ennismore; John Young, Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos; T. Donnelly, Peterboro, James Stratton, Ashburnham.

The President then made some remarks on the necessity of endeavourfng to encourage Sabbath School work in the back townships, and of the necessity of employing some one to go back and stir the people up to the importance of the work.

Mr. Beadle urged on the business committee the advisability of setting apart a week of their time to aid any one sent by the Convention.

After singing, the Convention adjourned till 2 o'clock.

At three o'clock about 350 to 400 children assembled in the First Presbyterian Church. It was really a pleasing sight. Mr. Gilmour led them in singing several beautiful Sabbath School songs.

After this, Mr. Coates took the charge, and gave his way of teaching a class, but remarked that the great object sought in teaching an infant class was attention, and that this was only gained by variety.

Rev. Mr. Kines then addressed the children on the value of their souls.

Rev. Mr. Burt on the advantages of Sabbath Schools.

Mr. Beadle on the work of Jesus Christ for sinners.

Rev. Mr. Macdonnell closed this part of the business with benediction.

The S. S. Convention concluded its sittings yesterday evening, and notwithstanding the severity of the weather the Church was well filled. We may safely say that the work of the Convention fully met the expectations of its promoters. At the two evening sessions, $70.81 was collected for Sabbath School work in destitute places. The Convention gave up the idea of sending a man to organize schools. A great many feel that this would be the most successful way, and would have given their money willingly for the purpose.

The Young Men's Social and Literary entertainment in the Methodist Church on Thursday last, was a very successful affair. All those who took part in it, performed their parts admirably. The Young Men's entertainment was the best of the season.

The train from Port Hope did not get all the way to town yesterday. After working its way to within a mile of the station, it got off the track. It is no wonder. Every pass, highway and alley is blocked up. Even between the town and the Otonabee bridge the drifts render it impassable. The snow is falling and the wind blowing; there can be no travel for some days.

Remember Mr. Beckett's Concert, this evening, in the Music Hall.

The "City of Boston" arrived safely at Cork yesterday morning, the cause of the long voyage has not yet been learned.

As we go to press we have received a telegram contradicting the above.

A man named Guillemette has been tried in Quebec and found guilty of killing his wife and two children. He set fire to his house, and burned them in it. He did so to make way for getting married to his servant girl. She was witness against him.

DR. STEWART, whose notice appears in another column, will be at the Caisse House till Saturday. All who are afflicted with diseases of the eye or ear should give him a call. His treatment of those diseases is favorably spoken of.

The Intercolonial is likely to be a source of profit, politically, to the government. The contractors are not able to perform their contracts. They are sueing for favours, and in case of an election, will be in a position of dependence, and must vote for John A., Cartier & Co., or get no mercy.

RED RIVER MATTERS are still unsettled. The Provincial Government is managing the affairs of the country; Riel is President. The delegates are on their way to Canada. The spring, on opening the way to the territory, will enable the Government to make better terms. A railroad to the country is absolutely needed.

Snow is the order of the day, nothing but snow. On Sunday there was a very heavy fall of snow and a drift that blocked up the roads in every direction. Monday and Tuesdays travel together with the free use of the shovel, made the roads again passable, but yesterday not less than 16 inches fell. There is more snow on the ground now than has been in several years at one time.

The statement of returns for registrars for 1868, shows that the registrar of this County received for fees this year, $2,333,-20. He registred 1191 instruments. Under sub. secs. 1, 6, 9, 12, 13, $1,911,25; for searches, $421,95. It is currently reported that the Local Member East has the promise of this fat birth, if fortune should so favour him, by withdrawing this protection from other more favored parties, during the power of the present political Regime. Human nature would be more than human to resist the temptation of trying to get safely inducted into the neat little red brick building at the Court House as soon as possible.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Allandale.

Another serious accident happened yesterday in the Allandale Mills; William Jamieson, a young man in the employment miraculously escaped with his life. His coat was caught by the main shaft which revolves with great speed. The coat being very strong, he was instantly bound to its surface, and passing round received a severe shock, and resulted in breaking his right arm in two places. Judging from the appearance of the coat, which was rendered entirely useless, we cannot see how he escaped so well.

After a good deal of discussion, the Council resolved, that the Reeve inform Immigrant Agency that 50 laborers could be supplied with employment for the busy season; also that he inform Commissioner of Agriculture, that the swampy lands in this Municipality are generally unsuitable for draining, owing to their being too near the rock.

Petitioners asked for a by-law to withdraw certain lots in Dummer from union with school sections No. 11, Asphodel, and No. 15, Otonabee. At that meeting notice was given of the intention of the Council to pass a by-law making proposed alteration. Some discussion here followed as to whether the Council had the power to make a by-law withdrawing one section in one municipality from union with another section or sections in another municipality; 2ndly, when such by-law would take effect; and 3rdly, what be the liabilities of petitioners if by-law was passed. The School Question.

People are agitating the question in every part of the State, whether on account of the steady increase of Catholic population, and thus determined hostility to the Protestant bible, it would not be better to banish altogether the bible and religious teaching from State Schools. I lately attended a meeting of the Essex Co. Association Society of Congregational Ministers, where the subject was discussed, and where the sentiments was unmistakably against the teaching of the bible in Common Schools. In the words of the Venerable Dr. Withington, of Newberyport, (formerly pastor of High Street Church) "the place where religion should be taught is the church, the Sabbath School and the home. Pastors should look to the spiritual welfare of the children of their flock. The Sunday School may be greatly improved, and made to comprehend a wider range of religious instruction. But there is no more necessity of reading the bible in the common schools than there is of reading it in a mill or factory. The Rev. doctor was of the opinion that if religious exercise was of religion taught in week day schools, they should institute schools of their own, which should be supported by themselves, independent of government aid. Such schools have been maintained by different religious bodies and some of them have been schools of high excellence.—Mr. Correa.

The Hon. Miss Flint on Parliamentary "Hops."

BALLS, DANCES, &c.

Mr. Hansard,—In this day and age of the 19th century one might be led to think that sound, solemn judgement should take the place of the follies of the past; but not so, you can hardly take up a paper but you see the accounts of some great ball or dance that has taken, or is to take place.

We have Balls under the patronage of several of the Saints, Masonic Balls, Firemen's Balls, &c., &c.,

But the latest we hear of is to come off at Ottawa, in the Parliament Buildings, which from the notice is to be "a grand affair." His Excellency the Governor and Lady, together with the members of the Dominion Government, (I hope not all of them), and the members of the Commons and Senate are to honor Prince Arthur with a grand reception and Ball.

The buckets of both Houses must be laid over at a large expense to the country, in order to accomodate the large party which are to be present, as it appears that over one thousand cards of invitation have been issued, and Senators and Commoners will dance away, to the tune of six dollars per day, work or play, and all for what? why "to honor the Prince." If there was no one to be gratified but the Prince, I think there would not be much dancing done.

Well, the Prince must dance; has he not danced from Halifax to London, and back to Montreal? Has he not danced from Washington to Ottawa, and now only three dances are awaiting him at the seat of Government.

We see that even the Peabody funeral ship, the "Monarch," after getting rid of its freight was to have a "hop" before leaving Portland Harbor; was it for joy on the part of the Captain and officers of the "Monarch" at cessation of the funeral ceremonies that the "hop" was to be given?

Now sir, who pays for the ball, or "hop" at Ottawa? No doubt the whole expense will be found in the people's bill of fare, which we will all have to pay sooner or later if we can; and these expenses are heaped upon us whether we will or no, contrary to the wishes of tens of thousands of Christain people in this Dominion of ours.

When will our Governors, Government, our Senators and Commons, learn to respect the opinions of a large class of Her Majesty's subjects who are opposed to dancing, and particularly so in using the Parliament Buildings and the people's money for such frivolity?

I wonder if our noble Queen would, with the House of Lords and Commons, stop the business of the Session to use the Parliament Buildings for a Ball; I incline to think Her Majesty's womanly nature would revolt at the idea.

It is left to us in Canada to show how these things can be done, and as the Senators voted by quite a majority that the Senate Chamber should be given to Speaker Cauchon for his "Hop" into the first Session of the Dominion Parliament, although strongly spoken against at the time, why not other "hops" take place also?

Now as the Senate Chamber is to be again tee east of frivolity, why not carry it out and grant the building to parties for Saint's Balls and fifteen penny Hops. Our Government might make something out of letting the Chamber, the funds of which might go to lessen the expenses of the Legislature. But enough, I oppose such desecration of our Parliament Halls.

Yours, &c., &c.,

BILLA FLINT.

THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.—The reported design of a convict to assassinate Mr. T. J. O'Neil on Sunday morning last, in the Penitentary, turns out to have been a most serious one, and no ruse at all. Sullivan, the convict, was regarded as a half witted fellow, and it was thought possible that he might have a design to be treated as a lunatic, and be sent in consequence to Rockwood Asylum whither a fellow convict, and one with whom he was engaged in an ingenious attempt to escape last summer, had preceded him. It was thought possible that the comrade was also shamming, though this is mere conjecture. But this theory seems to be exploded. Sullivan, whose disposition is morose and vindictive, was some time since brought before the prison inspectors for a breach of discipline, and being punished for it, conceived an enmity against Mr. O'Neil, one of his judges. At the time he was heard to make threats of a revengeful nature, and it is probable that on Sunday morning he resolved to carry it out. The convicts were marched in as usual to service in the chapel. The altar stands near the entrance, and the prisoners pass very closely in filing in. The Inspectors are provided with seats inside a railing in front of the altar, and one of these was occupied by Mr. O'Neil. Sullivan, as he passed along, made a dash towards Mr. O'Neil, with the evident design of striking at him with the knife he held in his hand but again, man proposes and God disposes—he stumbled on the step under the railing and fell. Before he could recover himself he was secured, and spared a murderer's fate. Sullivan was formerly a soldier of the 20th Regiment, and was sentenced to imprisonment for firing a barn. At present he is under a close guard. The attempt made last year by himself and comrade towards escape was remarkable.

"Sambo, did you ever see the Catskill Mountains?" "No, Sah; but I'se seen um kill mice."

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF, RENOVATING RESOLVENT, AND REGULATING PILLS.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 24, 1866.

DOCTOR RADWAY & Co.:

DEAR FRIENDS:— * * * My wife blesses these preparations, when she thinks that after three nights and days of suffering of violent pains in the stomach, brought on by overdoses of Quinine, by the use of four drops of "Ready Relief" in some water, she was able to sleep tranquil all night, and the next day she was completely re-established. I have also cured a slave from heart disease with "Ready Relief" and "Pills" and have also cured sore throat, rheumatic pains, toothache, headache, &c., &c. With the "Resolvent" I have cured Erysipelas Skin diseases, &c.

It is my full impression that the "Pills" are the best purgative that can be found, not alone for the facility which they can be taken, but also as they do not cause griping or make you feel sick.

I have a son of five years old now, who took the "Ready Relief" when 4 months old, as he suffered from some irregularity in the bladder, preventing him from making urine. The following was the treatment: 20 drops of "Relief" in a cup of water, and divide it in portions of a tablespoon, which he took every ten minutes which completely cured him. He has since had colic, which I treat in the same way, and also rub the stomach with it (pure).

Major Joaquim Vieira de Silva Plato, proprietor, in the Oldade Leopoldina, can prove that after more than ten years suffering from Paralysis, through the medium of your remedies he obtained that which he had been deprived, and thought at the time that he would never be able to get, and that was the use of his legs.

You can fully believe that there are a great many people in this vast empire who truly confess that they owe their life to the use of your precious medicines. You can make use of this as you think proper.

I remain, dear friends,

Your obedient, &c.,

(Signed,) SENAO DE SAMPAYO LEITE

A CORN is a disease as much as a decayed tooth is, but skilful dentists are universally employed and respected, and surgeon chiropodists are now earning a similar claim for the respect and confidence of the community. It is needless to say that the success which Dr. Briggs has achieved in his profession as a surgeon chiropodist has been unparalleled in this city; many of our most estimable and worthy citizens, ladies as well as gentlemen, have been relieved from corns, bunions, club and inverted nails, without the slightest pain or uneasiness, and doubtless many more would had they an adequate appreciation and knowledge of his ability. Few individuals are aware that the diseases of the feet, if not fatal to one's life, are certainly an annoying as can be, and the remedy is simple and sure; the corn, bunion, or inverted nail must be skilfully and carefully treated, and the pain entirely ceases. The best way to obtain this relief is to purchase a box of Briggs' Modern Curative, which you can obtain at any Druggists or Country Merchant's throughout the country, and you will warrant you will find it the most reliable and efficacious Remedy in the known world; we only ask you to give it a trial. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, No. 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE POET, PRIEST, Philosopher and Sage.
All turn with rapture to the Golden Age.
For, in that happy period they find
Instruction and delight for all mankind.
The human race where happiest then, because
They lived according to Dame Nature's laws.
Their wants were few and easily supplied;
Their food and drink were found on every side;
Their clothing did not know the tailor's art
It did not bind the limbs or crowd the heart;
Their walk was graceful, free and unconstrained,
For not a foot of all that race was pained
With Corn or Bunion (dreadful modern ills),
With sandals shod, they scaled the steepest hills,
Or roamed the plains, by happiness possessed,
No ache or pain destroyed their perfect rest.

Briggs' Modern Curative, the only reliable and most efficacious Remedy in the world for the speedy cure of Corns, Bunions, Bad Nails, &c. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, No. 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

GREAT SUFFERING.—How many thousand ladies, both young and old, have passed through great suffering from that terrible demon, Neuralgia, some passing a sleepless night tossing about in great agony, but succeed in getting relief after a few hours of misery, only to be renewed again in a short time with the same unrelenting, excruciating pain. Others have endured this terrible torture for weeks, both day and night, until exhausted with such continual suffering, and almost wishing for the angel of death to relieve them; but hope dawns: a cure has been discovered, a rapid and radical cure; Briggs' Allevantor is the remedy; can be tested, free, at No. 6 King St. West, Toronto; is sold by Druggists and Country Merchants everywhere. SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION.—The general symptoms of this disease are an habitual cough, morbid expectoration, pains in the breast, casual flush feverish heat in the hands, feet, and cheeks, change of voice, thin fingers and nose, bent or crooked nails, falling of the hair, &c. This disease has been divided into three, four, and even five, stages by medical writers; but, for practical purposes, three stages will be found best adapted to the course of the disease. To entirely cure this cough, and eradicate all the early symptoms of this fatal malady, Dr. Briggs' Renovator, the Great Throat and Lung Healer, is thoroughly adequate and sure. It is not unpleasant to the palate, and its properties are all of a healing and purifying nature. After once having used it, no person would hesitate to acknowledge its superior efficacy in staying the hand of that fell Destroyer, Consumption. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers, Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Bradway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Economy in Health and Physic is as important as in business, and we know of no cheaper, better, or surer means of preserving health and directing the sick of their infirmities, than through the medium of Dr. Radway's famous medicines. We present a case in point

CASE 1,236.—Marcus W. Mount, long a sufferer from liver complaints, has paid, he says, at different times, about $250 to physicians, and he thinks as much more for medicines. Is induced to try Radway's Pills, with occasional doses of the Renovating Resolvent to assist in removing it from his system the effects of the mercurial treatment to which he has been subject. Soon finds the benefit of the change. Takes, in all, five boxes of the Pills and three bottles of the Resolvent, and at the end of the course is "as well as he ever was in life."

PILES are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins, and lower part of the abdomen' causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighborinß organs; at times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness, of the stomach' &c. A disagreeable itching is a common attendant. At certain times a stinging or burning pain is experienced, being often very severe; and after the fecal discharge, there is more or less bearing down or tenesmus. For this painful disease, Dr. Briggs' unrivalled Pile Remedy is a specific cure; used according to directions, the greatest sufferer will feel the benefit of its virtues. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers, Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y. and No. 6 King St. West Toronto.

IN THE FIRST OR INCIPIENT STAGE OF consumption there will be found some difficulty in breathing, perhaps amounting to a shortness of breath, more especially on exercising. Cough is a very early symptom; it may be slight and barking at first, but gradually becomes more and more distressing and frequent; at first it is dry, but is soon attended with an expectoration of a thin or frothy character, or resembling mucus. Very frequent the expectoration will be streaked with blood, and sometimesmes the first observable symptom of consumption will be more or less profuse bleedings from the lungs. To those singled out as victims to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy, sure in its result to bring back health to the poor weakened frame, and joy to the hearts of the friends Dr. J. Briggs' Renovator, the Great Throat and Lung Healear. Lold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs' & co., Proprietors 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St West, Toronto.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

In next this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 28th, 1866,

Messrs. RAYMUNDO C. LEITE & BRO:

GENTLEMEN:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta (a large proprietor in the Cidade de Campos) was staying at my house, he was attacked with intermittent fever Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a great deal of in Campos, but the fever, instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (16 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tinoco declared that there was not the slightest hope of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the Relief pure on the Chest, back and wrists; three (of Radway's) Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one desert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed, to the astonishment of every one, who witnessed the miracles of Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen,

Your very obedient servant,

JOAQUIM PINTO FALCAO, Merchant.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosterity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature contwining representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yeamed after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that th's great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Connecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Fapance, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISCOVERY OF YUCATAN—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own, [Boston Commercial.

The Printer Boy.

See the merry printer boy, at the busy press;
Working over night and day, and cares for nothing less;
While the tiny type he sets, time is on his flight,
And now he seems, how carefully, to see that all is right

The treadle now he swiftly plies, working in a whir,
And nose the gaiting waste supplies of scolding customer;
Now a merry tune he sings, or whistles at his will,
Yet little dreams who's listening beneath the window sill,

We peep in through his sanctum door, and see his manly face;
Though 'tis furrowed not with care, no boyish lines we trace
See him thinking steadily, not of care or strife
But of a happy future and perhaps a little wife.

That face, though plain, yet thoughtful is, and gemmed with honest eyes,
Beaming with intelligence, free from all disguise.
Some may with derisive words their busy tongues employ,
Yet half the girls in all the town would like the printer boy.

Printer boy is kind and good, ever firm and true,
And if you are a friend to him, he'll give you friendship due;
And if now while age do view, when he's of weary mind,
He has his father's, mother's, sister's cheer, and friends not hard to find.

Printer boy ever be thus, ever glad and free,
And you'll be blessed with health and wealth through faithful industry,
Ever in your happiness, we take a warm delight,
May you by angels guarded be, and now a kind good night.

The most sentimental exercise yet known is said to be women's swimming in tears.

"I'll take the responsibility," as Jenke said when he held out his arms for the baby.

There is a man whose tongue might govern multitudes, if he could govern his tongue.

A young man who recently took unto himself a wife, says he didn't find it half so hard to get married as he did to get the furniture.

A wag seeing a door nearly off its hinges, in which position it had been some time, observed that when it had fallen and killed some one it would probably be hung.

I don't believe it's any use to vaccinate for small-pox," said a back-woods Kentuckian," for I had a child vaccinated, and in less than a week after he fell out of the window and was killed."

A widow once said to her daughter, "When you are at my age it will be time enough to dream of a husband." "Yes, mamma," replied the thoughtless beauty, "for a second time."

A strong-minded woman was heard to remark, the other day, that she would marry a man who had plenty of money, though he was so ugly she had to scream every time she looked at him.

"Oh! she goes!" said a lady, speaking of the train as it was starting.

"You have mistaken the gender madam," said a gentleman; "this is a mail train."

Bad treatment—An Irish lad complained the other day of the harsh treatment he had received from his father.

"He treats me," said he, mournfully, "as if I was his son by another father and mother."

Courage.—As an old woman was lately walking through one of the streets of Montreal at midnight, as a patrol called out:

"Who's there?"

"It is I patrol," said she; don't be afraid.

Bostlan—"Go away!" said Muggins; "you can't stuff such nonsense into me. Six feet in his boots! Bah! no man as stands mor an two feet m his boots, and no use in talking 'bout it. Might as well tell me the man had six heads in his hat!"

A sharp boy.—"Papa," said a little boy, "ought a teacher flog me for what I did not do?"

Certainly not, my boy," replied the father.

"Well," said the little fellow, "he did to-day, when I didn't do my sum."

A prudent master advised his servant to put by his money for a rainy day. In a few weeks his master inquired how much of his wages he had saved.

"Faith, none at all," said he. "I did as you bid me: it rained yesterday—I took a drop, and it all went.

A Jew had failed in business, and was removing some of his goods from his store, with the aid of a drayman. One of his creditors came in, presented a bill to him, and asked for the money. "I been Dutch; I no understand English," he answered; then turning to the draymen, he added, "Put that big box on first."

"That's a good gun of yours, stranger, but uncle Dave here has one that beats it."

"Ah! how far will it kill a hawk with No. 6 shot?"

"I don't use shot, or ball either," answered uncle Dave for himself.

"Then, what do you use, uncle Dave?"

"I shoot salt altogether. I kill my game so far with my gun that without the salt the game would spile before I could get it."

Chocolate Cream Custard Pudding.—Scrape a quarter of a pound of the best chocolate, pour on it a teacupful of boiling water, and let it stand by the fire until it is quite dissolved; beat eight eggs lightly, omitting the whites of two; stir them by degrees into a quart of rich cream, alternately with the chocolate and three tablespoonfuls of white sugar; put the mixture into a dish and bake it ten minutes.

Food for Horses.—The best food for horses affected with the heaves is such as is nutritious and succulent, and should be condensed into as small a compass as possible. Dry and dusty hay is injurious, and makes a horse wheeze distressingly. Moistened ground feed, potatoes, carrots, and cute bagasse the best food for animal having the disease, and of the water to drink would be given to the horse out of a cask with slacked lime at the bottom and stirred occasionally, it would materially lessen the difficulty of breathing. Persons owning horses afflicted with the heaves, and neglecting to feed and treat them properly, should be visited by Mr. Berg or some other members of the humane society and admonished that it is contrary to law to oppress poor dumb brutes.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to assume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch: in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From tic douloureux, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Alleviator according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 308 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto

SYRAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

"Mayn't I be a Boy."

"Mayn't I be a boy?" said little Mary.
The tears in her great eyes blue;
I'm only a wee little lassie—
There's nothing a woman can do.

"Its so; I heard Cousin John say so—
He's home from a great college, too—
He said so just there in the parlor:
There's nothing a woman can do;"

"My wee little lassie, my darling,"
Said I, petting back her soft hair,
"I want you my dear little maiden,
To sooth away all mother's care.

"Who is it, when papa comes home weary,
That runs for his slippers and gown?
What eye does he watch for at morning,
Looking out from their lashes of brown?

"Is there nothing you can do, my darling;
What was it that pa said last night?—
"My own little sunbeam is coming,
I know for the room is so bright."

"And there is a secret, my Mary—
Perhaps you will learn it some day—
"The hand that is willing and loming
Will do the most work on the way.

"And the work that is sweetest and dearest
The work that so many n'er do
The great work of making folks happy
Can be done by a lassie like you."

Useful Recipes.

Apple Pudding.—Bake or stew your apples. To one pound of apples add one-half pound of melted butter, six eggs, three quarters of a pound of sugar; season with lemon. Pour on your pastry and bake slowly.

Sponge Cake.—Three eggs, one cup and a half of white sugar, one cup of flour beaten together, then take two-thirds of a teaspoonful of cream tartar, and half a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in half cup of cold milk; then add another cup of flour, and one teaspoonfu' of essence of lemon.

Bread and Butter Pudding.—Spread butter on some thin slices of bread. As you get them ready lay them in a dish and between each slice put some currants with a very little chopped lemon or orange peel, have a quart of milk ready, with four eggs in it; pour it gently over the bread; let it stand for an hour, and then bake.

Cream Pudding.—One quart of milk, three eggs, two tablespoons of flour, one teaspoonful of salt. Boil the milk; moisten the flour with cold milk; add to the hot milk, and boil three minutes; add the eggs, and boil up half a cup of sugar; flavor; turn into a dish for the table, and just before sending to the table sift sugar over the top.

Lemon Rice Pudding.—Wash four tablespoonsful of rice, and boil till softened, one quart of milk sweetened to taste; butter size of an egg; when nearly cooled add the beaten yolks of four eggs, and the grated rind of a lemon. To the beaten whites of the eggs add the juice of the lemon and four spoonsful of powered sugar. Pour the butter into a dish, put the whites on the top, and bake till brown. To be eaten cold.

It is maintained that the most inspiring natural sight which a glazier can contemplate is the gem of early day beating through the windows.

Ike's last trick was to throw Mrs Partington's old gaiter into the alley, and call the old lady down from the third floor to see an all gaiter.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as it by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is DR. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and it is fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order:' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

R. R. R. IN BRAZIL.

We refer the reader to the following testimony in favor of Dr. RADWAY'S REMEDIES, from gentleman of high character in Brasil. Persons doubting the genuineness of the same are requested to write to the parties, also to the U. S. Consul at Rio, as to the correctness of the statements and status of the writers. For every word not true the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 22d, 1866.

Messrs. RAYMUNDO C. LEITE & BRO.:

GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your favor of 20th instant, asking my opinion in regard to the efficacy of DR. RADWAY & Co.'s preparations. I am happy to say that I consider the Relief and Pills the best remedies ever known, and to form such an opinion I am obliged to prove it, which I will do willingly viz: I suffered so much from "colic" that when I was attacked it pained me so much that I preferred death to such sufferings, I took everything that was recommended, but it was of no use; at last I took 4 of Radway's Pills, after which the pains were very moderate, and then I thought that I was cured, but the pains were still violent (which I attribute to the negligence in my part in not following it up as directed,) that I was obliged to give in to my friend's request to take some "Relief," which he gave he gave me in a dose of one tablespoonful in a tumbler of water. In the interval of three minutes I felt relieved immediately, and fifteen minutes after the pain ceased. It is three months since I had an attack, and should I feel any symptoms of it I take the "Relief," I will do all in my power to convince the doctors of the good results of these medicaments, so that they may prescribe them.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

LUIZ JOSE DA SILVA CAMPOS.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Having for many years been in constant demand, and extensively employed by physicians in their practice, and by the public at large, as the best and most reliable cathartic medicine known, they have earned a reputation for the cure of the various complaints of which they purge away disease, which renders any commendation of them unnecessary. Indeed, they are known to all, and the unparalleled virtues for which they are celebrated, as the most effectual remedy for all disorders of the stomach, liver, and bowels, that can be taken into the human system, are known to every one. Their sugar coating renders them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood, and restore it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for the purpose of producing the required action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be taken as directed, for they change the blood and stimulate the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swelling, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often the most economical cathartic that can be used in families, as it prevents sickness by keeping the body in health. One who feels tolerably well often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their operation in clearing out the obstructions of the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glossy and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it, if wanted merely for a

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

In RADWAY'S PILLS you have one medicine that will secure greater benefit than any other treatise that will be given in these pages or more directed prescriptions of the medical practitioner. As a proof of this—You are seized with a bilious attack: Instead of resorting to pills like Pills or Calomel, take one Dose of RADWAY'S PILLS, and a cure is certain to follow. Or if a group of symptoms are given by, without running into particulars, RADWAY'S PILLS will correct the disorder, and restore the patient to health.

POISONED BLOOD.

When the blood becomes poisoned by the presence of an excess of BILE, UREA, CARBONIC ACID, and the fermentitious secretions of the SKIN;—BOILS, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, SPOTS, ULCERS, and HUMORS of all kinds break out on the surface.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent,

When the blood is in this condition, should be taken alternately with RADWAY'S PILLS. The indication of Cure is to free the blood from the presence of these poisons, and restore the functions of the Liver, Skin, Lungs, Kidneys, Bowels, to their proper duties. This effected, which RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, aided with Radway's Pills, will soon ensure—a Cure will be the result.

A BAD SKIN.—Spots, Morphew, Sores, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules, Tetters, are caused by impurities of the Blood. Checked Perspiration, Stopped Circulation of the Blood is the operating cause of the skin. One or two doses of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT will rid the skin from these visitants, and insure all a beautiful, clear complexion

PARALYSIS CURED.

DERBY VILLE, Harrison Co., Ohio, May 12th, 1869.

Messrs. RADWAY & Co.

Gentlemen. The RESOLVENT has effected a cure in a very severe case, that of Mrs. Lamuel Johnston in this neighborhood. She was confined to her bed and had lost the use of her legs; four bottles of the RESOLVENT has restored her, and last Sunday she was able to attend church. The demand for the RESOLVENT has increased, and no doubt it advisable to order in time.

Yours truly, R. PITTS & SON.

MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I employed various medical advisers, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact, I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to say one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Poetry.

Lines on the Death of a Lady.

My guard is withered—she is gone
Who most could wake my hopes and fears;
Of all below'd—the dearest one,—
The dearest from my earliest years.
My Mother!—Oh! on that lov'd name,
How oft does fond remembrance dwell;—
Earth ne'er can know a tenderer claim,—
A Mother's fondness who can tell?

With what a sweet seraphic smile
Her mild, her gentle spirit fled;
So much like life, that, for a while,
We scarcely could believe her dead!
Ev'n pain she looked,—her lips apart,
Appear'd as if about to move
Some fond moments to impart,—
Some parting token of her love.

Yet, Mother,—would thy mourning child,—
Would she recall thee here below?
Tho', then, she cried, with anguish wild,
Spare me oh God, this trial!—no!
In mercy thou wert but removed
From sorrows yet to sometimes woe,—
And fondly as thou wert believed,—
That very love would answer—no!

Oh, no!—dear Mother thou art blest,—
Thou slumberest with the peaceful dead;
And oft thy child, with grief oppress,
Would lay by thine her weary head.
Farewell! till in a happier sphere,
When earthly sorrows grieve no more,
They whom the grave has severed here,
Heaven's opening portals shall restore!

Married? or Not Married?
(FROM THE GERMAN.)

The Countess Von Werbe became a widow very young. Her husband was old and rich when he asked her in marriage. She rejected his addresses and wept in the arms of her father. Her father laughed at her tears. He did not conceive how it was possible to reject the count, and his daughter did conceive it. Her father reckoned the estates of the count, and she reckoned his years.

She had some time before become acquainted with Herr von Welt, who had fewer estates, and fewer years over his head, danced well, talked tenderly, and loved ardently. But the count pressing—the father severe—the Herr von Welt was poor, and the count rich. She continued to love Herr von Welt, and gave the count her hand.

The count had no children. The gout and a cough reminded him of temperance, and he retired in the arms of hymen to one of his estates. The young countess lived in solitude; the count coughed worse and remained without children. His old age and his infirmities increased every day; in two years he left the world and his estates, and the young wife was a widow.

She laid aside her white dresses and put on black. The countess was fair—the dark dress set off her complexion—mourning became her.

The count left her all his property; but old people are often fantastical! According to a singular condition of the will, if she married again, the greatest part of the property reverted to one of his relations, living at the residence.

Herr von Welt hastened to comfort the widow. He found her beautiful, and she found him as amiable as before. He talked all day long without coughing, and she listened to him all day long without yawning. He could relate a thousand little anecdotes, and the countess was curious. He spoke of the torch of love and his own feelings, and the countess felt. He described the torments of separation, and the anxieties which had martyred him, and the countess was compassionate. He lay at her feet; protestations of his passion streamed from his lips, and his tears upon her hand, and the countess loved; but she thought with tears on the conditions of the will. She was melancholy. It was already six weeks since the count had bid adieu to his gout for ever, and grief appeared now for the first time on the countenance of the countess.

'My dear friend,' said Herr von Welt to her in the morning, 'you torment yourself with doubts, and it remains in your power to put an end to them.'

'How so?' said the countess.

'You believe in the possibility,' continued he 'of my ceasing to love you, you consider the band of the feelings not strong enough to withstand time; but, my dear young friend, how easy it is for the hand of the priest to join ones together; you will then be tranquillised.'

'Have you then forgotten the will?' said she, weeping.

'My love, the question now is only about making you easy. We will be married privately. You and I, the priest—and love will hear our oath.'

'But you see, there must be a priest,' said she, hastily.

'Let me manage that,' said Herr von Welt. 'Here, in the neighbourhood, lives an old man, who is borne down by poverty, and more than half a century of years. He is as worthy as the times in which he was born, and as silent as the tomb which will soon receive him. He will carry our secret with him to the grave, and we will bury it in our bosoms.'

The countess threw herself into his arms, and entreated him to hasten. Welt did so. The conscience of the priest was tranquillised, twilight, and a distant summer-house, concealed them from the eye of suspicion, and Welt embraced with rapture—his wife.'

A year passed away; she no longer looked after him with inquietude when he rode out, and his were no longer fixed on her window when he returned; she could yawn when he related, and he sometimes felt ennui though she was sitting by him—but they lived together. The servants had observed familiarities, not warranted by friendship; yet their attachment did not appear ardent enough to account well for their being together. A year had made them feel secure, and they no longer paid that strict attention which they did at first to their conduct and conversation. People began to conjecture—to doubt—at last, to believe, and after a time to impart their sentiments to each other.

The Count von Werbe, who was to inherit the property in default of the conditions of the will being observed, was at this time out of favour with the prince, through the intrigues of his numerous creditors, and had left the residence with his wife, to take refuge in the arms of nature. He had purchased the situation of grand chamberlain to the prince—had squandered his property by giving balls and fetes, and destroying his health by dancing and dancers. His wife was formerly a lady of honor—people had formerly paid homage to her charms—she was formerly surrounded by a circle of admirers, but the boundaries of this circle grew smaller, and it was now many years since she had found the residence empty and tiresome, and the taste of the times quite spoiled.

Their taste joined that of the countess. The count attended with much interest to the suspicions that were imparted to him, and hastened to the castle of the countess to pay his respects to her as a relative, and to convince himself of the truth of the opinion of his neighbors, but he did not convince himself. The countess was prepared for his visit. The Herr von Welt was tender and attentive—his eyes riveted on her. The countess showed all the cordiality of friendship, and the attentions of a warm affection. The count returned home sorrowful.

'Dear Augusta,' said the count, as he entered the chamber of his wife, 'our neighbors are not prudent. It is only necessary to see them both to give no credit to the tale they have amused us with. I was there hours and he had not courage to come within three steps of her.'

'But that proves for us,' cried the countess; 'he would have sat at one end of the room and she at the other.'

'Not so, my love,' said the count; 'respect seemed to keep him at a distance.

Their eyes sought each other—her countenance seemed to complain of my presence. Then the interest with which they spoke to each other? No, my love, we see each other, we talk with each other, but believe me, on my word, they are not married.'

'But,' said the count, 'our neighbours have eyes; did you never, then, observe anything which one justly their opinion?'

'My love,' replied the count, 'you may suppose that I have observed everything very attentively. It is not my fault if our creditors are not paid.'

'Trifles often betray us,' said the countess. 'Reflect a little; did she not drop her pocket-handkerchief?'

'Her pocket-handkerchief?' said the count, and considered a little; 'no but her fan fell down.'

'And she picked it up again?' said the countess quickly.

'Truly, yes, she picked it up,' said the count, looking at her with astonishment.

'And he was there and suffered it?' said the countess.

The count looked thoughtful—she struck him playfully on the shoulder: 'Believe me, good count, our neighbours are in the right.'

'When I consider well,' said the count, it appears to me probable: she was very well dressed; her toilette was certainly a few months behind the fashion: but we are in the country, and I was astonished at her taste.'

'And he?' asked the countess.

'He held a long dissertation upon taste; he went through the whole history of fashions, from the fig-leaf of the first lady, to the last gaia dress of the grand duchess. He particularly admired the Grecian costume.'

'And was she dressed like a Greek?, said the countess, quickly.

'Oh, no,' said the count; 'she was true German—buried up to the chin.'

'They are man and wife,' said the countess throwing herself into his arms.

'But her eyes,' said the count, shaking his head.

'You are a keen observer,' said the countess. 'What proofs would you wish to have? The lover would have fallen to the ground with the fan, the husband remained quietly seated; the lover would have eyes only to admire, the husband had time for a long conversation; the lover would have been delighted to see a German woman be admired, dressed in the German fashion, and the husband praised the Greek women. My dear count, are you not aware of all that?'

The count laughed. 'Well,' said he, 'we are invited out to-morrow to our neighbour the chamberlin; the Herr von Welt and the countess will likewise be there. In a large society we fancy ourselves less remarked, and give ourselves up more to our ease; we can both observe them. You may be in the right, but her countenance, her eyes. I have had the honour, during the last fifteen years, of presenting many married men to his royal highness, and I know mankind well! Matrimony has a peculiar look, something like despair—if you are right, my knowledge of mankind is good for nothing.'

The next day all the company was assembled at the chamberlain's except the countess and Herr von Welt. The chamberlain was impatient, all eyes turned towards the road; at last a cloud of dust was observed, and then the carriage of the countess driving quickly up. She was looking out of the right window of the carriage. Welt, leaning on his arm, was looking out of the other. The lady of the grand chamberlain touched her husband and smiled; he turned round good humouredly, and said in a low voice, 'I believe you are right.' The carriage stopped, Welt sprang out, the servants assisted the countess: he stood quietly by and brushed the dust from his coat. 'They are man and wife,' said the grand chamberlain's lady softly.

'Yes, yes, I begin to doubt my knowledge of mankind,' said the count.'

The countess made excuse for being so late; Welt knit his brow in vexation. Dinner was announced; the master of the house offered his arm to the lady of the grand chamberlain. The grand chamberlain and Welt, the countess and a strange lady remained.—Welt offered his arm to the strange lady, and left the countess to the grand chamberlain. His wife looked back and smiled: the grand chamberlain nodded significantly. The society was gay. Welt sat between the countess and the strange lady. He conversed with the stranger on fashion and feeling, and left the countess to be amused by the grand chamberlain. The latter smiled, his wife looked at him good humouredly. After dinner Welt approached the countess. He talked of the influence of the body over the mind, which occasioned satiety in everything. The countess yawned. 'That is the body,' said she. Welt continued calmly talking, and the body of countess yawned again.

The grand chamberlain stole up to his lady. 'They are man and wife,' she whispered.

'It is certain,' said the grand chamberlain.

The chamberlain proposed a walk in the garden, and the company went. A narrow plank led to a fine waterfall. The grand chamberlain brought his vertigo with him from the residence; the chamberlain was too lusty to trust himself on the plank, and the ladies were timid. Welt sought to tranquillise them. He escorted them over the plank, but he offered his services last to the countess.

The grand chamberlain stood smiling on one side, and his wife stood smiling at him from the other. It was evening, and the company hastened back to the house. The countess was behind, Welt near her. He walked on thoughtfully; she followed him fatigued.

The grand chamberlain pressed the hand of his wife. The carriages were ordered; the party separated, and hastened home.

'You are a clever woman, my love,' said the grand chamberlain; 'it is certain they are man and wife.'

'Now my dear,' said the countess, 'only take the pains to get certain proofs.'

'Leave me alone,' said the count. 'The thing is clear, and when that is the case, there must be proofs.' Accordingly he went round the country to obtain more information; but he wanted proof, and could only procure conjectures. People had heard this, and seen that; one referred to another: and when he wanted proofs, the one had said nothing, and the other had heard nothing. He came back sorrowful. 'My dear,' said he, 'I return just as rich in conjectures, and as poor in proofs.'

'Indeed!' said the countess. 'Can the people yet doubt that they are married?'

'Alas! no,' said the count, 'but no one can prove it. However, I will try what I can do; the day after to-morrow Herr von Welt has business in the residence: I will send immediately to my lawyer. We must take advantage of the moment, for conjectures lead to nothing.'

The lawyer was called; they were shut up together, and on the second day he drove to the chateau of the countess.

'All alone?' said the grand chamberlain, as he entered the room with an appearance of surprise.

'Herr von Welt is in town,' said the countess; 'he will be sorry that he was not at home when he finds that you have been here.'

The grand chamberlain took a seat near her; he admired the arrangement of the house, and some pictures which were in the room.

'My husband was a connoisseur,' said the countess. 'The collection of paintings he has made proves his taste.'

'Ah! his taste proves other things still more,' said the count, smiling; and he kissed her hand. 'But he was an extraordinary man; he had caprices, which he showed even to the last; his will proves that.'

The countess looked at him surprised.—The grand chamberlain appeared not to observe it, and continued, 'So young as you are, to remain a widow can only be the caprice of an old jealous husband, who wishes to torment you after his death. The poor man forgot that the heart is very susceptible at your age.'

The countess cast down her eyes and blushed.

'Herr von Welt is an old acquaintance, at least I think so,' said the grand chamberlain.

'I have known him above four years,' said the countess embarrassed.

'He was remarked at court for his talents and affability,' continued the grand chamberlain, smiling and his smile was expressive; 'but the last year he has been quite lost to the court and to the world. How is it possible for him not to forget the caprices of an old man who is dead?'

The countess was evidently embarrassed.

'Why were you not sincere with me?' said he, softly, and took her hand. 'Your secret is known in the neighbourhood, why would you conceal it from me?'

The countess started up terrified. 'Is it possible,' said she, and her voice faltered. 'Can the old man have—Oh, count! what do you know—what is known?'

'Do you think,' said the count, 'that I watch my advantage so servilely?' and his tone was tender and sincere. 'I will see and hear nothing. Enjoy in peace what you have dearly enough bought, by a sacrifice of two years. But, dear countess, I have children, who may hereafter complain of my pliability and indulgence. I must therefore do something to fulfil the duty of a father. Another in my place would here require—he would lay before you proofs on which to ground his claims, but I spare your heart, and respect your secret. The friend is silent—it is the father only entreats.'

'Alas!' cried the countess, and tears streamed from her eyes, 'what do you require of me?'

The grand chamberlain drew a paper out of his pocket. 'You know,' he continued calmly, 'my property is greatly embarrassed. Your husband left you large estates and a great fortune; I am silent on his will, of which I make no use; but this would which I give to my interest must not continue bleeding in my children. Sign, therefore, this writing, my dear friend. You undertake therein to discharge a part of my debts, which have been occasioned by my service in the state, and your secret will ever remain concealed.'

He fetched a pen. The countess in the meantime recovered her presence of mind.

'Allow me,' said she, more tranquilly, 'to request that you will present me the proofs on which you ground your suspicions?'

'Why so?' said he smiling, 'the government will, perhaps, soon communicate some to you.'

'The government?' said the countess, terrified.

'You know,' continued he, 'the steady course of justice: you will be cited. It is certainly only a form, but still unpleasant.—You must appear and take your oath.'

'Oh heavens!' cried the countess, and her voice faltered again.

'You take your oath,' said the grand chamberlain, 'and remain in possession of your property.'

The countess seized the pen hastily. 'Your children shall lose nothing,' said she, and signed. The chamberlain kissed the hand which returned from the paper, and went gaily to the carriage.

Herr von Welt returned the next day. 'We are betrayed,' said the countess, and threw herself weeping into his arms.

'Betrayed?' said he astonished.

'The old priest must have chattered,' said the countess.

'Indeed,' said Welt, 'he has not spoken these nine months, for he is dead.'

The countess looked confounded. She related to him the visit of the grand chamberlain, his behaviour, and her signature.

'That is a deception,' cried Welt, 'he has taken you by surprise; but he shall not long enjoy his triumph.' He hastened out of the room, ordered his horse, and rode to the grand chamberlain. The count came to meet him on the steps.

'I have a word to say to you, count,' said Welt; 'for I should wish it to be in private.'

'A word also with you, for it is time to sit down to dinner, and you must be our guest,' said the grand chamberlain, affably, and led him into the room.

'Count,' said Welt, 'you expressed a suspicion yesterday to the countess, in which I am concerned.

'Quite right,' replied the count: 'people told me of these conjectures, and I repeated them to the countess.'

'Count,' said Welt, 'by what can you prove your conjectures?'

'We will talk about it after dinner,' said the grand chamberlain; 'it is already on the table. Our conversing longer may occasion surprise, and you do not of course, wish that we should furnish the people with more materials for conjectures?'

Welt bowed embarrassed. 'After dinner' then,' said he, and his tone was somewhat milder. The grand chamberlain opened the door of the dining-room door, and introduced him to his wife.

Two sons of the count were at the table with them. The youngest, the mother's darling, sat next her, and amused himself by getting under the table to pinch his father's leg. The count drew up his feet several times, making a wry face; but the strength of the darling seemed to increase, for he clung like a crab to the calf. The grand chamberlain at last kicked him from him with an exclamation, and the darling fell screaming at his mother's feet.

'The child grows unbearable,' cried the grand chamberlain as he rubbed the calf of his leg, which was smarting with pain; and the mother wiped the tears from the cheeks of the little one. 'Poor child!' said she, 'has he hurt you?'

'Go on spoiling him,' said the count; 'and he will one day give your heart as much pain as he has done my calf.'

'Only do not torment him,' said the mother stroking his cheeks, 'he must be allowed to grow like a tree in the field. It was so that Jean Jacques wished boys to be educated.'

'But he is to be a gentleman of the chamber,' said the father, 'and you will at last make a Jean Jacques of the boy. He will then be good for nothing at most but to be a stable-boy.'

'When the children are grown up,' said she, coolly, 'you may present them at court; that you may understand, but do not interfere in their education. You do not wish the tender plants to wither before their time.'

The grand chamberlain was silent, and looked vexed; the countess expatiated on the virtues of her children, and the excellent principles of education.

The storm subsided by degrees, and they rose from the table. Welt impatiently reminded the count of his promise, who conducted him into his room.

'Herr von Welt,' said the grand chamberlain, 'as he begged him to be seated, 'am I married?'

Herr von Welt looked at him with astonishment.

'I do not know what this question means, count?'

'You were not a witness at our marriage; you did not accompany us to the altar; may I be allowed to ask by what means you know we are married?'

'I think you must be joking,' said Welt; 'how I know?—people have told me so.'

'You consider that as a proof, then?' said the grand chamberlain, quickly.

'You embarrass me,' said Welt; 'I knew it before I had the honour of seeing you, and my eyes

THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1870.

Fractional Paper Currency.

A large number of the business men and others, of Montreal, with Mayor Workman at their head, have petitioned the Governor General in Council and both Houses of Parliament not to issue the proposed shin plasters. They point with alarm at the evil effects such a currency has been attended with in the United States, and pray that the scheme may not be adopted.

On Monday last a public meeting of the business men of Port Hope was held in the Town Hall, at which a resolution was passed condemning the intended course of the Finance Minister. Petitions embracing the sentiment of the resolution were to be forwarded to the Government and Legislature. It is very striking that just as the Americans are about establishing specie payments, after a period of 9 years of suspense, and now when their silver is going fast back again, that we should begin the miserable system which they are so heartily sick of. If Sir Francis Hincks in attempting to remove one evil thereby causes us to endure a ten-fold worse one, we trust there is enough of intelligence and patriotism in the Legislature to frustrate his foolish and impolitic scheme.

Let every city, town, village and township in the Province get up petitions against these hated shin plasters. Better far have the silver with all its annoyances than miserable "promises to pay." If our model Finance Minister were desirous of pleasing the people he would not insist so pertinaciously on this currency question against their wishes. But since he has gone to the West Indies he has lost all interest in the people, and he comes back and, a la Metcalfe, he scorns to consult their wishes, so that he may carry out his own. Who would have thought the Francis Hincks of 1863 would have turned out the Francis Hincks of 1870. The meek man of the Examiner transformed into the autocrat of Finance Minister. There must be something singular in the effects of the tropics upon those going there to reside. They are sure to return, if return they do, with arrogant, overbearing notions, utterly unsuited to a temperate zone.

The English Education Bill.

There is, perhaps, no country on the face of the globe so far and so long in advance in the arts and sciences, literature, commerce, civil and religious liberty, and general civilization, which is so far behind in the matter of the education of the masses, as England. Hitherto the only progress made by the government of the country, in this most important work, has been to assist the denominations by annual grants in the education of their children, and after a trial of some 40 years the government are waking up to the fact that England is far, far behind in the great work of education. Twelve years ago, by an officially compiled diagram, showing the estimated per centage of children between 7 and 14 years of age attending school in 17 countries, England stood but the tenth upon the list, the per centage being only 45. From a discussion on the state of national education, in the House of Commons in 1858, many striking facts were stated and commented upon, proving that the work of education was far behind.

Sir John Pakington, who introduced the discussion, dwelt upon facts given in evidence, showing the profound ignorance yet existing in that favoured land. "The Chaplain of the gaol at Preston, Lancashire," he says "reported that 40 per cent of the inmates of that place, not all criminals, were ignorant of the name of the world's Redeemer, and from 60 to 70 per cent did not know the name of England's present sovereign."

The Government scheme insisted that where a shilling was given from the public purse two shillings had to be subscribed by voluntary agency. While the schools receiving the government aid reported only 570,000 children attending them, 2,000,000 of children between 5 and 15 years were receiving education in the country, indicating that the national system—if such it may be called—did but a small proportion of the work of education.

In the present session of the Imperial Parliament, a Bill has been introduced by the Government, which has provoked considerable discussion.

One chief difficulty in introducing a Government system in England is the religious element, some thinking that without religion the schools would never answer the end intended, while others insist that in a national system, in such a country as England, a purely secular education was all that Government should or had a right to establish.

From the few notices of the present scheme which we have seen, we observe that both the religious and compulsory elements will form part of the new Bill. In the discussion referred to above, Lord John Russell and others spoke in strong terms against anything like compulsion being used in the matter of education.—Now, it appears that in providing means for the education of all the youth, compulsory measures will be used to make attendance at school general.

We shall watch with interest the developments of the present measure, and sincerely trust that under the guidance of Mr. Gladstone, a truly good and useful system of national education will be inaugurated in the Mother country.

Several sheds in town have fallen through with the weight of snow, after the late snow fall. We have heard of but one accident, of the boy McKelvy, mentioned in another place.

It is said that there was a counterfeit Bishop at Rome, at the great council. He was, however, a correspondent of a French paper. He was sent away quietly.

IRISH LAND BILL.—The popularity of Mr. Gladstone's Bill for the settlement of the Irish Land question, may be judged from the fact that it passed a second reading by 442 to 11.

LONDON SOCIETY for March is received from Messrs. Copp and Clark, Toronto.—This very popular periodical can also be obtained at either Maunies or Kidd's Book Stores, without sending so far.

We would remind our readers of the postponed Concert of Mr. Rackett, which takes place to-morrow evening in the Music Hall. The programme is a good one, and Mr. Rackett deserves a good house.

The Manufacturer and Builder is the title of an excellent periodical published in London, Ont. It contains a great deal of information for builders and those engaged in manufactories. The articles are well written, and the price is low.

PERSONAL.—We learn that Mr. A Smith, so long and so well known as the Agent of the Toronto Bank, has resigned his position, to undertake some more congenial business, and let us hope that he may succeed to his highest wishes.

SPRING SHOW.—The Horse Show of the East and West Ridings united, will be held at Peterboro, on the 26th of April, this year. The prizes offered are, for thorough bred horses $30 and $10 respectively; and for horses for general purposes $30 and $10.

Three men have been arrested in Toronto, charged with getting old postage stamps, cleaning them, and then selling them, to be used again. How they got these old stamps in such quantities is a query few can answer. How or where did they pick up the old letters off which to get the stamps? Guess the affair is a hoax, —they got them some other way.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We regret to have to chronicle the death of Patrick McKelvey, a young boy, and son of Mr. McKelvey, caused by the falling of a shed on him on Thursday night. It appears that the lad went out about ten at night, to get wood for the morning, while chopping it in the shed, the weight of snow on it, brought it down on him, and killed him.

INFANTICIDE.—In Toronto there have been two cases found out last week; how many more no one knows. One of them took place at the Rossin House; the other must have taken place some days past, as the body was found in the snow in one of the back streets. If the mothers are found out, they will receive punishment; the seducers get scot free. This should not be so.

We are happy to see that the Fergus News Recorder out again, after being burnt out about two weeks since. It comes out in an improved form, and we wish its proprietors the success which their enterprise and spirit entitle them to. It is no small feat after being burnt out, in a fortnight to have the paper going again. We may state that the Messrs. Craig are from this town and are well known in both printing offices.

The Northern Light is favorable to princes dancing, and says it is all cant for religious papers to be howling over the balls given to Prince Arthur. The Northern Light prefers dancing to public dinners, where men indulge in the wine cup; of the two evils one may be the least, but neither can be good. If a ball is the best way of entertaining the Prince, they should be got up by private committees, at the expense of those who patronise them, but surely not at the expense of the Dominion, by which all classes are forced to pay to that which they condemn. In reference to dinners, the Northern Light says:—

"Prince Arthur is too young for such solemn (?) entertainments, far better for him to enjoy in the innocent amusement of the dance, the society of the pure and virtuous girls of Canada, he will learn much from them, he will find them as lady-like, as gentle and true to their sex as their English sisters, yet free from that hauteur and false pride which is apt to characterise the daughters of the Mother Country.—Let our Prince then, God bless him, enjoy the festivities natural to youth. He will learn more of the manners and customs of our people by mixing thus freely with us than he would if made, merely the guest of formal state dinners where over bad wine, he would hear only worse speeches.

Canada Land Emigration Co.

The Annual Meeting of the Canadian Land and Emigration Company was held at the London Tavern, Bishop's-gate street, London, England, on Thursday, March 3, Mr. Kennaway in the chair.

The report stated that the Board had paid off the sum of £905, bearing interest at 6 per cent, being money paid in anticipation of calls; and that notwithstanding the heavy outlay incurred upon roads and other improvements, the Directors after a careful consideration of the prospects of the Company's income and expenditure for the next few years, had determined to recommend a payment of 2/6 per share free of income tax.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the Report, congratulated the meeting upon the improved and improving position of the Company. After referring to certain business arrangements, he stated that the Board were endeavoring to direct a stream of emigration to the Township of Harcourt where they were spending a considerable sum of money in laying out and improving the roads, as well as in establishing a Grist mill. After some discussion on matters of detail, the report was adopted and the return of 2/6 per share agreed to.

The retiring Directors having been unanimously re-elected, a committee of five gentlemen was appointed to confer with the Board as to certain modifications in the articles of association, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The following is the presentment of the Grand Jury:—

The Grand Jury for the County of Peterborough at the Court of Assize, held at Peterboro,' on the 21st of March, 1870, beg to present—

"That they receive with pleasure your Lordship's intimation of the gratifying fact that there is not a single case in the docket requiring their investigation, believing that this immunity arises, not only from the action of the law alluded to by your Lordship, but also from an advance in morality, and confidence in the impartial justice with which the law is administered, making punishment an almost follower of crime.

"The Grand Jury fully concur in your Lordship's remark on the retention of a system which lays upon them duties, now rendered unnecessary by the appointment of Crown Attorneys and the general intelligence of the magistracy, and they would rejoice to see it done away, believing that the liberty of the subject would in no way be infringed on, while a cumbrous and expensive process would be avoided.

"The Grand Jury paid a visit to the goal and found that those portions which were occupied, and which alone they inspected, in a state of perfect cleanliness. The corridors and cells were well heated and ventilated, and the prisoners well cared for. They regretted, however, that no employment, useful or otherwise, is provided. A sentence to hard labor would mean ample confinement; and believing idleness to be both unhealthy and demoralising, the Grand Jury wished that, for the state of the prisoners themselves, some plan might be devised to provide them with occupation.

"The number of prisoners is small, there being only four cases of actual crime and one of habitual drunkenness. There are however four other inmates of the goal, who have been placed there, owing to the want of any more appropriate refuge. Two of these (both women) it is feared are hopelessly insane. The others, one an intelligent looking and well educated young man, whose mental disease probably arises from bad health; the other a young lad of rather weak intellect, might, the Grand Jury cannot help thinking, if placed under proper treatment in an Asylum, be restored to health and liberty. As at present situated, their surroundings are not conducive to developing a healthy action of the mind, and until that is restored, it would not be prudent to discharge them.

"The Grand Jury were much gratified to learn that a long felt want, in some provision for the religious instruction of the prisoners, has been supplied by the Young Men's Christian Association of Peterboro', whose members are most regular in their attendance at the goal, and zealous in their efforts to be of use to the inmates.

A. H. CAMPBELL,
Foreman."

The Court closed its sittings on Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock.

MEXICO—A heavy battle is reported to have taken place between Potosi revolutionists and the Government troops. At first the former were successful, but afterwards beaten and compelled to flee before a bayonet charge of the troops. 30 insurgents were killed, and 1,000 taken prisoners. The revolutionary officers, who left the State of Mexico during the last few weeks, have been most captured and killed.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Advices from Japan state that at Yokoharma, the Oneida disaster agitated the community during an entire month. Capt. Eyre was allowed to take passage in the Bombay, notwithstanding the repeated requests and a final demand of Delong, the American Minister, upon the British authorities for his arrest and criminal trial. The sentence of the Court suspends Capt Eyre for six months. The Americans are indignant, not only at the sentence, but in consequence of the intolerable English insolence to which Mr. Delong was subjected during the investigation. Capt. Roe, Chief of Staff of the U. S. steamer Delaware, had reached Yokoharma and would immediately hold a naval Court of Enquiry. The only bodies found are those of Captain Williams, and the ship's carpenter.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

DEAR SIR,—I agree with the reasons which you assign for coming to the conclusion that the North Monaghan dispute should be brought to a termination. I could, however, I think show sufficient cause to be allowed an opportunity of refuting what Mr. Collins asserted in his last, but I forbear. I care not for having the last word, as I was merely defending myself against what I believed to be false imputations, and I now feel that I have had quite enough space afforded me for that purpose. I have fairly and honestly placed the circumstances of the case before the public, and without pre-judging the verdict, am prepared to abide by it.

Permit me to remind you that on the Saturday after Mr. Tully's vindictive attack appeared, you said I could have space to reply; but on consideration, I waive the right thus offered, as such an exhibition of spleen, such a "Turkey Carpet" affair, must to all intelligent persons bring with it, its own condemnation. Indeed, Don Quixote's attack on the wind-mills was just about as rational as what it would be under the circumstances, to commence or carry on a newspaper or any other controversy with the ex Clerk of North Monaghan.

Feeling thankful for your favourable notice in the Examiner of the 16th inst.,

I am yours, etc.
Wm. WOOD.
T. Clerk.

March 19th, 1870.

From Joseph Sproule and eleven others for Statute labor to be removed on road lying between 7 and 8 in the 11th concession, as the road is considerably travelled and is in a bad state of repair,—granted;

From John Dobbin and four others, that Thomas Wilson would be appointed Path Master for the present year for the road division in which he resides,—granted;

From Arthur May and twenty others, that some assistance should be given to Archibald Mooney to enable him to remove to the newly settled township of Cardiff, in this county, as he is himself unable to defray the expenses.

COMMITTEE REPORT.

"We, the committee appointed to make enquiry respecting gravel for the different road divisions of the township, beg leave to report that we have done so, and have ascertained that it can be procured on the property of John McIntosh, John Hurston, and John Tully, and on the quarter road near Mr. Foster's, on concession line, also east of Mr. Chamberlain's near the town of Peterboro, as well as on the concession line north of Chas. Brealy's towards Peterboro." Respectfully submitted.

(Signed) ROBERT LAING.
GEO. BIRNEY.

The inspector of taverns gave in his report, that he had visited the tavern of W. S. Scott and found that the accommodations were in accordance with the By-laws of the municipality.

BY-LAWS.

A By-law limiting the number of taverns and charging $20 for a certificate, was read a second and third time;

By-laws appointing overseers of Highways, pound keepers and fence viewers, were finally passed.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Mr. Birney, seconded by Mr. Robson, that deductions to the amount of $147.42 on collector's roll for 1869, be allowed to the collector, as he has sworn that it cannot be collected,—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dobson seconded by Mr. Birney,—That councillor Laing be appointed to ascertain from Mr. Dobbin if he is disposed to sell the gravel pit on his farm, and if so on what terms, and report at next meeting of council,—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Laing, seconded by Mr. Dobson, that the clerk be authorised to write to the Cavan council urging them to comply with the request made by the Monaghan council to give an equivalent for the amount expended by them on the boundary on the 12th concession in the year 1868,—Carried.

On the motion of Mr. Birney, the council adjourned to the 9th day of May, at 10 o'clock, then to meet as a court of revision on the assessment roll.

A collision has occurred off the coast of Germany between the steamers Normandy and Mary, in which the Normandy was sunk and the captain and thirty others drowned. The Normandy, which was sunk, is one of the regular line of mail-boats running between Southampton and the Channel Islands, belonging to the London and Southwestern Railway Company. She was built at Southampton in 1863, and was of two hundred tons register, with engines of 225 horse-power. It is an extremely fortunate thing that the collision did not happen in the summer time, or the loss of life would probably have been much greater. These boats frequently carry two hundred passengers at a trip during the summer months, it being the favourite line for tourists visiting the Channel Islands. The Normandy was very elegantly fitted up, and has often been alluded to as more like a yacht than a passenger steamer. The Mary is a much larger vessel, being of 614 tons register, and about 900 carrying capacity. She was built in Dundee in 1867, and is owned by Mr. Thomas Morton, of that town. Her engines are only about 200 horse-power, but being a twin screw, she is remarkably fast, having frequently run from London to Gothenburgh, in Sweden, in thirty-six hours, beating every other boat on the route. At the time of the accident she was bound from the Danube to London with a cargo of grain; and from the fact of the great loss of life on the Normandy it is probable the Mary went over her.

Mr. Henry Artis's store at Port Stanley was destroyed by fire on Friday last. It contained a large stock of dry goods and groceries valued at $6,000 and insured for $4,200.

Red River.

The current news here from that quarter is that Riel has armed a band of a hundred horsemen, who are scouring the country and plundering right and left. One man of the name of Sutherland, was shot by this gang of freebooters in his own barnyard. The inhabitants, it is reported, have all been deprived of their arms, and have become utterly cold and dispirited, so that Riel and his friends are able to carry everything their own way. One report I give for what it is worth, as it is impossible to ascertain anything with even an approach to certainty. This much may be said in support of the truth of what I am about to say, that the reports confirm and help to explain vague statements made in letters to various papers in Canada, hinting at the arrangements now openly spoken about. It is said, then, that in assuming the office of Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. McDougall did so with the full intention of making the most of his position; that his appointments were made with this end in view; that though the agency of his advanced guard—Messrs Snow, Muir, and others—lands were bought from the Indians at a nominal price, and paid for out of the Government stores, and that the lands were taken in names of various parties, who had either no existence, or who were made use of as colorable purchasers, who could transfer their rights to the parties in the background. It is said, further, that the store kept by a man named Hall was really the property of Dr. Schultz and Mr. Snow, and that there several of these land transactions were negotiated. Further, it is alleged that James Ross, now the Chief Justice went with Mr. Caldwell to establish their newspaper in the McDougall interest, and that it was to be supported out of the funds of the territory. It is also said by the people from Red River that the road made by Snow has been constructed where there was less necessity for any work being laid out, and that the swamp road near Lake of the Woods, where hedges and culverts, besides road-making, are absolutely necessary, has not been touched; that the whole affair was in fact a disgraceful compact, giving room for the designing to act upon the settlers, and use them for their own purposes. Such a complication of treachery, knavishness and stupidity has hardly ever been witnessed, and it is to be feared the last of it has not yet been reached.

The Nation, of the 11th says:

We understand that almost the total supply of powder in the Settlement is in the hands of President Riel. There is a small quantity at the Stone Fort, but badly damaged.

The Americans propose celebrating Washington's birthday, the 22nd inst., by a grand ball and supper at the engine room. The room will tastefully decorated, and a good time may be expected.

During the last week, Dr. Cowan, Chief Factor of the Hudson bay Company, has been confined as a prisoner, and a guard stationed about the residence of Governor McTavish, permitting neither admittance or egress. The other officials of the Company were only allowed the liberty of the Fort. All we believe, were released last evening.

The Inconsistencies of the Human Mind.

The Hindoo who could lend Cambridge in mathematics will bow down in humble adoration before a hideous wooden image.

The Romanist, who is an enlightened gentleman in all other things, will believe that if he repeats the same form of words 50 times daily, for a certain number of days, at the Pope's bidding, all his own sins and any other man's dead or alive, will be remitted by the said Pope.

The British people, famed for civilisation and independence, cannot call their souls their own in the presence of an aristocracy whose chief business and pleasure in life is to course foxes and hares to death.

Canadians, from whom better things might be expected, set up to rule over them some man who are a bye-word for intemperance or dishonesty, and who do not hesitate to appoint to office others like themselves.

The nations generally will license the liquor traffic, which is the natural and inveterate enemy of morality, religion, order and prosperity, and allow liquor-sellers to fatten on the life-blood of the community, under the pretence that their business is for the public good.

When the people are themselves temperate, enlightened, and honest, they will no longer be hoodwinked or tyrannised over by any of these shams.

Toronto Drill Shed Destroyed

The roof of the Toronto Drill Shed fell in on Wednesday night about 12 o'clock, leaving the building a complete wreck.—The "Queen's Own Rifles," were in the building up to ten o'clock: had the accident taken place while they were there a fearful loss of life must have been the result. The Leader says:—

Every span except one at the northern end of the shed was snapped like as many pipe stems, and the large timbers of the roof were shivered into splinters. The Armouries, however, on each side of the main building, remain comparatively uninjured, immense slices of the roof having shot over them. The shed, it must be confessed, presents a ruined appearance, but all should rejoice that no lives were lost; and that no damage was done by fire, although a fire was feared from a stove in one of the armouries, on an examination being made, however, by Capt. Northy, Sergeant McNaught, drill instructor of the military school, and Patrol Sergeant Williams, of the police force, and others, it was learned that there was no danger of a fire occurring.

The building was erected several years ago at a great expense—the city contributing $4,000 towards the cost of its construction, and the government providing the balance. It is very questionable whether the authorities will rebuild the shed.

The "City of Boston."

On Friday night last the Canal squadron, consisting of seven vessels, left Lisbon for Fayal and the neighbourhood, with instructions to keep a good look-out for vessels in distress, and more particular for the missing steamer City of Boston, of which no intelligence has reached Liverpool up to Saturday night. The squadron will not take one direct course, but will be so scattered as to enable the ships to cover a wide space, and thus place them in a position to intercept and interrogate any homeward-bound vessels likely to have passed over the course which the City of Boston would be likely to take or has taken. The tenderness of the squadron will be at Fayal, and with the courses which no doubt the homeward bound Americans and Canadian steamers have been instructed to make, there can always but few days before some definite tidings of the missing steamer will be reported. We understand, too, that the Channel squadron has another object in view, namely, the relief of vessels which have been disabled by the long-continued easterly winds to dodge about, awaiting a change of wind and weather. It is but to probable that the crews of the greater number of these vessels, said to be about 500 sail, are entirely out the most scanty allowance. The City of Boston, when she left New York, had three months' provisions on board for ship's use, and among her cargo were the following breadstuffs and provisions:—250 tons of beef, 200 barrels of flour, 80,000 pounds of flour, 100,000 pounds of bacon, and 10,000 pounds of wheat. She was also fitted up with condensers capable of supplying water to any extent.

The Morgan Case.

We suppose almost every person has heard of the story of William Morgan, who some forty-three years ago, was kidnapped from his home in Batavia, New York State, for making, or threatening to make an exposure of the secrets of the Masonic order. A writer in a recent number of Putnam's Monthly takes up the question, "Was Morgan murdered?" and gives some interesting facts and speculations concerning this remarkable disappearance. His statements go to prove that Morgan was taken by his captors somewhere into the backwoods of Canada, where he afterwards died a natural death. The affair created great excitement at the time of its occurrence, and from this excitement arose a party of "Anti-Masons," which for many years exerted a powerful influence in the affairs of the United States, and,—although to a considerable less extent, of this country. The fraternity were under a cloud for a time, and hardly dared own an existence. The prejudice against them, however, gradually wore away, and now in the States, as with ourselves, organization is very large and prosperous, and numbers many of our best, most prominent, and most deservedly respected citizens. The editor of the Montreal Witness, and the amiable, but somewhat obstinate prelate who presides at the Ecumenical Council, are about the last remnants of the Anti-Masonic party.

GRANT'S GOVERNMENT.—The Philadelphia Press speaks as follows, summarising one year of President Grant's administration:—"The completion of the Pacific Railroad, the inception of the surveys for the inter-oceanic canal of Darien, the reduction of nearly a hundred of millions of the public debt, the introduction of honesty and economy into the handling of the public moneys, the adoption of a sound system of Indian policy, the acquisition, at a trifling outlay, of a priceless foothold in the Antilles, the restoration of an era of good feeling at home and of confidence abroad, the rapid tendency toward specie payments, the attainment of a par value of American bonds, the definit triumph of impartial suffrage, the near approach to universal amnesty and to a complete restoration to the Union of all our wayward sisters—such are the imperishable trophies of one year of the government of Ulysses S. Grant. They may safely challenge comparison with a similar period, not only of any of his predecessors, but of any constitutional ruler whom the world has ever seen."

MILITARY FOR THE STATES OF TENNESSEE TO NORTH CAROLINA.—Fifteen hundred troops have been officially requested by Governor Holden for immediate service in North Carolina. It is extremely unfortunate that this emergency should have arisen at this time when reconstruction seemed near happy completion; but the duty of the Government under the circumstances is plain. The provocation in both States is the same, and equally gross; lawless whites have attacked the negroes, and with such bitterness and fury that the civil authorities are powerless to suppress the marauding bands of Ku-Klux or to protect the helpless and defenceless Blacks. These circumstances alone justify the act of the President in sending troops to Tennessee, and will warrant the same assertion of power in North Carolina. But further than this, the General Government is bound by every obligation to enforce the Civil Rights Act, grossly violated in these instances, and to give protection to those to whom it has already given citizenship.—N. Y. Tribune, 14.

SOME of the New York journals are waxing bloodthirsty over the Oneida disaster. Here is an amiable paragraph from the Rochester Chronicle: "If anything could make a war with England justifiable and desirable at the present time it is the wanton murder of the whole and officers of the Oneida by Capt. Eyre, who is, we hope, a near relation of that other great murderer Eyre, once governor of Jamaica. His crime in keeping on without once looking back was so horrible that everybody thought the English authorities would hasten to punish him as he deserved, but the account given in our despatches this morning shows that all his countrymen who have any power so far are eager to shield him and to snub Mr. Delong, our minister at Jeddo. We hope that our state department will take up this matter, and if no redress can otherwise be obtained from a nation of murderers, why then—it out in kind."

A RUMOUR has found its way into some of the English papers to the effect that the Queen is about to change her state of widowhood for that of wedded life. At this distance from the sources of information, it would obviously be impossible for us to test the correctness or incorrectness of the rumour. We are inclined, however, very much to doubt it. The following is the form in which the rumour appears in a new London paper—the Latest News.—

"Those of our readers who are not in the secrets of the Palace will certainly be startled to hear the cause of the frequent visits of the Prince of Augustenburg-Sunderburg to Windsor. They will, in a few weeks, be explained to Her Majesty's loyal subjects in a manner calculated to cause them the highest satisfaction, and to withdraw our gracious Queen from the privacy in which she has spent her widowhood."

OTTAWA, March 22—A good deal of speculation is indulged in as to the charge of tariff. The bankers are said now to have come to the conclusion that Sir Francis Hincks' scheme is not so liberal in their interest as was at first anticipated. There is a strong feeling in the house that the clause compelling the banks to hold one-third of their reserve fund two stringent and should be modified.

It is thought that the Commission will award the Great Western a large proportion of the cars locomotives for the Intercolonial Railway. The tenders will not be decided until to-morrow.

It is thought that Government have had some private information from the North-West.

BOATS FOR RED RIVER.—We learn that the Government has contracted for seventy boats to be completed by the month of April next. These boats are destined for the North-west territory and will be thirty three feet in length and calculated to float in very shallow water. They are to be constructed so that they can be carried from one stream to another in case the navigation is impeded by artificial or natural obstacles. A large number of these boats are being built on the Welland canal, Port Robinson, St. Catherines, and other places are also building. This looks something like business after all.

LUMBER TRADE.—We have it on very good authority that there will be a marked decrease in the quantity of lumber annually taken out of the Ottawa lumbering regions this winter owing to the great depth of snow in the woods and the ice caking, which has formed in it as a result of the alternate thaws and frosts experienced during the past two or three months. Horse cannot, consequently be employed with any degree of safety unless at the great expense of time and labour, and haulage has thus been materially restricted.—Montreal Telegraph.

FROM hundreds of reported cases where patients have increased in weight gross five to forty pounds while using FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES, no doubts remains of its powerful action on the organs of nutrition.

A Dry Goods Fight in New York.

The New york correspondent of the Boston Post, says:—

For several days a desperate fight has been going on between Stewart and Claflin, the kings of the dry goods market. Stewart started it by "marking covers" below Claflin's figures. Claflin followed suit; Stewart cut down again; then Claflin; then Stewart; then Claflin again; then Stewart once more, and as the war had gone on for a week. Dry goods men tell us they never saw the market so excited as it is by this war between the two great houses. Both parties are selling at prices resolutely reduced. Trade was so disturbed yesterday by their operations that the agents of the different mills held a meeting and decided not to sell to any one except at a certain fixed price. Stewart had been selling some lines for below the agent's prices (leading heavily, of course), and they thought to steady the market by giving notice that they would not sell to any man who attempted to undersell them. Stewart continues his "bear" operations, however, and the excitement is rising to a fever. He has demoralized the market to such an extent that it may take some weeks to restore steadiness. Several lines of seasonable goods are now going at a reduction of thirty or forty per cent of last week's prices. The fight is characterized by outsiders as threat-batting, and all the jobbers are swearing at Stewart like an army fresh from Flanders. Stewart's pugnacity and capital will carry him through, but bosses not so strong as his will probably go by the board before the storm blows over.

A NEW INDUSTRIAL JOURNAL.—THE TECHNOLOGIST is the title of a new Industrial Journal, devoted to Engineering, Manufacturing, and Building, that comes to us freighted with valuable articles. The distinguishing feature of this Journal is the fact that all the Articles and Illustrations are original—no clippings or old engravings being used. The Publishers further pledge themselves that no advertising articles (that is, no descriptive puffs of worthless inventions) shall be inserted in its columns under any circumstances whatever; and, if they fulfil this pledge, they will certainly do a grand thing for the Industrial journalism of the country, for every intelligent mechanic knows that indiscriminate puffing is the bane of our mechanical and so-called scientific periodicals.

The number before us consists of forty-four large pages, and it is printed on very superior paper, and in the best style of the typographic art. The articles, are of unusual excellence, and contain matter calculated to instruct and interest all classes. The titles of a few of the subjects discussed are—Technological Education, Tempering Steel, Trial of Steam Engines, Improvement in Distillation, Sunless and Airless Dwellings, the Measurement of Electrical Resistance, Vision and the Stereoscope, the Walks of New York Central Park, East River Bridge Caissons, the Microscope, Lessons on Drawing, Relation of Technology to Insurance, etc., etc. The yearly subscription is Two Dollars and the price of single numbers Twenty Cents, a sum that seems ridiculously small when compared with the size and character of the Journal.

THE TECHNOLOGIST is issued by the Industrial Publication Company, whose office is at 176 Broadway, New York. Every mechanic ought to send for at least one number of this Journal. If they send for one, it will be strange if they do not send for the others.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A WORD

For every word in the following Certificate found untrue, after writing to the parties named, and to the U. S. Consul, at Rio Janeiro, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 28th, 1866,

MESSRS. RAYMUNDO O. LEITE & BRO:

GENTLEMEN:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta (a large proprietor in the Cidade de Campos) was staying at my house, he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr Tonoco, who is thought a great deal of in Campos, but the fever, instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tinoco declared that there was not the slightest hope of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. That moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; friction with the Relief twice on the Chest, back and wrists; three (of Radway's) Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one desert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed, to the astonishment of every one, who attributed to the miracles of Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen

Your very obedient servant,

JOAQUIM PINTO FALCAO, Merchant.

Dr. Radway's Remedies are sold by Druggists and Country Merchants.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1868.

CORNS, CALLOSITIES, OR CALLUS need no description: they are produced by pressure or friction of some hard substances on certain parts, as from boots, shoes, pressure of the toes up each other, pressure of scissors, or other tools on the fingers or hand, and on the knees by much kneeling. There are three kinds of corns, viz: the laminated corn, in which the hardened epidermis exists in layers; the fibrous corn, in which fibers appear to pass through it, giving rise to the idea that the corn has a core and root, but which are really elongated papillæ; and the soft corn, which is very painful and troublesome and sometimes occasions ulcers. For each and all of these temper-trying afflictions, Dr J. Brigg's Curative will be found a most certain and efficacious remedy. Sold by Druggists and country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co, Proprietors, Office 208 Broadway, N. Y, and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

DYSPEPSIA is one of the most frequent diseases with which the physician meets; it is found in every country, at every season of the year, and among all classes of society, and is more generaly a malady of middle age, young persons being, as a rule, exempt from it. It usually commences gradually, and in a very insidious manner, producing, more or less, distress, and in many instances rendering life a burden. Dr. J Briggs' Alleviator, used according to directions for Dyspepsia, has been proved to be a very speedy remedy, and those who use it will not be disappointed in the result. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Economy in Health and Physic is as important as in business, and we know of no cheaper, better, or surer means of preserving health and divesting the cloak of their infirmities, than through the medium of Dr. Radway's famous medicines. We present a case in point

CASE 1,326.—Marcus W. Mount, long a sufferer from liver complaints, has paid, he says, at different times, about $250 to physicians, and he thinks as much more for medicines. He intended to try Radway's Pills, with occasional doses of the Renovating Resolvent to assist in removing it from his system the effects of the mercurial treatment to which he has been subject. Soon feels the benefit of the change. Takes, in all, five boxes of the Pills and three bottles of the Resolvent, and at the end of the course is "as well as he ever was in life."

Glances at the account current below:

Bills for medical attendance, $250; outlay for prescriptions, $200 (so much money thrown away).....	$500 00
Five boxes Rad way's Pills, $1 25; three bottles Resolvent, at $1 each, $3 —(disease removed).....	4 25
Balance in favor of the Regulating Pills and Resolvent.....	$495 75

PILLS are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins, and lower part of the abdomen; causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs; at times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach &c. A disagreeable itching is a common attendant. At certain times a stinging or burning pain is experienced, being often very severe; and after the fecal discharge, there is more or less bearing down or tenesmus. For this painful disease, Dr. Briggs' unrivalled Pile Remedy is a specific cure; used according to directions, the greatest sufferer will feel the benefit of its virtues. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers, Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West Toronto.

IN THE FIRST OR INCIPIENT STAGES OF consumption there will be found some difficulty in breathing, perhaps amounting to a shortness of breath, more especially on exercising. Cough is a very early symptom; it may be slight and hacking at first, but gradually becomes more and more distressing and frequent; at first it is dry, but is soon attended with an expectoration of a thin or frothy character, or resembling mucus. Very frequent the expectoration will be streaked with blood, and sometimes is the first observable symptom of consumption will be more or less profuse bleedings from the lungs. To those singled out as victims to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy, sure in its result to bring back health to the poor weakened frame, and joy to the hearts of the friends Dr. J. Briggs' Rejovator, the Great Throat and Lung Healer. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs' & co., Proprietors 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to the climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DEBILITATION OF THE HEART is symptomative of some other disease, but is often so severe as to require a distinct consideration. There is a rapid beating or fluttering motion of the heart, which may be felt very plainly when the hand is placed upon the chest, over this organ. Various other symptoms may accompany it, as a shortness of respiration, a sensation in the neighborhood of the heart, a fainting or constriction across the chest, inability to lie down, pale countenance, swollen feet, great debility, irregular or intermittent pulse, much distress on slight exertions, &c. The palpitation of the heart, to a rapid, violent, confused and irregular action, shaking the whole system, and producing very disagreeable sensations. Dr. J. Briggs' Alleviator, used according to directions, gives immediate relief from all the above-named symptoms, and restores the organs to healthy action. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St, West, Toronto,

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be regretted that true deserving worth is cordially rewarded and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence, through its channels millions have overflowed, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius is these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of, pestilential disease is now to a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "fatalists archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of it is great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and readily that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informed us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

THE SARSAPARILLA DECOCTS OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. Dr. J. Briggs' Unrivalled Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction. All who have tried it do not hesitate to recommend it in the highest terms. MAY.

Hail! smiling Spirit of Spring!
Who comes our hearts to glad
In May's rejoicing month,
With flowers and verdure clad.
Like fairy good, in pantomime,
Thou chasest care away;
And winter sad, like spirit bad,
Is forced to own thy sway.

Thy temples are the flowers
Which blossom in thy light;
And countless are thy followers
Who glory at the sight.
Thy harbinger—the Cuckoo—
Is heard both far and near
At break of day, at ev'ning grey,
To sing thy welcome here.

O'er hill and valley, wood and field,
Thy handiwork is seen;
The whole, so lately brown and dead,
Is clothed in brilliant green.
With voices loud we'll raise thee up,
And songs of triumph sing,
And ev'ry year we'll greet thee here,
Bright Spirit of the Spring!

Kalsomining Parlor Walls.

It is popular error to believe that the materials for kalsomining are very expensive and also that few men have sufficient skill to apply the liquid even after it has been propely prepared. For this reason, people are frequently deceived into paying exorbitant prices for this kind of work.

The materials employed are good clear glue, Paris white, and water. Paris white is sold for two to three cents per pound. Itinerant kalsominers frequently charge twenty-five cents per pound, as they use nothing but the genuine silver polish, which is scarce, and very expensive.

In case the wall of a large room, say sixteen by twenty feet square, is to be kalsomined with two coats, it will require about one fourth of a pound of light-coloured glue and five or six pounds of Paris white. Soak the glue over night in a tin vessel containing about a quart of warm water. If the kalsomine is to be applied the next day, add a pint more of clean water to the glue, and set the tin vessel containing the glue into a kettle of boiling water over the fire, and continue to stir the glue until it is well dissolved and quite thin. If the glue-pail be placed in kettle of boiling water the glue will not be scorched. Then, after putting the Paris white into a large water-pail, pour on hot water, and stir it until the liquid appears like thick milk. Now mingle the glue-liquid with the whiting, stir it thoroughly, and apply it to the wall with a whitewash brush, or with a large paint-brush. It is of little consequence what kind of an instrument is employed in laying on the kalsomine, provided the liquid is spread smoothly. Expensive brushes, made expressly for kalsomining, may be obtained at brush factories, and at some drug and hardware stores. But a good whitewash-brush having long and thick hair, will do very well. In case the liquid is so thick that it will not flow from the brush so as to make smooth work, add a little more hot water. When applying the kalsomine, stir it frequently. Dip the brush often, and only so deep in the liquid as to take as much as the hair will retain without letting large drops fall to the floor. If too much glue be added, the kalsomine can not be laid on smoothly, and will be liable to crack. The aim should be to apply a thin layer of sizing that can not be brushed off with a broom or dry cloth. A thin coat will not crack.

The Amount of Arsenic, Mercury, and Antimony Produced Yearly.

A few interesting facts in regard to the production of some of the less extensively used metals have come to light at the Paris Exposition of 1867. The yearly production of arsenic was 5,200 centner-weight, of which England produced 2,230. Austria 250, Prussia 2,450, and Saxony 280. The yearly production of mercury was 64,000 centners, of which California produced 26,000, Spain 22,000, Peru 3,200, Germany and France 2,600, Italy 592. The yearly production of Antimony was 83,400 centners, of which 4,000 were obtained from England, 1,600 from Austria, 1,100 from France, 1,300 from Northern Germany, 200 from Italy, and 170 from Spain. The centner is equal to 110 pounds, nearly. A singular point in the above statemnn is the large amount of arsenic that is consumed. We all know that mercury is very largely used in mining operations, and also for barometers, thermometers, voltaic batteries, and paints: and we could easily account for any moderate consumption of antimony, from the facts that it enters largely into the composition of all type metal; but arsenic is popularly supposed to be a comparatively scarce metal, best known, in the form of white arsenic, as a deadly poison. It is, however, very extensively used in the arts, as it forms a prominent constituent of many of the finer kinds of paint, and is also used extensively by glass-makers.

Coloured Inks.

Green.—Two parts acetate of copper, one part carbonate of pottash, and eight parts water. Boil till half is evaporated, and filter.

Blue.—Three parts Prussian blue, one part oxalic acid, and thirty parts of water. When dissolved, add one part of gum-arabic.

Yellow.—One part fine orpiment, well rubbed up with four parts thick gum water.

Red.—With the aid of a gentle heat dissolve four grains of carmine in one ounce of aqua ammonia, and add six grains of gum-arabic.

Gold.—Rub gold-leaf, such as is used by bookbinders, with honey, till it forms a uniform mixture. When the honey has been washed out with water, the gold powder will settle at the bottom, and must be mixed with gum-water in sufficient quantity.

Silver.—Silver-leaf treated in precisely the same manner gives a silver ink. Both these inks may, when dry, be polished with ivory.

Black.—Three ounces crushed gall-nuts, two ounces crystallized sulphate of iron, two ounces gum-arabic, and twenty-four ounces water.

White.—Fine French zinc-white, or white-lead, rubbed up with gum-water to the proper consistancy.

Lately, several solutions of the aniline colors have been manufactured for the trade, and are sold as colored inks, but none of them can compete in brightness of color with the above old-fashioned and long-tried preparations.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twichings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 308 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 8 King St. West, Toronto.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R.R.R. Sold by Druggists.

Poetry.

Waiting for Father.

In the gray of the twilight and glow of the fire,
A little girl sat on the rug.
She was warming a slipper; and pussy sat nigh her,
And also her friend, Mr. Pug.
And the song in the heart of the glad little girl,
As the light of the fire played over each curl,
Was, 'Father is coming—hurrah! hurrah!
Father is coming—hurrah!'

She had spread out his soft woolen gown on the chair,
With its facings of beautiful blue;
Had picked up her playthings that lay here and there,
And fixed things as she knew.
"For the room must be tidy and pretty and bright,"
She said to herself, 'when he comes every night,
And soon he is coming—hurrah! hurrah!
Father is coming—hurrah!'

How rosy her cheeks, and how sparkling her eyes!
How dimpled her soft little hand!
While Pussy and Pug looked as solemn and wise
As if the whole scene they had planted.
But you never would think, so demure are the three
That the little maid's heart could be ringing with glee,
'Father is coming—hurrah! hurrah!
Father is coming, hurrah!'

The sunlight has vanished, and bleak is the street,
And beggars are dreading the night.
The pavement is noisy with home-spreading feet,
And only the windows are bright;
When quickly the little maid springs from the rug,
Leaving Pussy half sleeping, but followed by Pug:
Father is coming—hurrah! hurrah!
Father is coming—hurrah!

The Tory Government Catechism.

AS LATELY TAUGHT BY THEM WITH GREAT SUCCESS.

Q. What is honesty?
A. A political necessity and the last thing a Government should resort to.
Q. What are politics?
A. The grand means whereby a politician may secure a competency for himself and family.
Q. What is Independence?
A. Independence is a good position to be assumed by a skilful politician and should be regarded by the Government in power as a delicate hint to name their price.
Q. What is the duty of the members of a Cabinet?
A. The duty of the members of a Cabinet, is to first look after No. 1, then provide for his family, his relations and his political friends.
Q. What is a political friend?
A. A political friend is a person who does the dirty work for a Government Candidate, and should in every case be rewarded by an office.
Q. What is the public chest?
A. The public chest is the Saving's Bank for the old and faithful politician who should find in it solace and comfort, for his declining years.
Q. What is conscience?
A. Conscience is an old fashioned myth, long since exploded in the minds of sensible men.

A CURIOUS SUBSTITUTE FOR CEMETERIES.—The inventive genius of the old world seems to be at work to devise a substitute for cemeteries, by employing some process for treating the dead bodies of departed friends so as to render them excellent specimens of petrifaction. A foreign contemporary announces a discovery by which graveyards will become superfluous: "An old discovery has just been made by a man of Grenoble, by which it is calculated that cemeteries and graveyards will become superfluous. At the decease of an individual, the body is plunged into a liquid invented by the man of Grenoble, and in about five years the individual is turned into stone! The secret if the petrifaction is known only to the discoverer. He says that in a thousand years' time, if persons will only preserve their relatives and friends, they will be able to build houses with them, and thus live in residences surrounded by their ancestors."

DESILVERING. In many cases it may be useful to know a liquid which will dissolve silver without attacking copper, brass or German silver, so as to remove the silver from silvered objects, plated ware, etc. It is simply a mixture of one part of nitric acid with six parts sulphuric, heated in a water-bath to 160° Fahr., at which temperature it operates best. By this means the old silver, attached to plated ware, old daguerreotype plates, etc., may be removed and saved without any necessity for wasting acids in dissolving a large amount of useless metal.

An example of a scrupulously honest testimonial may be given. The writer says: "I have known Mr.——r for several years. I consider him eminently qualified for every post he seeks. His habits are convivial, if not regular. He possesses a fine voice. His taste in liquors is remarkable. He plays whist with singular steadiness. He knows as much about things as most men. He is frequently sober and occasionally industrious.

GILDING AND SILVERING SILK THREAD. Gold or silver leaf is rubbed on a stone like paint—honey being the best substance to moisten it—until reduced to fine powder. The silk thread is soaked or boiled in a solution of chloride of zinc, and, after being washed, it is boiled in water with which the gold or silver powder has been mixed. When washed and dried, it will be found coated with a fine layer of gold or silver, which may even be polished in the usual manner. This method has been patented in England.

Ex Nilo Fit.—A correspondent of an American paper having described the Ohio as a sickly stream, the Editor appended the remark.—

"That's so! It's confined to its bed."

Curious Facts in Regard to Sound.

The following curious observations in regard to the transmission of sound have been carefully verified by an extended series of experiments: The whistle of a locomotive is herd 3,300 yards through the air; the noise of a railroad train, 2,800 yards; the report of a musket and the bark of a dog, 1,800 yards; an orchestra or the roll of a drum, 1,500 yards; the human voice reaches to a distance of 1,000 yards; the croaking of frogs, 900 yards; the chirping of crickets, 800 yards. Distinct speaking is heard in the air from below up to a distance of 600 yards; from above, it is only understood to a range of 100 yards downwards. It has been ascertained that an echo is well reflected from the surface of smooth water only when the voice comes from an elevation.

Other similar phenomena connected with the transmission of sound have been observed, but the results disagree either from inaccuracy in the observations or from the varying nature of the circumstances affecting the number obtained. Such variations occur to an extent of ten to twenty per cent., and even more. The weather being cold and dry, or warm and wet, are the chief influencing causes. In the first case, the sound goes to a greater, and, in the second, to a lesser distance.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this celebrated medicine enjoys, as derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous, in obstinate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruptions, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or cure.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of rule-hing or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints usually find immediate relief, and, in length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other symptoms or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous system.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for enfeebling these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as has Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Dyspepsia, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Debilitated, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this pectoral remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While employed to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where this disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is borne to infants and children perfectly patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of American medicine. Its praise is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had entirely failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those woo have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HUNT'S KEPHAIR HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

Provisions in Quinte, Feb. 6th, 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was extending on me, and afterwards, I employed medicine, electricity, &c., as also many other means, from doctors and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of possibly and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.
A. F. WOOD, J. P.
Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.
Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.
For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that matchless purity and distinguee appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. It continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Poetry.

The Beverage of Hell.

Written by a young lady who once thought to be too enthusiastic in the cause of Temperance.

World! to God, that the good and wise of our great Dominion were as enthusiastic in the Heaven-born cause, as the lady who penned the following lines.—Reader, pause and reflect.—Ed.

Go feel what I have felt,
Go bear what I have borne—
Sink 'neath the blow a father dealt:
Lie withered 'neath his scorn—
Then suffer on from year to year—
Thy sole relief the scorching tear.

Go, kneel as I have knelt,
Implore, beseech and pray—
Strive mid the storm of passion dwelt
Those deeds dread scenes to stay;—
Be dashed with bitter curse aside,
Your prayers but scorn'd, your tears defied.

Go weep as I have wept,
O'er a loved father's fall—
See every promised blessing swept—
Youth's sweetness turned to gall
Life's fading flowers strewed all the way
That brought me up to woman's day.

Go see what I have seen,
Behold the strong man bowed—
With gnashing teeth—lips bathed in blood—
And cold and livid brow;
Go catch his withering glance and see
There mirrored, his soul's misery.

Go to thy mother's side
And her crush'd bosom cheer;
Thine own deep anguish hide;
Wipe from her cheek the bitter tear;
Mark her worn frame and withered brow,
The gray that streaks her dark hair now,
With fadier frame and trembling limb;
And trace the ruin back to him
Whose plighted faith, in early youth,
Promised eternal love and truth,
But who forsworn, hath yielded up
That promise to the cursed cup;
And led her down, through love and light,
And all that made her prospect bright,
And chained her there, 'mid want and strife—
Thankless thing—a drunkard's wife;
And stamp'd on childhood's brow so mild.
That withering blight, the drunkard's child!

Go feel and see and know,
All that my soul hath felt and known,
Then look upon the wine cup's glow,
See if its beauty can atone!
Think if its flavors you will try!
When all proclaim "'tis drink and die!"

Tell me I hate the bowl—
Hate is a feeble word—
I LOATHE, abhor, my very soul
With strong disgust is stirred
When'er I see, or hear, or tell,
Of the dark BEVERAGE OF HELL!

Gough at Glasgow.

I have more than once spoken to an audience of what are termed "outcasts;" and a pitiful sight it is. On one occasion I addressed eight hundred, and on another—in Glasgow—over three thousand. The city missionaries had, by their influence, induced the poor creatures to come. There were rags, and filth, and degradation, beyond description. It seemed as if the last lingering trace of human beauty had been dashed out by the hoof of debauchery, and the die of the devil had been stamped on the defaced image of God; and all of them human beings, with hearts and souls, with a love for the pure and beautiful,—men and women, yes, and children—with such human histories of want, and suffering privation and misery, as might well be traced in tears and written in blood.

On one occasion as I entered the audience room where some hundreds of this class had assembled, with the provost of the borough and a minister of town, who accompanied me, the former said, as we came: 'Mr. Gough, you have "Fire" in the house, to-night.'

I asked, "What do you mean?"

He said, "Do you see that tall woman near the platform?"

"Yes."

"Her nickname is 'Hell-fire;' she is known by no other name in the vicinity of her wretched residence. When she appears in the street, the boys cry 'Fire! Fire!' She is the most incorrigible woman in the borough. She has been brought before me scores of times and sentenced to imprisonment from four to six months.

She is ripe for mischief, and if she makes a disturbance, you will see such a row as you never saw before. The power of the woman's tongue is blasphemy is horrible."

When I rose to address the audience I expected a row, and confess to a nervous feeling of apprehension. I spoke to them as men and women, not as outcasts, or things. I told them poverty was hard to bear; but there might be comfort, light, and peace with poverty; told them I had been poor, very poor; spoke to them of my mother, and her struggles; then of her faith, and love, and hope; that there was no degradation in poverty;—only sin caused that. In proportion to wrong-doing was the degradation,—and so on. I saw a naked arm and hand lifted in the crowd, and heard a voice cry out; "That's all true."

The woman ("Fire") rose to her feet, and facing me, said: That's a true man, —you're telling the truth;" and stretching her arms to the audience, said: "The man knows what he's talking about."

When I concluded, she came on the platform, and I almost thought she might tackle me. She was a large woman, and looked like a hard hitter, and I never desired to come in contact with "strong-minded" or big-fisted women; but after looking at me a moment, she said; "Tak' a guide look at me, mon. I'm a bit of a beauty, ain't I?" Then, coming close me, "Would you gi'e a body like me the pledge?"

I answered at once, "Yes, ma'am."

A gentleman said; "She cannot keep it; she will be drunk before she goes to bed to-night; —better not give her the pledge"

I turned to her: "Madam, here is a gentleman who says you cannot keep it if you sign it.

Clenching her fist she said. "Show me mon."

I asked, "Can you keep it?"

"Can I?—if I say wull, I can."

"Then you say you will."

"I will."

"Give me your hand on that,"—And I shook hands with her. She signed it, and I said; "I know you will keep it; and before I go to America I will come and see you.

"Come and see me when you wull," she answered, "and you'll find I ha'e keepit it."

It must have been two years from that time, I was speaking there again, and after the lecture, a gentleman said to me: "I wish to introduce you to an old friend whom perhaps you have forgotten,—'Mrs. Archer, no longer "Fire."'

I was introduced, and shook hands lovingly with her daughter, who sat by her. I had noticed the woman during my speech, for she hardly took her eyes off me from the time I rose till I sat down. I went to her house, and part of what she said to me was this:—

"Ah! Mr. Gough, I'm a puir body; I dinna ken much, and what little I ha'e learned has been knocked out of me by the staffs of the policemen; for they beat me about the head good-deal, and pretty much a mess of me; but sometimes I ha'e a dream—I dream I,m drunk, and fighting, and see polees ha'e got me again; and I get out of my bed, and I go down on my knees, and I don't go back to my bed till daylight comes, and I keep saying: "God keep me—for I canna get drunk nay mair."

Her daughter said: "Aye, mom; I've heard my mither in the dead of night, on the bare floor, crying 'God keep me!' Then wull,—'Oomh to yer bed, lassie, I'll no be drunk!' and she she'll fall on, 'No me, —I canna get drunk nay mair.'"

I received a letter from the provost of the borough, dated February 1860, telling me that Mrs. Archer ("Fire") had been faithful to her promise, was keeping a small provision store or shop; had taken a little orphan boy out of the streets, and was bringing him up well; and sending me her photograph.—Gough's Autobiography.

Only a Woman's Thoughts.

BY FRANCIS D. GAGE.

And they will frighten the "Lords of Creation" so long as said woman can't vote, and they the Lords, can keep her within her proper sphere. But with all their power they cannot keep her from thinking, and in these latter days of coming liberty she dares to write her thoughts and speak them too, fearlessly. In the Daily Tribune of August 5th we find the account of a great fire in the city of Philadelphia:

"A loaded warehouse—having a front '220 feet' and extending back 125 feet, and seven stories high—except one section which was six, considered fire proof, and would have been so if stores with anything less explosive and combustible than whisky. Every portion of the warehouse was filled with whiskey. When the walls fell the whisky stored went down with the ruins, and in a few moments, a terrific explosion took place—while the flames shot up above the surrounding buildings. All that is left of this fine series of stores, is the front walls of Sec. A on Front street.

"The value of the warehouse destroyed is from $600,000, to $800,000, the total quantity of whisky upon the premises was 25,000 barrels—from four to five hundred barrels will be saved. The value of the liquors destroyed is estimated at $2,500,000."

There thank God for that fire! "Thank the Lord oh! my soul"—that twenty-four thousand barrels, if not more of that hellish poison has been consumed by burning fires without, upon the streets and under the canopy of heaven, instead of being consumed by men, and consuming them within. Tortures and terrors which, if grouped together, would move the souls of all the good and true of this nation, to see to it that no more such bonded warehouses of barrelled sin, infamy, agony, suffering, disgrace, degradation, poverty and death, should ever be found in our midst.

Twenty-four thousands barrels of whisky—well represents—twenty-four thousand drinking men—for no man can consume a barrel of whiskey and not be the worse for it! Twenty-four thousand drinking men symbolize twenty-four thousand suffering women, wives, mothers, sisters, daughters, and not less than twenty-four thousand children, conceived in sin and born in iniquity—born with depraved taste, disorganized bodies and weak moralities, to become pests in the social whirlpool of life. Who made all this poison, this fire-water which burns and destroys?

Mothers gave life to men—men raised the corn—men manufactured the whisky—men stored it in the bonded warehouse. Have women nothing to do in this matter? Had every mother as with his life and daily breed taught her own street principles of temperance—taught him to love his neighbor as himself—to do unto others as he would have others do unto him—to know and feel and act upon the great maxim that whatsoever will do wrong to my fellow beings will do wrong unto myself also—would the world be as it is now—would this thing have been? Women of my country, have we nothing to do, are we to blame for sins of omission if not of commission? Ought we not to think more, than we have done in the past?

We are asking the "right of suffrage," we shall gain it too. But will its power enable us to do all the good we desire? If we do not carry to the ballot box an earnest determination to make each vote a lever to lift humanity into higher or better things, we may be greatly disappointed. If every woman was true, earnest and thoughtful—we could soon do—what? Will some of you answer?

Paying Like a Sinner.

Several years ago, in North Carolina, where it is not customary for the tavern-keepers to charge the ministers anything for lodging and refreshments, a preacher unwittingly stopped at a tavern one evening, made himself comfortable during the night and in the morning entered the stage without offering pay for his accommodations. The landlord soon came running up to the stage and said, 'There was some one in there who had not settled his bill.' The passengers all said they had, but the preacher, who said he had understood he never charged ministers anything. 'What! you a minister of the gospel—a man of God!' cried the inn-keeper 'you came to my house last night—you sat down at the table without asked a blessing—I lit you up to your room, and you went to bed without praying to your Maker—(for I staid there until you had undressed)—you rose and washed without praying, ate your breakfast without saying grace; and, as you came to my house like a sinner, eat and drank like a sinner, you got to pay like a sinner.'

Your Children Are In Danger.

How constantly do sober, temperate people lament and bewail the sad influences surrounding the children of topers, inebriates and saloon-keepers. And there is abundant cause for lamentation on this score, but not only so, your children, dear reader, are exposed to the same danger without feeling the harrowing results of the evil which these children experience, and which often drives them to intemperance. What are you doing to counteract the evil influences which is perhaps presenting itself to your children in the most inviting manner? Unless you exercise on every side, your children may fall into the snare. Keep them sensitive to its horrors, and awake to the work of reform. Keep a temperance paper constantly coming to their address, either as individuals or as a family band, —an ever-recurring reminder and educator for the right.

The Eating Passion.

An Irish gentleman was much troubled with a wife who drank tremendously—in fact, she spent every farthing on whisky, and sold every thing she could lay her hands on to get more. The poor fellow was almost at his wits' end what to do about her, and so he went to Dr. Murphy for advice in the matter.

"Could the doctor give him nothing?"

"Is it poison you want?" said the doctor; because if it is, say so, like a man!"

"Of course it's not poison I want, but only a trifle to cure her of drinking. Can't you make me up something?"

"If I could mix up any thing to cure that disorder," said the doctor, "I should be a made man. But I tell you what—take home a gallon of whisky, and let her drink as much as she likes, and I will be round to see her (illegible)."

In the course of a week, she got accustomed, and when the husband came home drunk, the doctor and the husband carried her down into the vaults of an old church close by, and laid her down on some boards till she could come to. After she had had a good sleep, she awoke about twelve o'clock, and began calling out and asking where she was.

"Well, you are in the vaults underneath Evereteeg Abbey, ma'am," the doctor said.

"And how long have I been here?" she inquired.

"A matter of ten or twelve months," he answered.

"And I'm dead, in course?" she said.

"As a door-nail!" wound up the doctor.

"And you dead, too?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And how long have you been here?"

"Somewhere about five years," he said.

"Then we are all dead?"

"Yes."

She sat down on the floor, and thought the matter over a bit.

The doctor could not imagine what she would say next and was just trying to fancy, when she began:

"You must know the ways of this country a good deal better than me. Where can you get a drop of good whisky now, reasonable?"

That floored the doctor, and turning to the gentleman, he said,

"Squire, you had better take your wife home! If she thinks there are whisky-shops in Hades, it is of no use trying to frighten her with death. Take her home, and let her live."

He let her live; but she ruined him, and died a beggar in Galway.

Hold Your Tongue.

Don't be frightened, reader. Don't accuse me of Billingsgate or impertinence. I do not use the expression in any offensive sense; not even as harshly as I have heard Christian mothers use it towards their children. But in view of the unhappiness that is daily caused by hasty, unkind words, by bitter sarcasm, or by a continual fretting and fault-finding, I repeat, in all kindness, 'hold your tongue.' Hold it in by the power of a strong will, if you can, but you will find that it will often require more than that.—It needs constant watchfulness and prayer. You know it is an unruly member which 'no man can tame.' The harsh word will slip out sometimes, quick as thought, and you have hurt the feelings of one whom you really love.

A mere suspicion, which after all may be unfounded, if put into words and whispered to others, will injure, and perhaps alienate your best friend. If tempted to utter it, just remember that you can not recall it, nor undo the mischief it may make, and let that thought hold your tongue. Above all, avoid the meanness of saying unkind things of one who is unfortunate. If a man is down don't kick him or throw stones at him, but speak kindly to him, and try to help him up. What good does it do to repeat stories that you have heard about him, or even things which you know to be true? It not only injures him and his family, but it recoils on yourself. It makes him your enemy, and he will say hard things of you, and thus the wrong is perpetuated. 'If you cannot speak well of a person, say nothing,' is a safe rule, though not always an easy one to obey. There is another reason why we should guard this unruly member,—Wrong feelings are strengthened by giving expression to them. When you are angry with another you are apt to express your feelings in strong language, and after you have given vent to them you will hate that person more than you did before. Now just try the experiment of keeping perfectly silent, and you will be surprised to find how soon these angry feelings will die away.

Oh, how many heartaches would be spared, how many reputations saved, how many scandalous reports prevented, how many friendships contained unbroken through life, if people would only learn to hold their tongues!—Buffalo Advocate.

End There is None.

Light traverses space at the rate of a million miles a minute, yet the light from the nearest star requires ten years to reach the earth, and Herschel's telescope revealed stars two thousand three hundred times further distant. The great telescope of Lord Rosse pursues these creations of God still deeper into space, and having resolved the nebulæ of the milky way into the stars, discovered other systems of stars—beautiful diamond points, glittering through the black darkness beyond. When he beheld this amazing abyss,—when he saw these systems scattered throughout space—when he reflected upon their immense magnitude, and the countless millions of worlds that belonged to them,—it seemed to him as though the wild dream of the German poet was more than realised.—God called man in dreams into the vestibule of heaven, saying, 'Come up hither, and I will show thee the glory of my house.' And to his angels, who stood about His throne, He said, 'Take him, strip him of his robes of flesh; cleanse his affections; put a new breath into his nostrils; but touch not his human heart—the heart that fears and hopes and trembles.' A moment, and it was done, and the man stood ready for his unknown voyage. Under the guidance of a angel, with sound of flying pinions, they sped away from the battlements of heaven. Sometimes on the mighty angel's wings they fled through Saharas of darkness wilderness of death. At length, from a distance not counted, save in the arithmetic of heaven, light beaming upon them—a sleepy flame, as seen through a hazy cloud. They sped on in their terrible speed to meet the light; the light with lesser speed came to meet them. In a moment the wheeling of planets; then came long eternities of twilight; then again, on the right hand and on the left, appeared more constellations. At last the man sank down crying, 'Angel, I can go no farther; let me down in the grave and hide myself from the multitude of the universe, for end there is none.' 'End there is none?' demanded the angel. And from the glittering stars that shone around, there came a choral shout, 'End there is none!' 'End there is none?' demanded the angel again; 'and is it this that sows thy soul?' I answer 'End there is none to the existence of God!' Lo! him, of Him who make it there is no begin ning!'—Prof Mitchell.

Rings For Warm Weather.

There may be seen daily, on Chestnut street, a man clad in faultless apparel, with a great diamond upon his breast, vainly endeavoring to display the magnificent solitaire on his finger. In a German University he learned chemistry, and not even Liebig knows it better. His occupation is the mixing and the adulteration of liquors. Give him a dozen casks of dodecrified alcohol, and the day each of them will represent the name of popular wine or a popular spirit. He enters a prosperous drug store bearing a large basket upon his arm. Five pounds of limited puree are first weighed out to him. To raw liquor this imparts a degree of smoothness and clearness that gives to imitation brandy the gildedness of that which is most matured. An astringent called catechu, that around almost every mouth of a glass intoxicated, upon is cubic. A couple of ounces of bitterbalsam, next called for, are quickly conveyed to the vent peeker, and a pound of sulphate of zinc (white vitriol) is as silently placed on the bottom of the basket. The oil of cognac, the sulphuric acid, and other articles that give fire and body to the liquid poison, are likewise kept at hand. The miner hops either through or various quarters. Thus are the engines of the art.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Charles Lamb's Warning to Young men.

The voices have gone over me. But out of black depths, could I be heard I would cry out to all those who have not run a foot in the perilous field. Behold the flesh to whom the flower of your days grass is dedicate as the opening shoots of that which is to spring up for ever. Intemperance, lewd living, debauchery, &c., &c., are but so many names for the indulgence of the natural appetites, which in themselves are innocent, but which, pampered with over-care and passive well—to see how they can exist and live on—to see how they can exist and live on—to see how they can exist and live on

The Protestant Home Committee beg to thank Mrs C. D. McDonald for $2,00, and Mr. Thomas Menzies for $1,00, left at the Home on Saturday, the 26th March.

Twenty-one charges of mismanagement, using the government stores, and favoring friends, &c., have been preferred against the Warden of the Kingston Penitentiary, Mr. Ferres. These accusations have been laid before the government.

We noticed, on Tuesday, that the Express Office here was closed, and crape on it, in respect to the late Thos. Kirkpatrick, Esq., President of the Canadian Express Company, whose funeral took place at Kingston, at 2 o'clock, on that day.

A Mrs. Alger, of Port Hope, has been found guilty by a Coroner's Jury, of killing her own infant just after its birth. A cruel mother surely! She was too weak after confinement to risk sending her to jail.

The discussion on the purchase of Dundurn Grounds by the government reveals the most reckless use of the public money. The government paid $30,000 for what is declared not worth more than $5,000. That is the way the money goes!

The dwelling of Mr. Oliver O'Hara, of Cavan, was destroyed by fire on Monday, caused by a defect in the stove pipe. We regret to learn that Mr. O'Hara saved literally nothing. Every thing in the house was consumed, except cast-iron, and one or two other articles.

FIRE.—We learn that the dwelling house of Mr. James Collins, South Monaghan, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday. A flaw in the stove is believed to have been the cause of the fire. We are glad to learn that considerable of the household effects was saved.

LECTURES.—The Rev. Wm. Stewart, of Toronto, will deliver his celebrated Lecture on "our English Bible," in the Good Templar's Hall, this evening, at 8 o'clock. All should attend! Mr. Stewart is favorably spoken of as a Lecturer, in the Toronto papers.

Mr. Stafford Northcote says the government of the Hudson Bay will soon be given over to the Canadian Government.—What a mock affair, to send Mr. McDougall to a territory over which the Canadian Government had no authority. The result is now revealed.

The New Dominion Monthly for April is before us. This an excellent Number. It contains good likenesses of Sir John A. McDonald, Sir F. Hincks, Sir Geo. E. Cartier, and Hon. Jos. Howe. There is also a cut of Mr. Livingstone, the celebrated African Traveller. The other contents are varied and very interesting.

ACCIDENT.—We learn that a son of Wm. Coulter, Esq., druggist, met with an accident on Friday last, by the accidental discharge of a revolver, which he was carrying. The ball entered the palm of his hand, and passed into the arm. It was removed from a little above the wrist, by Dr. Geo. Burnham. We understand that the boy is progressing favorably.

We are requested to announce that the next meeting of the Teachers' Class, conducted by J. B. Dixon, M. A., will be held in the Union School, on the second Saturday of April, at 10.30, a. m. Subjects—Reading, from 143rd to 153nd, inclusive; Grammar, 2nd Chap. (Fowler); Arithmetic, Single and Double Position; Algebra, Surds to the end of 45th Ex.; Geometry, from 16th to 33rd Prop., I. Book.

LOST AND FOUND.—On Saturday last, John Rose, a teamster, from Cobourg, on his way home from this town with a load of rye for the Grafton distillery, lost his pocket book, containing a considerable sum of money and some valuable papers. Fortunately for the looser, the pocket book and contents were found by an honest man, Patrick Bush, of Otonabee, who immediately handed the Book and contents to Capt. Sutherland, of Ashburnham, for the purpose of having it sent to the owner.

The public accounts have at last been brought out, but so nicely are they manipulated that it is believed not a man in the Dominion understands them, not even Sir F. Hincks or Auditor Langton. There appears to be a balance on hand, but the contrary is firmly believed by those who pretend to understand secrets. Six millions is too large a sum to be on hand, while they are pressing to get hold of all the silver in the Dominion.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SALT.

No doubt most of your readers are aware that a company has been formed in Peterborough, and are now boring for salt in the Township of Otonabee, within 2½ miles of this town. The contract for boring was let to Mr. Thomas Fee, who has had eight years experience in Pennsylvania, boring for oil, and who also sunk a well in Canboro to a depth of 600 feet.

The inducements for forming a company to open this new commercial enterprise, were, that salt was known for the last 40 years to exist on this property, and it was supposed that the supply must come from a bed lying below the Trenton Formation. With this idea in view, the Peterboro Salt Company have undertaken to bring into use this mine of wealth, and they have been ably backed up by the County and Town Councils, who have each voted a sum of Five Hundred Dollars, to be paid to said company when the first 100 barrels are made. During the boring of the well they first went through a bed of hard clay the feet in thickness, when they came on a bed of blue clay, which, when dryed, assumed a greyish white color, and is supposed by Mr. Fee to contain good fertilising qualities, although it resembles Tripoli in appearance, and will polish silver, brass, &c., with great facility and ease. A sample has been forwarded to Prof. Chapman for analysis. After going through this, a bed of rock was struck only two feet in thickness, which was underlaid by a bed of gravel two feet thick. This caused a delay of a few days,—to get tubing made. The first tubing was removed and replaced by more reaching below the gravel, so as to keep it from caving in. After getting over this delay, the contractor has been pushing it along night and day, and now has obtained a depth of 120 feet in lime stone, containing streaks of hard and soft rock. The rate of speed made, averages about one foot per hour. The strength of brine is increasing gradually as they go down, and has lost in a great measure the impure flavor it had on the surface. Some very nice salt has been boiled out of this brine, which is easily distinguished from the Goderich salt by its coarseness and dullness of color. Both of these differences will no doubt be overcome, when the well reaches a greater depth. The Goderich wells were not even salty at a depth of 600 feet, so I was informed by a gentleman whom I met at this well, and who resides at Goderich. He was astonished to see the salt hanging to the steam boiler, from water taken from a few feet below the surface, and he expressed his opinion, that the Company would strike a large bed of salt—and at a shallow depth. That his ideas will be realised, all ever visiting the well are quite convinced. Hoping that our townspeople will take advantage of this sleighing before it goes, and pay a visit to the well and satisfy themselves that there is about to be opened to this County, what will prove not only to the Stockholders of the Company, but the county at large, a great source of wealth.—COM.

Mr. Carnegie on Independent Members.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—

We have heard some one say that John Carnegie, Esq., M. P. P., has been duly installed literary (!) Editor of the Review. Whether it is so, or not, matters little to the electors of Peterboro'. The only importance I would wish to attach to it is this: If he is Editor of that paper, we may suppose the editorials do express his sentiments, whether on politics or anything else discussed in them. Having made this observation, I will now introduce my subject:

In the last number of the Review, there is an attack on A. P. Cockburn, M. P. P., for North Victoria; (and I think he fairly deserves to be bespattered with all the Conservative mud in Ontario; I don't pity him; mind that.) He, (Cockburn,) has been making speeches lately to his constituents, in which, he declared that he was tired of acting the part of an Independent Member, (a name assumed by supporters of J. S. McD., at least, those of them who wished to hold on to the Reform supper, while they were playing into the hands of the Conservatives.) The Editor of the Review waxes furious at this escapade, of one of John S's pets. He roars like a chained lion, (I mean a young one, just learning.) Then he throws mud at the Victoria Member, with such vigour that we are obliged to open our eyes to the fact that this poor vascillating M. P. P. is about to suffer a second martyrdom. Poor Cookburn! Can none of his old friends shew him pity? Will no one mourn for him? Dead! Buried! And the Review has just read his funeral service. Still, not a moist eye is to be seen; and the spectators of the tragedy, turn away as they would from the execution of a criminal and exclaim: served him right! Listen to the Review man's peroration: it is as follows:

"No one will charge us with grit proclivities, but we would sooner have their worst grit imaginable, than an individual who lacking a mind of his own, is like the man and the ass in the fable, trying to please everybody. And with the great Canning we would say, (altering but one word):

Give me the avow'd, the erect, the manly foe,
Bold I can meet, perhaps may save his blow;
But of all plagues, good Heaven, thy wrath can send,
Save, save, Oh! Shield me from the Independent friend.

That is just what Reformers have said over and over again. We challenge Conservatives to come out in their true colors, and fight us fairly—to quit their "no-party" game—to cease their sneaking and dodging in the Coalition ditches—to act like men who are willing to risk all on their own merits or demerits. But no, they still keep up the no-party cry: still there is only one fold and one shepherd. When they could hold their own no longer by fair means, they must needs adopt foul means. They induced some weak Reformers to join them, and form a Coalition. We were told that this was all done for the good of the country; but who can look back and say that it was not for the benefit of the Conservative party that this scheme was concocted. Who have received the loaves and fishes? Who have been planted in all the fat offices at the disposal of the government? Why, we ask, but the Conservatives!

And, yet, we are told that it is all patriotism—all for the good of the country. Is it possible, then, that all the wise men, all the skilled men, all the worthy men, belong to the Conservative party? Will any of them say so? Will even the Editor of the Review say so? Is there any meanness or statesmanship in such tactics? Will any one have the presumption to say so? Yes, Mr. Carnegie has said so, and says so still. He said so at the time of the last election; his went about vaunting that political millenium song that always had for a chorus, no matter how the measure was varied—"There is no party now; there is no party now." Mr. Carnegie sticks to that still. Electors of West Peterborough behold the shameful spectacle of your local representative [illegible] Conservative party [illegible] Conservatives to [illegible] no party. An independent man means one free from [illegible] party, and at liberty to act as he pleases. Just as an independent man means one under obligations to no one; or an independent planet would mean one that was free from the influences of anything external—one which was, in fact, not held in its own place. Such things are impossible in nature. "God never made an independent man." The world never saw an independent politician; and, more still, there never was a free country, governed by men, in which there were not, at least, two parties. If this is true, what shall we say of the demagogueisms—the dishonesty—the cunning exercised for a selfish purpose—and the deception practised by a set of politicians who claim that they have abolished party; that all that is good and great in the state is contained in them; that those who differ from them are a factious sett that, in fact: they don't belong to the country at all; for it is clear that if these politicians who differ from J. S. and his patent combination belong to the country, there are two parties undeniably. Does not the Editor of the Review see that when he denounced Cockburn for acting the part of an independent member, he was denouncing his own conduct and the farcical coalition he supports.

But, Mr. Editor, I must close this letter merely intimating that, with your permission, I will in a future issue of your paper discuss the character of the Ontario and Dominion Governments.

Yours, &c.,

A PARTY MAN.

Peterborough, March 29th, 1870.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

SIR,—Permit me through the columns of your useful journal to make a few remarks regarding a communication which I observed in the Peterboro Review of the 18th inst., under the heading "Warsaw." The writer of that article, who subscribes himself "A Traveller," informs us that on approaching this village, he saw, with apparent approbation, three fine churches, a school house, &c.; but in the next sentence that gentleman rather stultifies himself, we think; for, in connection with churches and schools he evidently expected good tavern accommodations, and he appears to be a good deal "riled" by his disappointment in this respect. Now, we would respectfully suggest to "A Traveller" that the presence of three churches and a school house in a village does not either logically or morally imply the presence of a tavern in the same village. And if "A Traveller" had formed a correct opinion of the elevating moral tendencies of christianity and education, and had also reflected for one moment on the degrading and demoralising influences of taverns, he would at the sight of so many churches and such an excellent school house, have inferred the total exclusion of groggeries from this village. For we think it is just as absurd and as inconsistent to suppose that a thoroughly intelligent christian community could support taverns, as it would be to speak of a healthy human body covered over with loathsome ulcers. And, instead of taverns increasing in numbers with the increasing prosperity and intelligence of a place, we think it will be generally found, that they are numerous in precise proportion to the ignorance, the vice, the filth, and squalid poverty of the surrounding inhabitants.—And in this connection we may be permitted to add, that it is the opinion of the wise, and the great, and the good of all countries, that taverns are only nurseries for the poor-house, the prison and and the gallows. To this opinion we give our unqualified assent.

We entirely agree with the writer of the Review article, however, that there ought to be places where travellers could have comfortable accommodation; but we, in common with many others, think that a tavern is not all necessary for that purpose, and we firmly believe that safe, quiet and convenient places of entertainment for travellers might be kept without the smell of whiskey in them.

"A Traveller" next informs us, that having seen a tavern sign on a house, he drove there, but found no tavern. Now, here we would suppose that the fact of having a sign without the thing signified, was entirely the fault of the land-lord, for no man should hoist false colors; and if the occupant of a house keeps up two sign boards, intimating to the public that he has a tavern there, when he has none, he is allowing himself to practice deception and a nuisance.

Let us next consider, briefly, the reasons which the land-lord says induced him to "close up." The first reason, was, the exorbitant sum demanded for license. Now we are in a position to state positively, that the Dummer Council were willing to give said landlord his tavern license at the lowest figure which the law permits; and surely in all fairness, this was all that could be expected from the Council in this case. The next reason given by the landlord for closing his tavern was, that an adjacent grocery with shop license, sold whiskey by the glass without stint, and that said shop license institution, was let alone, or rather encouraged in this practice, by the authorities legally constituted for the suppression of such illegal conduct. On this point we are only able to say, that the opinion of the public, and the opinion of the landlord, latterly obtained [illegible] it is moreover confidently believed in these parts, that in order to protect said shop license institution in a safe running condition, some, who occupy high position in this Municipality, have, during the current year, played some strange gymnastics with the law, bearing a striking resemblance to a "double shuffle," and which no doubt will be still fresh in the memory of many voters on the first Monday in January next.

Another reason given by the landlord for "drying up," was because of annoyance. Now it is clear to us, that if any one proposes to "keep taverns," without expecting annoyance of the meanest kind, he has yet to learn the rudiments of his calling, for everybody knows that the intelligent, industrious, inoffensive members of the community are not the frequenters of taverns; but, on the contrary, the very dregs of society spend their long evenings there, lounging, scolding, drinking, smoking, fighting and swearing, and if the landlord could lean over his "bar" and witness these proceedings without being annoyed, he must indeed be of extraordinary personage.

In conclusion, it gives us much pleasure to say that we heartily agree with "A Traveller," when he expresses a desire for the just administration of Municipal laws, for although we have long since turned away with disgust, from the debasing squabble of Canadian Politics, yet we cannot but desire to see our little Municipal affairs conducted with honest impartiality.

It is true, we have the laws to guide us in these affairs, but where shall we find men of sterling integrity to administer them laws?

Yours Truly,
DUMMERONIAN.

Town Council.

Special Meeting, March 29th, 1870.

The Council met. Present all the members, the Mayor in the chair. Minutes of the last meeting, Tuesday, March 22nd, read and confirmed.

Communications were read from John Harvey Town Clerk of Guelph, on the subject of a Steam Fire Engine; from Mr. Edwards, asking compensation for acting as magistrate in Police Court last summer; a circular from the Toronto Eye and Ear Dispensary, on the terms upon which the patients from the country would be received at that institution.

Two petitions signed by 113 and 145 ratepayers respectively were read, praying the council not to cancel the licences granted to Butchers outside of the market House.

The communication and petitions were received and on motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Rutherford—The two petitions were referred to the same committee as the Butchers' petition was.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole—The council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of a By-law for the appointment of Treasurer and Clerk.

On motion of Mr. Doherty the blanks were filled in and the bye-law read and passed.

The council adjourned for one week.

THE CONCERT.—Mr. Rockett's concert on Thursday evening was a complete success. All the parts were well sustained.—Miss Williams, of Port Hope, was uncommonly well received, being encored every time she appeared. Mr. Sanders, also of Port Hope, admirably performed his part, and was also encored. Mr. Gallstly, sang in his usually happy style. Miss Sanders, daughter of Mr. Sanders, also sang charmingly. Mr. Philps, who is well known here, ably presided at the piano, and took other parts which tended very much to the success of the Concert. Mr. Sheperd, of Port Hope, also ably performed his part in the programme.

SNOW, SNOW.—For the past few days there has been nothing but snow. On Sunday the fall was fully two feet. There was a drift also at the same time, which completely blocked up every pass. There was no train on Monday. On Tuesday the train arrived about seven o'clock, p. m., with three locomotives attached. That venerable person, the oldest inhabitant, declares he has not seen anything like this storm. It raged all along the Atlantic coast as far as New York. The driving shed attached to the First Presbyterian Church fell on Sabbath morning, because of the weight of snow on it. It was fortunate that there were no teams in it at the time; Rev. Mr. Roger's horse was taken out just as it was falling in.

Mr. Macdougall and the North West.

The editor of the London Prototype, who had an interview with Mr. Macdougall when in that city, thus refers to it:—

"Lieut.-Governor Macdougall arrived in London yesterday morning, en route from the North-West to Ottawa. From what we could gather, from a lengthened conversation with Mr. Macdougall, matters up there do not assume such a serious aspect as the public have been led to believe by the very imperfect and incorrect reports from St. Paul that have been circulated in Canadian journals. We are glad to find that it is the opinion of the Governor, that all existing difficulties may be amicably adjusted in the spring, by a judicious and vigorous policy on the part of the Canadian government. The only parties in the Red River Settlement who have offered armed resistance to the assumption of authority by our government, are the French-Canadian half-breeds, who demand certain concessions and guarantees before they surrender the government to the Dominion. Of course, there are some American sympathisers who cooperate with them to embarrass our government, and promote annexation, if possible. But the half-breeds insurgents have not adopted an annexation policy; and will probably bye-and-bye, be willing to settle all existing difficulties by friendly negotiation.

"The reports that have found currency in Canadian journals, to the effect that the English and Scotch residents and their descendants are equally disaffected with the French half-breeds, are entirely untrue. They are to a man loyal to the Canadian government, are ready at any moment to take up arms in its defence, and had it not been for the judgment and commendable caution exercised by Governor Macdougall, a civil war would have been precipitated, which every Canadian would have been regretted, and which would have baptised the inauguration of the new territory with blood. Mr. McDougall had some difficulty in averting this calamity, as the British residents were fully armed and prepared to fight; and merits, for this prudential forbearance, the best thanks of the country.

"The general impression in Canada has been that the Indians sympathised with the insurgents, and were ready to join them in resisting the establishment of British authority in the territory. Such is not the fact. True to their antecedents, they are in favor of British rule, and, if the necessity should unfortunately arise, will be found fighting on behalf of the Canadian Dominion. The most powerful and warlike of the Indian tribes are the Sioux; they have lately driven from Minnesota by the American armies, have taken refuge over the border, and are not disposed to aid any movement that would place them under the government of the Americans. Such also is the feeling of the other tribes; so that, should hostilities arise before the question of possession is determined, Canada can count upon the active co-operation of the Indians, and the British population of the North-West. Their united action would be fully able to wipe out the insurgents, and hand over the territory to Canada, but we trust that a resort to such extreme measures will not be required.

"In the face of such facts, we have little to fear from American sympathisers. It would require a formidable array of filibusters to cope with 20,000 or 30,000 well armed Indians defending their territory in such a country as the North-West. American sympathisers and filibusters could not have their base of operations nearer the scene of action than 400 or 500 miles; and it would take a large amount of money and a well supplied commissariate, to keep any formidable force in operation for any length of time. Americans have had too much experience of Indian wars to lead many of them voluntarily to engage in a new one on our territory. We conclude, then, that we have really little to fear from the half-breeds, less from filibusters, and that by a sound policy on the part of our government all existing difficulties can be easily overcome. These were the impressions produced on our mind by the representations of Lieut.-Governor Macdougall, who no doubt presents the facts as they exist."

The massacre of twenty-two men in Santiago de Cuba, for no other crime than that they belonged to the Masonic Order, has elicited universal execration throughout the world. These unfortunate men were indicted and then, without trial or means of defence, were led forth and shot down in a crowd like so many dogs.

The Halifax "Chronicle" notes the existence of a venerable lady of Lunenburg whose, centenary was chronicled by us last year, who lately enjoyed a sleigh ride on her 101st birthday, winding up the remarkable day by dinning with one of her numerous relatives, some distance from her place of residence. She is in full possession of her faculties of speech and understanding, and can now knit in style that might put to shame many damsels that have been born three or four generations latter than herself. If we are rightly informed, she has a brother nearly a hundred years old, who never tasted ardent spirits in his life.

THE NOTMAN CASE.—In the Court of Appeals of the Queen's Bench to-day the Notman case was again brought up, and the further hearing of the appeal postponed till the meeting of this court in June next. The result of the above action will be that the prisoner, Robert Notman, may henceforth be looked upon as a freed criminal—he having been liberated upon a writ of habeas corpus; and in the re-hearing of the case in appeal Notman was not brought, as required by law, before the Court in person, which informality, it is stated on good authority, will invalidate any future criminal proceedings that may be taken against him.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT from a letter dated Pembina, March 4th:—

"Captain Lynch of the Canadian Volunteers at Winnipeg, left here on the 2nd inst., for Canada, accompanied by Mr. Provencher, Mr. Wm. Dreever, of Winnipeg, and a few French half-breeds. Capt. Lynch and his company were released on the 21st of February, on condition of their becoming bound to keep the peace so long as they remained in the country. The captain has suffered considerably in health from his long confinement, the last week or ten days of which was spent in irons. Affairs in the Territory remain as unsettled as ever. The efforts of Mr. Smith as Comissioner, being so directed as to make matters worse than before."

Fire-eaters of the New York Times type should read the following extract from a private letter dated Havana, and published in the New York Sun:—

"And all this time our miserable and contemptible administration of the Navy Department leaves this port without a single vessel of war, to offer refuge and protection to our citizens. So critical is their position, and such sympathy does it excite among our nationalities, that the captains of the British frigates in port have given notice to our Consul-General, and through him to our citizens, that in the event of danger, which is most imminent, all Americans will be received and protected on board the English ships. How humiliating is this to our national pride!"

It is said that the French laws cannot touch Prince Pierre Bonaparte. There are only two witnesses of any importance in the case, one being M. de Fouvielle, and the other the Prince himself, and their evidence will be absolutely contradictory. The Court, therefore, must be in doubt, and must give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. If, as the Prince affirms, he was in danger of assassination by two men, and was struck by one of them, his shooting that one would not be a crime in France; and if such a case were occuring among private persons the homicide would, perhaps, not even be held for trial at all. In England, there would be only one witness, namely de Fouvielle; and his testimony being positive, the Court would probably have to condemn the Prince to death.

The Sheriff of Dallas County is placed in a very unpleasant position by the following statement. The Oshawa Vindicator says:—"A correspondent gives us a ludicrous if it were not a painful account of the manœuvres of the Sheriff to escape a writ on monday. From his account, it appears that a Toronto lawyer wrote to the Coroner, complaining that he could get no return from the Sheriff in the case of Smith vs. Kennedy. The Coroner visited the visited the Sheriff, who replied that the defendant had no goods. She lawyer asserted that this was all nonsense, and authorised the Coroner to arrest the Sheriff.

He proceeded to do so, but the Sheriff escaped the Bailiff by jumping out of the and it is rumored, hiding in the gaol. In the course of the day the matter was settled by the Sheriff paying the judgment, of over $500. We regret to be compelled to take notice of this matter, but it has been repeated so often that our duty as a public journalist compells us to do so. It is bad enough to be compelled to resort to legal means to recover the debt, but it is ten times worse when a second course of legal proceedings is necessary to get the judgment out of the hands of the Sheriff. There must be a change arought either by the present official or by the government, or legal proceedings in the county will be a farce."

Canal Policy For The Dominion.

The following is published as a curiosity in its way. The reasons are not a bad one if it be feasible. The amount allotted to Dominion capitalists is certainly sufficiently liberal. The gentleman proposed as Directors cannot be otherwise than flattered.

Mr. Treadwell proposes the following Canal Policy for the Dominion.

1. That a Company be chartered under the appellation of the Hon. John Young, and that he be chairman thereof.
2. That the Capital be fifty millions dollars ten millions for the St. Lawrence and Champlain Canal, twenty millions for the Ottawa Nippissing and Lake Huron Canal—to include the enlargement of the Lachine Canal and ten millions for the enlargement of the St. Lawrence and Welland Canals, and deepening St. Clair Flats.
3. That the number of directors be twenty four—the chairman to be one—to reside in Montreal—to be selected as follows:—Parties mentioned in the Bill to be directors and the remainder to be made up as follows:—The Hon. John Young to name thirteen to obtain their Assistance as Directors, the Hon. Sandfield Macdonald to be appointed, of which Sir John Rose and Sir Stafford Northcote to be two, and the Governor to have the right to appoint four more, and twelve Directors to be appointed by the Dominion of which those mentioned below shall be included:

Hon. John Young,
Walter Shanly, Esq., M. P.,
Frederick C. Capreol, Esq.,
O. P. Treadwell, Esq.,
Hon. James McLeod,
Hugh Allan, Esq.,

4. Fifteen million of pollars of the capital to be proffered to the London Capitalists, fifteen million dollars to American Capitalists, and ten millions to the Dominion Capitalists.
5. One year shall be allowed to get up the stock. The following Engineers are respectfully recommended to be either consulted or employed: Messrs. Walter Shanly, Clarke, Jarvis, Burpee, Thos. C. Keefer and James Sykes. No existing charter to be interfered with.
6. The first work to be constructed is two locks at Grenville on the canals agreed to by the Company as the size and depth of the whole work. The next work to be the St. Lawrence and Lake Champlain Canal. Then the whole of the Ottawa and Nippissing Canal, and lastly the enlargement of the St. Lawrence and Welland Canal. Parties subscribing may take up the sections in the proposed proportions, and not be parties to the whole work as they may decide.

Loss of a Schooner Owned by 150,000 Sunday-School Children.

From the Boston Advertiser.

The schooner Morning Star, which sailed from this city on the 12th of November, 1856 for the Pacific, in the service of the American board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was lost early in October on one of the Micronesian Islands in the Northern Pacific, and the tidings reached this city yesterday, by way of San Francisco. Several missionaries and her crew were aboard at the time of the disaster, but nobody was lost. This event will interest thousands of Sunday school children, by whose contributions the Morning Star was built. About 2,000 Sabbath Schools were represented, and over [illegible] certificates of stock were issued to the children, who subscribed in the aggregate over $20,000.

The Morning Star was a staunch little craft of about 300 tons and was used exclusively to keep up intercourse and carry missionaries and supplies between the Sandwich Islands and the Micronesian Islands, making a trip every year to each of these distant groups. She was much used by the natives in their missionary movements, being [illegible] under the especial directions of the Hawaiian Board of Missions, though supported by an appropriation of about $8,000, from the American Board.

Mr. Revels the Colored Senator, recently made his first speech in the Senate at Washington.

Washington correspondent says:—"Almost the entire audience in the galleries arose with the first word which the Senator uttered, so general was the desire to obtain a view of him. He read from manuscript, at first in rather a low tone, but as he progressed he acquired the entire control of his delivery, and lost the embarrassment which was at first apparent. Senators in their own seats, and members of the House, and others on the sofas listened, as did the entire assemblage, with marked attention, and were favourably impressed with his diction as well as with his modesty of manner. On the conclusion of his speech, Senator Cameron was the first to congratulate him, and in this he was followed by Senators Drake, Sumner, Stewart, and Fenton, and a number of others." He spoke on behalf of coloured population of Georgia, for whom he claimed the protection of the law under the Amended Constitution. He alluded to their conduct during the war, pointing out the practical denial given to the assertions of those who had prognosticated a civil war in consequence of the admission of the North. At a time when all the white population of the South was [illegible] for the war, and their homes and families remained in the mercy of the blacks, no outrages whatever had been committed, although the slaves were perfectly aware that the people whose property, [illegible] and [illegible], lay at their mercy, were those who were carrying on a war to rivet [illegible] the coloured population. He alluded to the support the Northern negroes had received from the slaves; and made a touching allusion to the lives that had been saved, by their deeds, to support and render happy many Northern homes. He maintained that Senate that twenty-eight [illegible] had been expelled from the Georgia Legislature in December last, [illegible] protection for the rights of the [illegible] people of the South. His speech was powerful and well written; but the fact of its

R. R. R. IN BRAZIL.

We refer the reader to the following t est mony in favor of Dr. RADWAY'S REMEDIES, from gentlemen of high character in Brazil. Persons doubting the genuineness of the cures are requested to write to the parties, also to the U. S. Consul at Rio, as to the correctness of the statements and status of the witness. For every word not true the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid:

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 23d, 1866.

Messrs. RADWAY & CO.'s AGENTS:

GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your favor of 20th instant, asking my opinion in regards to the efficacy of Dr. RADWAY & Co's preparations, I am happy to say that I consider the Ready and Pills the best remedies ever known, and to form such an opinion I am obliged to prove it, which I will do willingly viz: I suffered so much from "colic" that when I was attended it pained me so much that I preferred death to such sufferings, I took everything that was recommended, but it was of no use; at last I took 4 of Radway's Pills, after which the pains were very moderate, and then I thought that I was cured, but the pains were still existing (which I attribute to the unwillingness in my part in not following it up as directed,) that I was obliged to give in to my friend's influence to take some "Relief," which he gave to me in a dose of one tablespoon in a number of water. In the interval of three minutes I felt relieved immediately, and fifteen minutes after the pain ceased. It is three months since I had an attack, and should I feel any symptoms of it I take the "Relief," I will do all in my power to convince the doctors of the good results of these medicaments, to that they may prescribe them.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

LUIZ JOSE DA SILVA CAMPOS.

INFLAMMATION OF THE BREAST, or Agues in the breast, and it is sometimes popularly called, is an affection frequently met with among nursing women and which may take place at any period during suckling. It is generally caused by cold though it may be occasioned by permitting the the breast to become distended with milk, as in case nipples or among those mothers who remain long as parties, theatres balls &c., leaving their infant at home; it may also follow improoper pressure on on the breast, machinical injuries &c. To relieve the pain reduced the inflamation and restore the breast to a natural condition use Briggs' Modern Curative which unrivalled by known remedy. Dr. J. Briggs & Co. God's Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition; and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses, use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purposes. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hand & Co. is on each package Masters & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Money, of Papanoe, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

The Angel and the Child.

BY CHARLES KENNEDY.

A lovely child with dark blue eyes,
And waving, silken hair,
Upon her mother's new-made grave
Did bow her head in prayer:
Her golden curls drooped o'er the sod,
Tears filled her eyes so blue;
The hands in likeness of a flower
Pointed to the star-lit dew!

Beneath the morning, reckless sun
Her father long hath slept;
And o'er his ocean tomb, the waves
A waiting vigil kept!
Her mother lay in Death's cold arms
Beneath the church-yard sod;—
And there the lonely orphan knelt
Before the orphan's God!

Her bright and weeping, dark-blue eyes,
And sad, sad mother came!
Links, I die for lack of love,
Oh, take me to thy home!
They knew whom in his arms,
The tender death gently fold;
Where angels glide in beauty o'er
The streets of shining gold!

Thus spoke the child, and ere her words
Had died upon the air,
An angel stood beside the grave,
To grant the orphan's prayer!
The scraps parted from her brow
The waving, golden curls,
And softly wiped away the tears
That fell like glittering pearls!

'I'll take thee home!' the angel said,
And to her bosom fair
She cheered the child—in light they rose
A rainbow in the air!
Down on that grave the orphan looked,
Upon the grave she smiled;
They passed in beauty from my gaze,
The angel and the child.

Delenda est Carthago.

On opposite sides of the Mediterranean, were seated two rival cities of antiquity, Carthage and Rome. Both started from small beginnings, both were endowed with restless energy, both reached forth and assimilated or subdued the surrounding tribes and nations. Resting upon her dependencies resembling eastward, westward and northward, Rome sat, on her many hills, watching the rival and rising empire of the West. Supported in like manner by her possessions eastward, westward and southward, Carthage, advancing to the very waters of the sea, watched with jealous eyes the growing empire of the East. The island of Sicily lay between the two powers, and each advancing to possess it, they came in conflict, and waged war with various results for seventeen years. The peace which followed was but a period for regathering their respective forces for a more desperate trial of strength. For fifteen years the armies of Carthage, under Hannibal, ravaged Italy, and marched up to the very gates of Rome. Stunned, but undaunted, the Senate learned that Hannibal could be opposed only at home. Scipio was sent to lay siege to Carthage. Gnashing his teeth with rage, Hannibal was obliged to evacuate Italy, to save his own city and state. It was too late.—At Zama, Scipio met and overthrew the terrible destroyer of 300,000 Romans. Carthage, humbled by her reverses, sued for peace, which was granted on some conditions. Treacherous, ambitious, arrogant, a pretext was not long waited for to renew hostilities. Convinced, at last, that the very existence of Carthage was a perpetual menace to Rome, the Senate embodied in a solemn resolve the oft repeated words of a Senator, Carthage must be destroyed!

It was a terrible resolution, which the exigency at the case alone could justify, and after a short but desperate struggle, Carthage, the city of rapine and human sacrifices, was blotted forever from the earth.

The Rum Power, aggressive, arrogant, and blood-red with human sacrifices, is to civilization, peace, virtue and human well being the Carthage of this day vitalized and inspired by the terrible energy of hell! Universal dominion alone will satisfy its ambition. Its dependencies stretching to the four corners of the earth, are the fruits of its subtle policy, and bids defiance to the sanctities of home, of religion, and even the laws of the Living God. It speaks loftily, and sets its mouth against the heavens like the serpents of old. Is there a home where it has not entered, or a gate-post it has not sprinkled with blood? Over the woes of [illegible] it has made [illegible] loved the widow's groan with a fiendish grimace, inimitable this side of the pit. It scorns statesmen. It controls churches. It shapes legislation. It [illegible] the press and now at last lifts its bloody hands and smites at the very throne of God! The blessed Sabbatic idea in which the nation has been enspheared as a part of that upper crystal sea, it ruthlessly dashes to fragments! Instead of the soul-lifting anthems which have echoed over hill and dale,

Welcome, delightful morn,
Thou day of sacred rest,

we are to have bacchanalian revelry and the orgies of demons! No! by all that is virtuous, it shall not be! By the memories of Plymouth Rock, by the woes of millions of orphans, by the death throes of a myriad of drunkards, by the promise of the Almighty that the triumphing of the wicked is short, by the mightiness of Christian heroism nailed in the panoply of God, the Rum Power shall die!

We call now for men who will fight the good fight out unto the end. We call for men whose song shall be:

Some fight for love of booty,
Some to defend their all;
I battle for the joy I have
To see the tyrant fall!

We call for men to invade the strongholds, and smite like Scipio at the seat of power. Men of faith, who believe that the right shall triumph, and the truth of God overmaster the lie of covetousness.

Ye faithful few who have borne the heat and burden of the day, toil on. Drink of the brook in the way and lift up the head. The cause is not ours, but God's. Sing it, pray it, preach it. In the name of the widow's God, the Rum Power shall be destroyed!

LIFE'S LESSONS.—The first lesson that a young man should learn is, that he knows nothing. The earlier and more throughly learned the better. A homebred youth growing up in the light of parental admiration, with everything to foster his vanity and self-esteem, is surprised to find and often unwilling to acknowledge the superiority of people. But he is compelled to learn his own insignificance; blunders exposed, his wishes disregarded, and is made to cut a sorry figure, until his self conceit is abashed and he keenly feels that he knows nothing. A man must learn to wait as to work, and to be content with those means of advancement in life which he may use with intergrity and honor. Patience is one of the most difficult lessons to learn.

A student of Ann Arbor, Michigan, having remarked that men had more endurance than women, a lady present answered that she would like to see the thirteen hundred young men in the university laced in steel-ribbed corsets, wite heavy hoops, heavy skirts, high-heels, panniers, chignons, and a dozen of hair-pins sticking in their scalps, cooped up in the house year after year, with no exhilarating exercise, no hope, aims, or ambitions in life, and see if they could stand it as well as the girls. Nothing, said she, but the fact that woman like cats, have nine lives, enables them to survive the present regime to which custom doome the sex.

A late Catholic bishop of New York said to a friend:—"I have found that the laboring classes under my charge in the city of New York pay for drams alone at the grog shops $1,250,000 annually. Money saved to the Irish in New York and converted into comfortable dwellings, better clothing, better education to their children, would soon elevate them to a condition and respectability which would do honor to the country of their adoption."

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Bridge Allevantes according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 268 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

The Sleeping Dead.

BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

When the hours of day are numbered,
And the voices of the night
Wake the better soul that slumbered,
To a holy, calm delight.

Ere the evening lamps are lighted,
And, like phantoms grim and tall,
Shadows from the fitful light
Dance upon the parlor wall.

Then the forms of the departed
Enter at the open door,
The beloved, the true-hearted,
Come to visit me once more.

He, the young and strong, who cherished,
Noble longings for the strife,
By the roadside fell and perished,
Weary with the march of life!

They, the holy ones and weakly,
Who the cares of suffering bore,
Folded their pale hands so meekly,
Spake with us on earth no more!

And with them, the being beauteous,
Who unto my youth was given,
More than all things else that love me,
And is now a saint in Heaven.

With a slow and solemn footstept
Come the messenger divine—
Takes the vacant chair beside me,
Lays her gentle hand in mine.

And she sits and gazes at me,
With those deep and tender eyes,
Like the stars so still and saint like,
Looking downward from the skies.

Uttered not, yet comprehended,
Is the spirit's voiceless prayer;
Soft rebukes, in blessings ended,
Breathing from her lips of air.

Oh! though oft depressed and lonely,
All my fears are laid aside,
If I but remember only
Such as these have lived and died.

Paper Money.

The United States fought through a great war, that in one particular exceeded all other wars—the particular of cost. That war ended—as one might say—only yesterday, and the country is now striving, might and main, to rid itself of its pestilential legal tender paper money.

A war is now raging in the Dominion of Canada, that resembles the American contest in one point, and in no other—it is a civil war—a very civil war. It is a war carried on at private risk, both of money and men: and the public chest is thereby saved from expenditure on account of the war in our North West Territory.

Why then is Canada to be cursed with an irredeemable government paper currency; Who desires it; What object can we attain by paper money that Canada cannot obtain without it; If the country were polled on the question the universal vote would be, "We don't want paper money." Yet this young and lusty Dominion is to be subjected, in a time of universal peace, to one of the conditions that have afflicted other countries under a desperate struggle for national existence. As wise, and virtuous, and wealthy a people as can be found in the world, a people who of all others have no necessity for paper money, are to be held up to the opprobrium and ridicule of the civilized world; to have its national character blasted, and to insure the risk of seeing the Dominion, like the house built by the fool upon the sands, go down with a crash; wherefore? All that is necessary for a Finance Minister in Canada is to leave well alone. As sure as the waters of our lakes find their way to the sea, so surely will our currency on a metalic base, take care of itself if it be only kept from pernicious intermeddlers.

Paper is not an absolute necessity even when gold and silver are scarce or absent altogether. Other representatives of gold may be found. In the London Docks you may any day see hogsheads of beautiful small shells—cowery shells. They form the circulating medium of some of the nations of India. Cowrie shells would certainly be preferable to paper for very small change—easier stored and more durable. There was once a slang term in use "shell out." Perhaps it originated among the cowrie shells. Our Finance Minister should adopt it. It is admirably adapted to his position. With a thumb-screw for his crest and "shell out" for a motto, he he would be very properly found, as the Hearld's College would say. But the Finance Minister, if he had a fancy, such a man of his ability ought to have, would say that he is not confined to paper and shells. Many other substances may be found. His classic recollections might bring to his mind the simple material used by the primative Spartains—leather. There is nothing like leather. As a circulating medium it has many recommendations. It has always an ascertainable market value that does not fluctuate so extremely as most other commodities. Leather is more durable than paper, and might be issued in shapes and sizes fit for uses that would make them a public convenience, if they failed to persuade people that they were as good as gold.

Paper such as will be issued will be utterly useless if it does not pass as money. Most certainly it will never pass for its nominal value. Then what shall we do with it?

The trial of Prince Pierre Bonaparte proceeds. On Wednesday witnesses for the prosecution were examined. Amongst these was Henri Rochefort, who entered the room accompanied by two gendarmes. His presence created much excitement in the members of the press. After reciting the contents of the letter sent to him by the accused which occasioned the visit of Noir and de Fauvielle, he retired to the bench reserved for journalists. Victor Noir's wife testified that it was impossible that her husband could have slapped the Prince's face. Others testified to the improbability of Noir having purposely quarreled with Bonaparte. Yesterday some variety was given to the proceedings by the Prince, who, when one of the lawyers happened to make a remark offensive to him, violently interrupted the proceedings by turning to the lawyer and denouncing him and his party as a faction. De Fauvielle became so excited at the interrogation that he called the Prince an assassin, and ultimately had to be taken out of Court. The procurer General demanded the punishment of de Fauvielle, and at the end of the sitting, he was sentenced to ten days' imprisonment for contempt of Court. M. Flocquet commenced the argument for the prosecution, depicted the character of the Prince in strong terms, and asserted that he had killed four men previous to his killing Noir, and had been banished from the military service by Louis Napoleon for leaving the army without permission. This, again, aroused the wrath of the Prince, who violently interrupted the counsel, and exclaimed that there was a conspiracy to "aggravate" him. He was severely recommended by the Court for his violent behaviour.

In 1870, 52,659,009 bushels of grain were destroyed in the United Kingdom in the manufacture of beer and spirits. This would make upward of three thousand million pounds of flour, and one thousand three hundred million four-pounds loaves of bread.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Purgative Medicine.

Prepared by the well-known chemist whose name they bear, are now universally acknowledged by everybody as the best purgative that science, skill, and money can produce. They are used by every one in every country and climate, as the most reliable and efficient purgative pill. The obvious reason is, that it is options to disease and for cures which they are said to perform, they are the best remedy, often the only one. They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive may take them pleasantly, and they are the safest medicine to be given to children, because they are strictly vegetable and free from calomel or any dangerous drug. They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headaches, Sick Headache, Constipation or Costiveness, Bilious Colic, Colds and Bilious Fevers, they should be judicious used to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pains in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued [illegible] as required, to change the [illegible] action of the system.

For Dropsy and Suppression, those complaints [illegible].

For Worms and Scrofulous Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Female Complaints, a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the system.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

SARSAPARILLIAN
RESOLVENT.
NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

Of all Wasting, Scrofulous, and Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Liver, Blood, LUNGS, Kidneys, Bladder.

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic diseases, and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other Scrofulous diseases are curable. This fact has been demonstrated in over where one lung in one county cases was destroyed and dried up, and in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption,

500 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of Consumptions, showing in every case, that where tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Intestines, establishing Consumption of these organs, the Blood is thin, weak, pale, watery, and is deficient of every constituents as fibrin Albumen, Phosphorus, and the rich red coloring discs of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood is exhausted of strength and nourishment, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to hold in solution its natural constituents, and Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Cancers, and Purulent Humors are formed, the presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and consequent suppuration.

This, reader, is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases, and prepared the Radway's Resolvent to supply the Blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions or systems, and to give to the nourishment and strength to hold its natural constituents in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in Montreal, Province, Germany, and America, and was hailed upon the announcement as a new era in medicine. From his vast practice hours have been given to him by many others, and he has discovered the cause of Consumption, and have failed to produce the remedy in cure. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory, and the first and only discoverer of a remedy that will cure. In Radway's Resolvent, Sarsaparillian Resolvent, you will find the remedy that will cure Consumption, Scrofula, Kidneys, Bladder, Ulcers, Tumors, Cancers, and Urinary Organs.

In all wasting diseases, such as Dyspepsia, Loss of Sperm, Incontinence of Urine, Diseases of the Kidneys, Leucorrhœa, and all Diseases of the Urinary Organs, Gravel, Lime Deposit, Stone in the Bladder, Obstinate Catarrhs, the Resolvent will be found unrivalled as a powerful cure. In Female Weakness, accompanied with Leucorrhœa, Ulceration of the Uterus, Incipient Consumption, or in any disease

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & FILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada
Yamoc, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands: in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Poetry.
In Church on Christmas Day.
She groped from her garret, down
The dark steps of the creviced stair,
And through and through her thin old gown
Trespass'd the Winter air.

Her scanty shawl with decent grace
She wrapp'd about her shiv'ring bones,
And wander'd forth with faltring pace
Along the frozen stones.

A household drudge a score of years,
Her forteth Autumn saw her wife,
Then came a decade drown'd in tears
And toss'd by strife.

And left her sinking, downward still:
Widow'd of love, bereft of ease,
Stranger to all but want and ill,
And full of miseries.

Straying through street and road and field,
Through memories of less cruel times,
She reach'd a cross-topp'd tow'r that reel'd
With merry Christmas chimes.

She crept within: the parson taught
His people from the Holy Book;
"Could blessing be for her," she thought,
"Whom Heaven and men forsook?"

Each arch was fringed with green, and crown'd
With tidings of a glorious birth:
She said, "But I have never found
Good will and peace on earth."

A father sat beside his girls,
His loving hand instinctive stray'd
To stroke the silk of baby curls
And while he'inly pray'd.

And beauty such as once she wore
Flash'd bright from happy maiden's eyes,
And children's voices join'd to your
Pure worship to the skies.

Beyond the blaze of storied glass,
A vision grew of fire lit rooms,
And swift before her seemed to pass
A hundred happy homes.

And days when she was young, and rear'd
The children of rich men, swept by,
With bygone men and deeds, and weird
Freaks of mad memory.

Then through the glowing rood she seem'd
To spy a home wherein she stood
Herself, and through the glory gleam'd
A glimpse of Fatherhood.

Oh, lift her famish'd corpse with awe!
The chimes rang out her passing knell;
She faded towards the home she saw.
As on her knees she fell.

Many are they who give and bless,
And in God's book are noted down;
But, oh! the kin of wretchedness
Are many in the town.

Miscellaneous.
Mary, Queen of Scots.
She laid her crucifix on her chair. The chief executioner took it as a perquisite, but was ordered instantly to lay it down. The lawn vail was lifted carefully off, not to disturb the hair, and was hung upon the rail. The black robe was next removed. Below it was a petticoat of crimson velvet. The black jacket followed, and under the jacket was a body of crimson satin. One of her ladies handed her a pair of crimson sleeves, with which she hastily covered her arms; and thus she stood on the black scaffold with the black figures all around her, blood red from head to foot.

Her reason for adopting so extraordinary a costume must be left to conjecture. It is only certain that it must have been carefully studied, and that the pictorial effect must have been appalling.

The women, whose firmness had hitherto borne the trial, began now to give way, spasmodic sobs bursting from them which they could not check. 'Ne criez vous pas,' she said, 'j'ai promis pour vous.' Struggling bravely, they crossed their breasts again and again, she crossing them in turn and bidding them pray for her. Then she knelt on the cushion. Barbary Mowbray bound her eyes with a handkerchief.—'Adieu,' she said, smiling for the last time and waving her hand to them; 'Adieu, au revoir.' They stepped back from off the scaffold and left her alone. On her knees she repeated the Psalm, 'In te, Domine, confido,' 'In thee, O Lord, have I put my trust.' Her shoulders being exposed, two scars became visible, one on either side, and the Earls being now a little behind her, Kent pointed to them with his white wand and looked enquiringly at his companion. Shrewsbury whispered that they were the remains of two abscesses from which she had suffered while living with him at Sheffield.

When the psalm was finished, she felt for the block, and laying down her head muttered: In manus, Dominetuas, commendo animam meam.' The hard wood seemed to hurt her, for she placed her hands under her neck: The executioners gently removed them, lest they should deaden the blow, and then one of them holding her slightly, the other raised the axe and struck. The scene had been too trying even for the practised headsman of the Tower. His arm wandered. The blow fell on the knot of the handkerchief, and scarcely broke the skin. She neither spoke nor moved. He struck again, this time effectively. The head hung by a shred of skin, which he divided without withdrawing the axe; and at once a metamorphosis was witnessed, strange as was ever wrought by wand of fabled enchanter.—The coif fell off and the false plaits. The labored illusion vanished. The lady who had knelt before the block had the maturity of grace and loveliness. The executioner, when he raised the head, as usual, to show it to the crowd, exposed the withered features of a grizzled, wrinkled old woman.

'So perish all enemies of the Queen,' said the Dean of Peterborough. A loud Amen rose over the hall. 'Such end,' said the Earl of Kent, rising and standing over the body, 'to the Queen's and the gospel's enemies.'

Orders had been given that everything which she had worn should be immediately destroyed, that no relics should be carried off to work imaginary miracles. Sentinels stood at the doors, who allowed no one to pass out, without permission; and after the first pause, the Earls still keeping their places, the body was stripped. It then appeared that a favorite lapdog had followed its mistress unperceived, and was concealed under her clothes; when discovered it gave a short cry, and seated itself between the head and the neck from which the blood was still flowing. It was carried away and carefully washed, and then beads, paternoster, handkerchief—each particle of dress which the blood had touched, with the cloth on the block and on the scaffold, was burnt in the hall fire in the presence of the crowd. The scaffold itself was next removed: a brief account of the execution was drawn up, with which Henry Talbot, Lord Shrewsbury's son was sent to London, and then every one was dismissed. Silence settled on Fotheringay, and the last scene of the life of Mary Stuart, in which tragedy and melo-drama were so strangely intermingled, was over.

A spectator, who was one of her warmest admirers, describes her bearing as infinitely transcending the power of the most accomplished actor to represent. The association of the stage, was, perhaps, unconsciously suggested by what was in fact, notwithstanding the tremendous reality with which it closed, the most brilliant acting throughout. The plain gray dress would have sufficed, had she cared only to go through with simplicity the part which was assigned her. She intended to produce a dramatic sensation, and she succeeded. The self possession was faultless the courage splendid. Never did any human creature meet death more bravely; yet, in the midst of the admiration and pity which cannot be refused her, it is not to be forgotten that she was leaving the world with a lie upon her lips. She was a bad woman, disguised in the livery of a martyr and if in any sense at all she was suffering for her religion, it was because she had shown herself capable of those detestable crimes which in the sixteenth century appeared to be the proper fruits of it.—Froude.

Millia Murthor.
ST. PATRICK AN ENGLISHMAN
The London Daily News of a recent date contains the following:—Where was St. Patrick born? The question, we are persuaded, will appear to the vast majority of our Irish brethren as ridiculous as to the comparatively few students of ecclesiastical history who have taken the pains to ascertain the acknowledged facts of the case.—Nine-tenths of Irishmen, we fully believe, and of Englishmen, too, for the matter of that, might treat it as a joke of the 'festive season, if we ventured to suggest that the great Apostle of Ireland was anything but an Irishman native and to the manor born. The idea of St. Patrick being an Englishman, a Welshman, a Scotchman, or a Frenchman! Why every Dublin boy knows that Nelson and Wellington were Irish heroes. One might as well pretend that the first of the royal race of O'Brien was a native of Middlesex, as that St. Patrick was born out of the Emerald Isle. So it happens however, that while there has never been the slightest reason to believe St. Patrick first saw the light in Ireland, the controversy about his birthplace has raged among English, Scottish, Welsh, and French antiquaries almost as fiercely as the contest among the Islands of the Ægean Sea for the birthplace of Homer. Was the saint born at Dumbarton, at Bristol at St. David's at Boulogne, in France, or at Glastonbury? In the preface to the second volume of the collection of Ancient Laws and Institutes of Ireland, the Irish editors of the 'Senchus Mor' have thoroughly examined this interesting question; and have arrived at the conclusion, supported as it seems to us by the incontrovertible testimony of the apostle's own confession that St. Patrick was born at or near Glastonbury in Somersetshire, and that he returned in his old age to end his days in the land of his birth, and amidst the scenes of his early youth and was not born, according to the prevalent belief in Ireland, at Downpatrick, near Saul, 'where he had made his first Church in Ireland.' It will be rather a shock to Irish patriotism to learn that her patron saint was the descendant of Roman colonists, a young Roman Decurio or Mayor of Bath. But it may console them to reflect that Glastonbury,

'Where the winter thorn
Blossoms at Christmas, mindful of our Lord.'

and where Joseph of Arimathea had deposited

'The Cup, the Cup itself from which our Lord
Drank at the last sad supper with His own,'

under the shadow of the Tor of St. Michael was no unfitting or unworthy birthplace for this immortal confessor of the Christain faith.—Daily News.

Abusing a Saint.
A correspondent of the Vienna Wanderer, writing from Rome, says: "One summer morning I entered the church of a small mountain village near Tivoli. Before I had time to commence my study of the pictures my attention was attracted by the extraordinary lamentations of a peasant woman. She stood before an altar dedicated to St. Anthony, of Padua and addressed the Saint in the wildest and most excited manner. In the midst of tears and sobs, she exclaimed: "Thou art a cheat, thou art a thief, thou art a villian." These and still stronger epithets were addressed to a painted wooden figure, which of course, continued to smile in undisturbed tranquility, with a white lilly in one hand, and the infant Jesus in the other. The woman continued: I have brought thee candles. I have given thee oil and wine, and yet thou hast permitted my child, the son of a widow, to die; thou art a villianous cheat.' As I began to be concerned for her sanity, I applied to the Priest who was engaged in praying from his breviary. I informed him of what was going on, and was not a little surprised at the answer of the highest spiritual authority in the village. "Sir,' he replied, I will not say that the peasant woman is right in acting as she does, but she is not exactly wrong. She really has made St. Anthony a number of presents at some personal inconvenience to herself, for the widow is poor; and yet the saint has done nothing for her—her child is dead. We must allow the poor woman to speak her mind freely, her complaints are just.'

A YOUNG fellow, eating some Cheshire cheese full of skippers at a tavern one night, exclaimed: "Now I have done as much as Samson, for I have slain my thousands and tens of thousands." "Yes," retorted another, "and with the same weapon—the jawbone of an ass.

GREAT BRITAIN has 14,223 miles of railway, on which has been expended $2,455,000,000. Last year the gross receipts were $200,000,000. Less than half this sum was required for working expenses, so that upward of $100,000,000 remained available in the form of profit.

A Woman in a Trance.
The citizens of Bergen, N. Y., have for some time been quite agitated over a most singular case of a woman who has for a long time remained in a trance or state of catalepsy. The particulars are substantially as follows, as we learn them from the physician in attendance:—It seems that a Miss Eliza Randall, being nearly thirty-five years, about two years ago complained of indisposition. Dr. J. W. Craig, of Churchville, was called, and treated the lady for nervous debility for four or five months, at which period she fell into a sleep, that lasted nearly three weeks, not rousing in the meantime. Subsequently she revived for five or six days; when about a year ago she again fell into a sort of cataleptic sleep and has remained so until about two weeks since, although at remote periods she seemed conscious enough to swallow slight nourishment, when given.

About two weeks ago she roused up considerably, but only complained of a severe headache, although her lengthened lying in one position on the bed had caused severe hip-sores, which to ordinary people would be very painful. She has again relapsed into the same unconscious state, which seems to baffle all professional skill, but what the upshot of the case will be, whether she will ultimately recover or finally sink under this prolonged suspension is a point of conjecture among the faculty. We understand she has been visited by a great number of people who are drawn thither through motives of curiosity to behold this singular mortal.

The Price of Intemperance.
Did you ever wake in the night in great terror over some dream? Some fiendish danger was just before you, and you cried out in fear for "Mother, mother!" Though there was nothing near to hurt you, yet your terror was just as real as though a lion was in the room.

Now, the imaginary terrors of a man in the delirium which drinking causes must seem very funny to lookers on, who know there is no danger; but they are terrible beyond all thought to those who experience them.

A man living in New Haven, Conn. drank so deeply that his reason was for a time overthrown. When his paroxysms came on, he fancied that he saw before him men preparing to flay him alive. Slowly they began their dreadful work, cutting his flesh with keen little saws, then tearing off his skin in strings, and hanging it upon wires before his eyes. He would shriek and cry out in as terrible agony as if they were really doing it. Then he would imagine that his heart was a cage of wild beasts, who were tearing, growling and fighting with each other. He would beg his companions to tear them out, and when, to gratify him, they would pretend to do so, a feeling of deathly faintness would come over him. Then he would think those about him were throwing sharp hooks at him, trying to fasten them in his flesh. He would wrestle and fight for hours with his unseen foes, until the sweat poured from him in streams.

Did he not pay dear for his cups? Was the little pleasure he got out of them worth all that agony?

What Young Men Should do.
1. Every young man should make the most of himself, intellectually, morally and physically.

2. He should depend upon his own efforts to accomplish these results.

3. He should be willing to take advice from those competent to give it, unless his own judgment or conviction, properly founded should otherwise direct.

4 If he is unfortunate enough to have a rich and indulgent father, he must do the best he can under the circumstances; which will be to conduct himself very much as though he had not those obstacle to overcome.

5. He should never be discouraged by small beginnings, but remember that all great results have been wrought out from apparently slight causes.

6. He should never, under any circumstances, be idle. If he cannot find the employment he prefers, let him come as near his desires as possible; he will thus reach the object of his ambition.

7. All young men have 'inalienable rights among which none is greater or more sacred than the privilege to be 'somebody.'—Dunn.

SALTING MILCH COWS.—Wm. Edgar, of Lowville, Lewis County, N. Y., a swiss dairyman of experience, gives the method practised in Switzerland, by the best stock keepers, in salting stock. He says that cows should be salted early every morning, and if they are fed in the stable, the salt should be given before foddering. Salting in this way improves their appetite; they drink with more regularity, are kept in better health, and give more milk than when salted in the usual way, as practised by dairymen in America. He thinks it very injurious to salt milch cows only once or twice a week, as they will lick too much salt at one time, and drink too much for the day. To have stock do well, they must be fed with regularity, every day alike, and never given too much of anything at one time.

SUNKEN LAKE.—The great natural curiosity known as Sunken Lake is situated in the Cascade Mountains, about seventy-five miles north-east of Jacksonville, Oregon. The walls are 2,000 feet high, and almost perpendicular, running down into the water, and leaving no beach. The depth is unknown, the surface is smooth and unruffled, and it lies so far below the surface of the mountain that the air currents do not affect it. Its length is estimated at twelve miles, and its breadth at ten. No living man has, it is said, ever reached the water's edge. The lake lies "silent, still, and mysterious in the bosom of the everlasting hills, like a huge well scooped out by the hands of genii." Has anyone fished in it? A long line is all that is wanted.

CULTURE OF MINK AND TROUT.—The manufacturing tendencies of the people of Galt, which are evinced in the establishment of foundries, factories, and fish nursery, seem likely to increase rather than diminish. A resident of that town has recently established a mink nursery in the neighborhood of the trout ponds. In this are about half-a-dozen minks, and if the care of these proves to be remunerative, a number more will be added to the stock. This stock, however, is not a very easy one to manage, for although the animals appear to be easily tamed, they are always endeavoring to escape by burrowing. They are not expensive to keep as far as supply them with food is concerned, for they will eat anything and everything in the shape of carrion, and if they can be successfully reared in captivity they will prove to be very valuable.—London Advertiser

Codfish Aristocracy.
True nobility comes of nature, and dates further back than history. Its diploma does not require the seal and signature of men who claim to have gentle blood in their veins. He is a gentleman who is gentle in manners and speech. Sits a scrupulous thought, generations of noble and he fails to become a noble type of manhood—a true gentleman. Birth, money, fortune, culture, wealth, cannot make a man who is mean, a magnanimous, large-hearted, whole souled gentleman. Society cannot sculpture an angry and selfish man into that symmetry of soul and heart which we all admire and honor wherever we find it.

A proud patrician once charged Cicero of his plebian origin. That great orator looked at him with rebuking eyes, and replied: "The nobility of me family beg me in mind that of yours will end with you." There is an indefinable something in the look, tone, gate, speech of a man, which makes him a lord or gentleman.

The former is not trustworthy, uncouth, and not at any moment to give you to understand by signs or manner and speech. No child will be tempted to caress him, no virtuous woman will dare so trust him. He is coarse, rough, and seeks first and at every cost his own personal gratification. If he becomes rich he also becomes pompous, consequential, and tyrannical, and represents a class known as the codfish aristocracy.

Modesty is an attitude of the genuine gentleman. He will not boast of his wealth in the presence of those who are poor. He will not pride himself on his physical strength and vigor, in the society of invalids. He will not offensively obtrude his pet notions on any subject in the company of those who entertain different opinions. A man of honor, you need not fear that he will seek to pry into your private affairs or find out the contents of private letters. If they covered the carpet at his feet, his high sense of honor would prevent his attempting to decipher a line of their contents. In the words of another he "seems to pass with sealed packages." As for the secrets imparted to him in confidence, they are kept from view under the secret seal of his honor.

Best Way of Curing Hams and Bacon.
A correspondent of the New England Farmer has found a way, he says, to do this, which is just right. It is as follows:

'First, we smoke the barrel or firkin by placing it over a small fire of corn or the cobs, which are put in an old tin pan. We have tried cob, sawdust and maple chips, and find that burning cobs and corn together gives the sweetest smoke. Four good sized ears of yellow corn will smoke a fifty pound firkin which will hold two large hams, two pieces of beef, and two or three tongues. The meat is rubbed with two quarts of fine salt, one pint of molasses and three ounces of saltpetre for three days before putting into the firkin; turning and rubbing it twice each day: but if this is too much trouble a pickle can be made of six pounds of coarse salt, one quart of molasses and three ounces of saltpetre, dissolved in two gallons of water and after the meat is closely packed in the firkin this mixture is turned over it. In three or four weeks the meat is ready for use; the beef can be hung to dry, and hams and tongues left under brine. When a ham is cut it can be returned to the pickle: thus it is kept from drying up and from insects. In March or April pour out the brine, to smoke the tub, scald the brine; add one pint of salt to every two quarts of water, which is needful to keep the meat covered; or else, pour away the old brine, and make new. Keep the firkin in a cool dry cellar, or in the ice-house, and your meat will be as sweet as

THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1870.

Consistent—Very!

The people of this neighbourhood are now fully aware that John Carnegie Member of the Ontario Legislature for the West Riding of Peterborough, is Editor-en-Chief of our Town Contemporary; the late Editor having been removed to give place to Mr. C., M. P. P.

The new Editor is cutting on every side: friends and foes, alike, are treated to a slash of his new cutting instrument—the quill.

Mr. John Gordon, candidate in the late election contest here, is roughly handled for protection proclivities. Mr. Gordon during his whole Canvass, boldly avowed his ideas on this point, however.

In another brilliant article, Mr Cockburn, of Victoria, is brought to task for his independent proclivities.

It is well known that John Carnegie, Jr., would never have been elected but for his cry of "No party." He professed to go into Parliament an Independent man. He promised to vote for all good measures irrespective of partyline. In fact, he was to be an Independent member. His article anent Mr. Cockburn gives the lie to his former protestations, and we trust the electors of West Peterborough will bear in mind how reliable a politician Mr. Carnegie has proved himself. The friends of Victoria College will bear in mind how he deserted them on that question, when John Sandfield nodded.

The fact is, Mr. Carnegie has no mind of his own, never had, never will have. His promises are as rotten as political promises can well be. Mr. Cockburn acted somewhat independently; he is sick of it. Mr. Carnegie said he would be independent, but never showed it. Independent men are not desirable, as they are all venal; from all such deliver us. Consistent men are worthy of respect; we always know where to find them. Dare any one, however, say that Mr. John Carnegie, Jr., is a consistant man, as a politician? What he shall prove himself to be as an editor remains to be learned; but he stands on a slippery place.

Red River Murder.

The coalition manner at Ottawa of managing Red River affairs has produced its fruit in the high-handed murder, by Riel, of a Canadian named Scott, who refused to become a party to the half-breed regime.

Mr. Scott, it appears, was imprisoned by Riel, for fear of the active part he was taking in favor of confederation, and the peaceable transfer of the territory to Canada. He made his escape and joined Boulton, in the enterprize for the liberation of the prisoners incarcerated in Fort Garry, by command of the murderer Riel. The liberation of those in the Fort was to a certain extent successful, but Boulton was forced to give up the enterprize in favor of order, before the superior influence of Riel, and because of the lukewarmness of the English and Scotch settlers who were unwilling to be a party to a counter revolution. Scott was taken by a company of Riel's followers and again cast into prison, but shortly after was tried by a number of French half-breeds, who conducted the farcical trial in French, condemned him to be shot, and next morning in front of the Fort, he was cruelly murdered by those inhuman monsters, and at the bidding of the heartless monster Riel, who refused Scott even one day to prepare for death.

The voice of this country has been already heard on this outrage, and it is unanimous that sufficient force should immediately start for the scenes of these cruelties and outrages against civilization, and the cry is loud for vengeance on the murderous demagogue whom untoward circumstances have placed in power in the territory.

The British Government has despatched General Lindsay and a British force to this country, with instructions, we hope, to quell the incipient rebellion, and perhaps some of our Canadian volunteers will be asked to accompany the regulars to the west. Ere long, therefore, we may hope to hear of an end being put to these disgraceful affairs which the incapacity of our Canadian authorities has permitted to grow up through their mismanagement.

To the blundering of John A. McDonald may be attributed the state of murder and outlawry at the Red River capital. The child's play at government that has been permitted to disgrace Canada these fourteen or fifteen years, induced Riel and 200 or 300 miserable creatures of half-breeds to take up arms against the introduction of a government that had wrought such mischief in the eastern provinces, and the weak and pusillanimous Minister of Justice, just as in the case of the Fenian raid, is found unfit for the emergency.

Mr. McDougall, whose ruin was predetermined, had to return before entering on the duties of the office to which he had been appointed. A priest is invoked to the aid of the vascillating John A. and dispatched to flatter murderers to accept the misrule of the coalition. An emissary of the Hudson Bay is also sent to Red River to work against his own interests, and all this time McDonald, Cartier, Howe & Co. are parleying with religious enthusiasts instead of at once ending the high-handed proceeding of a petty trapper.

How long will Canadians permit such men to sway the destinies of the Dominion? Will not the blood of Scott cry for vengeance, not only on Riel the murderer, but also for vengeance on those in power who neglected to take the steps necessary to prevent the murder. Vengeance on the men who, to kill an old political rival, have allowed disorder to prevail, dread and terror to overcome the peaceful inhabitants, and at last murder to stain the soil of the newly acquired territory. Their misrule has cursed Canada, has disheartened the people, has induced marauding expeditions, and to crown all has produced rebellion, plundering and murder in the North-west, rather than be under the jurisdiction of men whose names stink in the nostrils of a few half-breeds.

Is it not amusing also to find that the very influence that John A. has fostered in every possible way, has, behind the curtain, caused this rebellion against his authority? The party in Lower Canada that has kept him in power is now declared the secret fomenters of rebellion against him.

Ashburnham.

Lately this quiet village has become some what noisy to the no small annoyance of the always quietly disposed portion of the citizens. There is a habitation of some notoriety, that is doing much in the way of training those who frequent it, in the arts of vice; rowdyism is rampant in and around the establishment, to the detriment of its frequenters too, who do not always escape punishment.

The Council on Manday night agreed to employ a constable to see after those who cannot take care of themselves. We hope he may succeed in restoring to their right minds, the insane creatures who are annoying the community and ruining themselves. The great trouble is caused by outsiders, from the town and country, who resort to the suburbs for their own purposes—not always good. We purpose however getting a special reporter, and take notes of those who have enough to do at home, but prefer grog shops and places of illfame to their quiet cottages in the rural districts.

In the meantime a constable is engaged, and ready to see that quiet and peace are maintained, and we feel satisfied that he will succeed. Let him make a descent on all places of doubtful repute, and drive the simpletons who resort to such places to their own firesides.

On Monday evening, we learn a young man was almost murdered at one of those dens of infamy.—We understand that he has three severe cuts in the head, and at present it is doubtful what may be the result.

There was a meeting of the ratepayers of Belmont and Methuen, held at Garrison's School House on Saturday last.

Town Council.

April 4th, 1870.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—His worship the Mayor presiding, and Messrs. English, Rutherford, Morrow, Kennedy, Helm, Edmison, Dickson, Smith, Doharty, Toole, O'Beirne and Stevenson.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were received from Mr. J. A. Hall, secretary of the St. Andrews' Society, asking the Council to appoint a committee to meet a committee of the St. Andrew's and St. George's Societies tomorrow evening, to take steps in view of the expected immigration this year;

From Mr. C. J. Blomfield, agent of the Canadian Land and Emigration company, calling the attention of the Council to the importance of moving in the way of securing the trade of the back country, and asking an appropriation of $1500 to be paid to the Crown Lands' Department, provided the department will finish the Buckhorn road;

From R. Hamilton, in reference to the powder magazine. These were all received.

Petitions were received from Jas. Campbell and others, asking the Council to make the additions asked for in the Music Hall;

From Samuel Jayes and others, asking the Council not to make the alterations in the old Town Hall; considering the time had arrived to build the new Town Hall. These petitions were received.

Mr. Helm, chairman of the special committee on Mr. Hill's petition for the extension of the Music Hall, read the report of the committee, recommending the additions prayed for.

It was moved by Mr. Helm, seconded by Mr. Toole, that the report of the committee be received and adopted.

In amendment, it was moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Smith, that the report of the committee be adopted and that the tender be asked for as soon as the lessee of the Hall signifies his willingness to furnish the necessary means to complete the Hall; the town to allow him payment in rent and eight per cent. interest till the principal and interest are paid; Mr. Hill paying, as he proposes, fifty dollars per annum in addition.

The amendment was declared lost and so was the original.

Mr. O'Beirne not having voted for either the amendment or the original motion, the Mayor decided to put the amendment and motion again.

Mr. Doherty then moved, seconded by Mr. English,—That the Council leave the old Town Hall as it is, without further additions at present.

This was declared lost.

Mr. Stevenson's amendment was put and lost.

The motion was then put and lost on the following division:

YEAS.—Messrs. Helm, Toole, Edmison, Rutherford, Kennedy and Morrow.

NAYS.—Messrs. Stevenson, Doharty, Dickson, English, Smith and O'Beirne.

It was moved by Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Morrow.—That the Clerk be authorized to get a hundred copies of the by-law of the revised Rules of Order of this Council printed for the use of the Council.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Helm, seconded by Mr. Doherty,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to lay a new plank walk, 12 feet wide from the corner of Faucher's Hotel to the Market House.—Carried.

Mr. O'Beirne as chairman of the Committee to whom was referred the Butchers' Petition and the Rate-payers, referred to at last meeting, read the report of said Committee.

On the motion of the adoption of the report, these voted Yea:—Messrs. Smith, O'Beirne, Morrow, English, Dickson Stevenson.

Nays,—Messrs. Toole, Rutherford, Edmison, Doharty, Helm, Kennedy.

There being an equality of votes, the Mayor declared the motion negatived.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Doharty;—That the salary of his worship the Mayor be paid quarterly, and the amount to be the same as last year. Carried.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

MEANS OF BEAUTY.—I have come to the conclusion, if man or woman, either, wishes to realize the full power of personal beauty, it must be by cherishing noble hopes and purposes; by having something to do, and something to live for, which is worthy of humanity, and which, by expanding the capacities of the soul, gives expansion and symmetry to the body which contains it. —Professor Upham.

AN AFFECTIONATE SON-IN-LAW.—On Wednesday night last week Manning Vanderheyden, a wealthy farmer living near here, was murdered in his barn. His son-in-law, E. A. Alexander, reported that the murderer attacked him after killing Vanderheyden, hitting him with an iron pump handel, breaking his arm. Suspicion was aroused that Alexander himself did the deed, and this afternoon, after writing a complete confession, he blew his brains out with a shot gun. His confession states that he meditated the murder for years. He says the Lord prompted him to commit the murder.—New York paper.

South Monaghan.

FIRE.—On Tuesday, the 29th instant, the dwelling house of Mr. James Collins, of South Monaghan, was destroyed by fire. Before noticed, the flames had made such progress that very little was got out of the house. Mr. Collins being from home at the time, observing the fire where he was, he and some others made all haste to the scene, where their timely arrival, with great difficulty, saved the barns and other out buildings. We are informed that the fire originated from a defect in the stove-pipe or chimney. Mr. Collins has come to a heavy loss. We understand the amount of insurance is only a trifle compared with the house and and its contents.—Com.

Mr. John Gordon.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—The Editor of the Review in his last issue "comes out" rather strongly on Mr. Gordon's protectionist resolutions, and in the course of his article accuses Mr. Gordon of "fighting shy" of the question during his canvass in this county.

Now, I should be very sorry to accuse the Editor of the Review of wilfully misstating facts, but if he does not do so in this instance, he must surely be possessed of a singularly defective memory.

Any one who paid the least attention to the addresses delivered by Mr. Gordon during his canvass, must remember that one of his strongest points against the Government, was their vacillating policy with regard to the tariff.

To instance, at the Monaghan meeting, Mr. Gordon, "in his tirade against the Government," said: "In 1866, there was a deficit of several millions, and yet in the face of this Mr. Galt reduced the tariff." In Peterboro, Mr. Gordon said that "Mr. Galt's policy on the tariff was so fluctuating that men of business were unwilling to embark in any enterprise" and he went on to say that "the financial policy must be such as will ensure stability, so as to induce capital. Manufactures must be encouraged, and capitalists induced to come amongst us. Then would labour and capital go hand in hand to build our country up."

If I mistake not, Mr. Gordon on several occasions alluded to his own Mill as a case in point.

I am not a protectionist, and do not agree with Mr. Gordon in all his views, but I think it is only fair that the misrepresentations of your contemporary should not go uncorrected.

By the way Mr. Editor, what do you make of that extraordinary massacre of the Queen's English, entitled "Protection vs. Free Trade"? Is the writer a protectionist, or a free trador, or both, or neither, or does he know himself?

Rumour must surely be in error, in reporting that the new Editor is the person who accused Mr. Walton of a want of education, or is it possible that his idea of a good education consists in his ability to write such a sentence as the following:—"There is doubtless during periods of great mercantile depression goods sent here from the States, &c." Perhaps you can enlighten us?

Yours Truly,
VINDEX.

Peterboro April 5th, 1870.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In your issue of the 31st ult., over the signature of "Dummeronian," I notice a reply to the communication of "A Traveller" published in a recent number of the Review, and as both writers appear to have considerably misrepresented matters, in connection with our little burgh here, in not telling the whole truth; permit me to offer a few remarks by way of explanation and correction.

And, first our friend "A Traveller" admits that on arriving at Warsaw, he saw three fine churches, and noticed other evidences of improvement, and no doubt contemplated on the fact, that in a place of so much progress, a village, in the vicinity of which the birds are singing on the trees in the morning, and by the aid of Choate's factory in the evening, the Cabinet Makers of Peterborough and Norwood are sounding the praises of the same wood made into chairs and bedsteads; where the sound of the many circular saws with the music of its anvils, testify to the almost Sheffield character of the place; where its inhabitants (as well as the birds and anvils) are of a musical turn of mind: where every face one meets is radiant with geniality, and where its combined musical talent, leaving out the sound of the anvils and the sharpening of its saws, is of such an order, that during last winter its choir responded to invitations from nearly all the surrounding villages, not excluding Westwood—the best and most ample hotel accommodation would be found. And as he drew near, "to a house having a signboard indicating it as an Hotel," with all the foregoing thoughts, and many others of innumerable church spires; to say nothing of smoke stacks fitting across his imagination, his anticipated pleasure was boundless as he advanced, as he supposed to a guzzle of good whiskey? But, horror of horrors! He could not gain admittance, and the gate was chained. His liquid eyes about this time became a couple of water sluices in excellent repair. Grief and rage—the former in the predominance—were alternately depicted on every lineament of his beautiful face. "I'll teach" says he, "these Warsawites that I am not going to be humbugged in this manner."

"No pent up Utica shall contract my powers."

"I'll write to the Review; I will, by gum, and I'll blow things up higher than a kite." After some parleying, however, the "landlord's wife," knowing him, admittance was gained.

Now, Mr. Editor, here is a pretty state of things. A house closed with a sign board indicating it as an hotel. A lady and children freezing in such a place as Warsaw, and, worst of all, no whiskey to be got, and all because, as the landlord said, the Council asked an exorbitant sum for a license. Well, what are the facts? The same by-law that was in force last year, under which Mr. Snelgrove then obtained his license, is still in force; no increase in the amount to be paid for a license—thirty dollars, the lowest limit allowed by law has been made, from which I infer that had the lady inquestion or any of her children, through delay, been frozen, the fault would have clearly been the landlord's, as he allowed himself to practice deception. The annoyance to travellers was, however, of short duration, as Mr. Snelgrove within a few days after "A Traveller" was here, took out the required license, and if our friend will call round this way again, he will find the whole establishment in full blast; and two things I will warrant him, he will not be charged twice for the same article, and he will get all his traps house with him, which is not the case with travellers who put up at some hotels I could name, not one thousand miles from Warsaw.

A little further on we are told that the Council permit a grocery close by, having a shop license, to sell liquor, to be drunk on the premises. The Council permit nothing of the kind. The duty of the Council is simply to appoint an Inspector, define his duties, and fix the amount of shop and tavern licenses. This they have done. Statute law provides for the rest, and any person knowing of the contravention of the law can prosecute the offending party.—This "A Traveller" must have known, as he quotes from the statute. Then why in the name of common sense, when he is in possession of so much information bearing on the case, does he not become a prosecutor? As well might the Council blame any individual for not prosecuting, as he the Council. And then, after giving the Council such a dressing, in order to smoothe matters over, he tells us that "the parties" really "to blame are the persons who will apply for this office of Inspector." Wonderful, indeed! that such information should be supplied us, poor benighted Dummeronians, from the hills and groves of Westwood.

I hold, Mr. Editor, that if it be wrong for intoxicating liquor to be sold and consumed, in a licensed shop by retail, it is equally wrong for the proprietor of an unlicensed tavern to do so, and just as wrong for any person, knowing the provisions of the law, to call for, and consume it under such circumstances. People who live in houses the sides and doors, and roof, as well as the windows of which are glass, and very brittle at that, should not throw stones; and here is where the fun comes in. It is currently reported in this town of ours, that "A Traveller" bought, paid for, and drank more than one horn of the aforesaid stimulant, during his brief visit to the Hotel in question. If such really was the case, I think the less slime and mud he throws, the better for himself. I shall expect a distinct answer on this point in his next letter.

I shall not occupy much space Mr. Editor in attending to "Dummeronian." I agree in the main with what he has written, but when he states "that the public agree in opinion with the landlord that an adjacent grocery with a shop license sold whiskey by the glass without stint, and was let alone or rather encouraged in this practice by the authorities legally constituted for the suppression of such illegal conduct," he simply states what is not true. But it is true that an action was brought against the proprietor of said shop by a blundering baboon, who so mismanaged his case, that the magistrates, and there were three on the bench, could give no other decision than to dismiss the case.—Then because a conviction was not made, evidence or no evidence, because the magistrates who are supposed to be judges, not prosecutors, did their duty faithfully. Some who occupy high position in this municipality are threatened with extermination in January next. On this point I beg to inform "Dummeronian" that the J. P's of our Dominion are not dependent upon Municipal votes for their appointments.

But there are some magistrates in Dummer who are also councillors, and this appears to be the policy. No matter how good a councillor a man makes if he, as a J. P., acts independently on the bench; in other words, if he is above becoming a partizan, he is not to be allowed to sit in the Council. If this is the object of "Dummeronian," let him avow it plainly, but I submit, it is rather early to commence a canvass for the next election.

Reference is made by my friend "Dummeronian" to a "double shuffle." Now it happens that there are more kinds of shuffle than the "double." There is, for instance, among others, a shuffle of cards, and Prior says:

"We sure, in vain the cards condemn;
Ourselves both cut and shuffled them."

And the fact is, the men, or at-least two of them, who are to be shuffled off the municipal coil next January, are men not of yesterday; they have lived their lives here, have stood the brunt of more than one election; now enjoy the confidence of the people, and depend upon it, Mr. Editor, are not going to be frightened out of their boots, even at next election, by a little newspaper gaseous correspondence.

"Dummeronian" says "it is true we have the laws to guide us in these affairs, but where shall we find men of sterling integrity to administer these laws?" This is an admission I was not prepared for.—The Council, then, have been doing their duty in passing good and wholesome laws, but men are wanted to execute them. Does our friend mean to insinuate that we have not such in our township? Was not the appointment of Mr. Jas. Wason, who is a teetotlar, and a man in every way worthy of respect, to the office of Inspector—a good one? and have we not men amongst us who can fill any office in our township with credit to themselves and advantage to the community? If not we are in a pitiable condition indeed. I am not one of those who look on the dark side of everything.

As I have already occupied too much space in the discussion of these matters, allow me, in conclusion, briefly to say, that in my next I shall furnish you with a list of names of good and true and able men, as I do not wish it to go abroad, that we have nobody in Dummer, and to say that the first thing to be done in getting out candidates to displace "some that occupy high position here" is, to get them to agree to stand a nomination, and when this is accomplished, the next difficulty is—to elect them.

I am truly, &c.,
CREDENA.

A Paris letter published in a New York paper, says the authority for the announcement of the serious illness of the Pope is a lady profoundly devoted to the Holy See, who has just been received by Pio Nono, and who found His Holiness grievously changed for the worse. His glance has lost its vivacity, and his voice has become feeble. Attempts are made, it says, to conceal the facts, but great anxiety is felt at the Vatican.

In the Public Accounts' Committee yesterday, Hon. Mr. Holton moved a resolution condemning the refundment of duty to Messrs. Gooderham and Worts out of the unforeseen expenses fund. He was seconded by Mr. Mackenzie, and gentlemen urged that such a payment was a misappropriation of the fund, and that it ought to have been submitted as a vote to Parliament, no haste being necessary. In the course of the discussion Hon. Mr. Wood remarked, that if that sort of thing went on the Estimates would be useless. The motion was lost by 11 to 8, the majority of the members being represented by Messrs. Howe, Langevin and Tilley, three members of the Cabinet, whose act was called in question, and a paid official, Mr. Walsh. Hon. Mr. Holton then proposed a resolution declaring that payments under the head of unforseen expenses should be limited to items coming within the service of the year for which it is voted. Sir. F. Hincks objected, that the proper time to take an expression of opinion on such a matter would be in Committee of the Whole. He did not wish prematurely to express an opinion on the motion. Mr. Mackenzie supported the resolution and commented significantly on the character of the majority by which the last motion had been defeated. Ultimately Hon. Mr. Holton withdrew his resolution and instead move that the proceedings of the Committee respecting the expenditure in question be reported to the House. This was carried, and the Hon. Mr. Wood then raised a discussion on the building fund.

Public Works.

From the Report of Public Works for the year ending June 30th, 1869, we obtain the following interesting notices respecting the Government Works on the River Trent. In ascending the River Trent from Lake Ontario to Lake Scugog, the chain of rivers and lakes which communicate with each other, occur in the following order.

The Bay of Quinte, River Trent, Rice Lake, Otonabee River, Clear Lake, Rockhorn Lake, Pigeon Lake, Sturgeon Lake, River Scugog and Lake Scugog.

The distance from the mouth of the Trent to Port Perry, at the head of Lake Scugog, is 190 miles.

The works on these waters are principally connected with the descent of timber. The difference of level between Lake Ontario, at the mouth of the Trent, and the head of Lake Scugog, is 870½ feet, and of the whole distance between the two points only 152½ miles are navigable, while 37½ miles are not practicable for boats.

The Government has works at the following places:—

	Distance in miles above the mouth of River Trent.
On the River Trent, at Nine mile Rapids (Widow Harris')	9
" Chisholm's Rapids	15½
" Ranney's Falls	33½
" Campbellford	34½

" Middle Falls	37½
" Crow Bay	38
" Healey's Falls	42½
" Crook's Rapids	54½
On the River Otonabee—Whitins Rapids	93

The waters on this line of navigation were very low in the autumn of 1868, and very high in the spring of 1869. Ordinary repairs were executed.

THE NINE MILE RAPIDS.—The works here consists of a stone dam 1,265 feet in length, with a lose of 10 feet and an average of six feet in height.

CHISHOLM'S RAPIDS.—At Chisholm's Rapids the works are a dam 715 feet long, averaging six feet in height, a slide for the passage of lumber 100 feet long by 50 feet wide, and a navigable canal a little more than half a mile long with a stone lock 133 1-6 feet long by 32½ feet wide, and 4½ feet water on the sills. The dam and slides are in a serviceable condition, but the gates and woodwork of the lock are much decayed; they are not repaired because the canal is never used.

RANNEY'S FALLS.—At Ranney's Fall's the works consists of a dam 414 feet in length, and averaging 12 feet in height, a slide 2,302 feet long by 33 feet wide, guide booms and piers above the dam extending 1,352 feet, all in working order.

CAMPBELLFORD.—At Campbellford there are guide booms.

FIDDLER'S ISLAND.—At Fiddler's Island there is a cross dam and a wing dam—the united length of which is about 400 feet.

MIDDLE FALLS.—At Middle Falls the work consists of a lower dam 97 feet long with a slide 455 feet long, by 33 feet wide. An upper dam consisting of two short dams 48 feet in length each, with a slide 60 feet in length and 33 feet in breadth.

HEELY'S FALLS.—At Heely's Falls there is a dam 488 feet long and averaging eight feet in height, also two slides, the lower one being 713 feet long and the upper one 300 feet long, 33 feet in breadth, and a guide boom conducting the timber from one slide to the other.

CROOK'S RAPIDS.—The works consist of a dam 253 feet long, with a slide 79 feet long and 33 feet wide—booms and piers above the slides to conduct the timber—a short canal with cut stone locks, 134 feet long by 33 feet wide, and six feet of water on the mitre sills—and a swing bridge over the canal.

WHITLAS RAPIDS.—At Whitlas Rapids the works consist of a wing and cib dam, the united length of which is 483 feet, with a cut stone lock 133½ feet long by 33 feet wide, and four feet of water on the sills. Since the construction of the Port Hope & Peterborough Railroad, these works have fallen out of use and have not been kept in repair.

LITTLE LAKE.—At Little Lake there are three piers and a boom ¾ of a mile long.

BUCKHORN RAPIDS.—At Buckhorn Rapids the works consist of a wooden dam 387 feet long, with stone work extension on each side 173 feet long a slide 65 feet long by 33 feet wide, 900 feet of boom, and a bridge 600 feet long.

BOBCAYGEON RAPIDS.—At Bobcaygeon Rapids the works consist of two dams, the united length of which is 1,262 feet, and averaging six feet in height—two slides, one for the passage of round logs and the other for the passage of square timber—a cut stone lock 134 feet long by 33 feet wide, with a depth of water on the sills of 4½ feet, and a swing bridge. A fish way was erected here.

LINDSAY.—At Lindsay the works comprise a dam 280 feet long, averaging 9 feet in height, a slide 54 feet long by 33 feet wide, and a bridge 172 feet long. The lock originally constructed at this place was converted into a slide in 1859.

House of Commons.

DOMINION NOTES.

Sir Francis Hincks moved the third reading of the Bill respecting the Dominion notes.

Mr. Budwell moved that the Bill be referred back to committee of the whole, to provide that no notes of less denomination than one dollar be issued.

Sir Francis Hincks thought it much to be regretted that hon. member should have postponed his motion till this stage. There would not be any effort on the part of the Government to put this fractional currency into issue. Any one who looked into the resolution could see that the Government had no intrest in putting this currency into circulation. The Government were taking every possible step to bring up the coinage of Canadian silver now going on in the English mint. Three cable messages had passed between him and Sir John Rose who had kindly offered to hurry up the coinage. It was impossible for the Government to say how much silver would be required for the use of the country. The fractional currency would be issued only as a temporary substitute until the arrival of the Canadian coinage. The Government would be able to tell by the amount of paper currency issued how much silver coinage would be required. The petitioners who memorialized Parliament on the subject seemed to think that there was a desire to introduce the fractional currency as a permanent institution. This was quite a mistake. The coins would be in only one denomination, 25 cents, and there would not be more than 500,000 of them issued. He defied any member to cite to the House a case in which a fractional currency of this kind had ever been issued. The notes would be redeemable in gold, and would be just as good as larger or Dominion notes, and redeemable in exactly the same way.

Mr Mackenzie said the Minister of Finance might informed the House sooner that he intended to issue this wretched fractional currency. If time had been given, the House would have been overwhelmed with petitions against it. He believed this fractional currency would prove a great nuisance to the country.

Mr. Holton asked why the Minister of Militia believed the fractional currency would remove the evil under which he said the country suffered, he did not introduce it sooner as he now claimed he could have done so under the act of 1868. With regard to the remarks of the Minister of Finance that the hon. gentleman seemed disinclined to proceed with the currency bill, and therefore it was necessary to bring up the subject of fractional currency in connection with the Dominion note bill. The value of American silver to-day on the dollar; through it was intrinsically worth about 93c on the dollar. By statute the British shilling was fixed at 24c, now, although, it was intrinsically worth something less than the American quarter, it was proposed to reduce the value of the latter to 20c. A more absurd proposition it would be difficult to contrive. This was the wisdom of the Government in dealing with the silver nuisance. It was a greater nuisance some years ago and why did the Government wait till they got a wail from the tropics (laughter) before taking steps to remove the evil which, according to their own showing they had power to deal with all along.

Mr. Cartwright objected to the fractional currency, as being more liable to forgery than larger denominations, as was evident from what had taken place in the United State, where forgery of the fractional currency was in some cases one-third, and in some cities one-half, of of the circulation. He commented on the delay in the matter till gold had come to 10 or 12 perium; as the medicine men did, who would not make rain till they saw some signs of its appearance. There was every appearance of a resumption of specie payment in the United States. He agreed with the member for Montreal that the proclamation could not effect the reduction of silver to 80 when it was worth 93.

Mr Workman reiterated his statement respecting the Finance Minister's Agents, banks when they received his first letter nominating him, whether they should answer it, and ultimately did so only out of courtesy to the Finance Minister.

Sir Francis Hincks said he had been elected not on account of his wealth, but because he had been for several years engaged in the work for which he was required and for which no other man that he knew was capable. He denied that any of the banks had refused to act with his agent except one.

The members were then called in and a division taken, when the amendment was lost Yeas 38, nays 105.

WOMAN'S AFFECTION.—Man is the creature of interest and ambition. His nature leads him forth into the struggle and bustle of the world. Love is but the establishment of his early life, or a song piped in the intervals of the acts He seeks for fame, for fortune, for space in the world's thought, and dominion over his fellowmen. But a woman's whole life is a history of the affections The heart is her world: it is there her avarice seeks for hidden treasures. She sends forth her sympathies on adventure she embarks her whole soul in the traffic of affection and if shipwrecked her care is hopeless—for is is a bankruptcy of the heart.

A late Catholic bishop of New York said to a friend:—"I have found that the laboring classes under my charge in the city of New York pay for drams alone at the grog shops $1,250,000 annually. Money saved to the Irish in New York and converted into comfortable dwellings, better clothing, better education to their children, would soon elevate them to a condition and respectability which would do honor to the country of their adoption."

THE HON. MR. MCDOUGALL.—The Hon. Mr. McDougall is rapidly gaining health and strength. He is now able to sit up in his room a few hours each day. His second daughter, Miss Maria, has attended him during his illness, at the risk of contracting the loathsome disease, indicating great strength of mind on the part of the young lady, as well as great affection for her father. This is the daughter who watched at Mr. Mcdougall's bed side when he lay at the point of death in England, who volunteered to share the comparative discomfort and hardship of the North-West with him, and who braved the rigors of the winter journey from Pembina along with the expelled Governor. —Toronto Telegraph.

We refer the reader to the following testimony in favor of Dr Radway's Remedies, from gentlemen of high character in Brazil. For every word not true the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid:

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 22d, 1866.

MESSRS. RAYMUNDO C. LEITE & BRO:

GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your favor of 20th instan, asking my opinion in regards to the efficacy of DR. RADWAY & Co's preparations. I am happy to say that I consider the Relief and Pills the best remedies ever known, and to form such an opinion I am obliged to prove it, which I will do willingly viz: I suffered so much from "colic" that when I was attacked it pained me so much that I prefered death to such sufferings, I took everything that was reccomended, but it was of no use; at last I took 4 of Radway's Pills, after which the pains were very moderate, and then I thought that I was cured, but the pains were still violent (which I attribute to the negligence in my part in not following it up as directed,) that I was obliged to give in to my friend's requese to take sum "Relief," which he gave he gave me in a dose of one tablespoon in a tumbler of water in the interval of three minutes I felt relieved immediately, and fifteen minutes after the pain ceased. It is three months since I had an attack, and should I feel any symptoms of it I take the "Relief," I will do all in my power to convince the doctors of the good results of these medicaments, so that they may prescribe them.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

LUIZ JOSE DA SILVA CAMPOS.

INFLAMMATION OF THE BREAST, or Ague in the breast, and it is sometimes popularly called, is an affection frequently met with among nursing women and which may take place at any period during suckling. It is generally caused by cold though it may be occasioned by permitting the the breast to become distended with milk, as in sore nipples or among those mothers who remain long at parties, theatres balls &c, leaving their infant at home; it may also follow improoper pressure on on the breast, machinical injuries &c. To relieve the pain reduced the inflamation and restore the breast to a natural condition use Briggs' Modern Curative which unrivalled by known remedy. Dr J Briggs & Co. DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes meet persons say, my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order; they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. THE SARSAPARILLA DIGGERS OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico. and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr J. C. Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and posterity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

A Warning.

BY SARA O. CHAPA.

Oh, touch not the rosy wine cup!
'Tis poison that lurks within!
And the sight of its maddening beauty
Will lure you through years of sin.
It may flush with a ruddy brightness,
And tempt the degarded one,
But its gleam is a serpent glitter,
Which once has the world undone.

Look not on the rosy wine cup,
For its brilliance will charm thine eye;
And he who has drunk its contents
Has opened a way to die.
Not die as the world might call it,
But die to the good and true,
And blunt all the fine perceptions
That ever ennobled you.

There is power in the rosy wine cup
To send through the heart and brain
A thrill like electric lightning
To stifle the bosom's pain;
But it will only restore the sharper
When the fire of the wine has passed,
For the dreams which it may awaken
Are only too bright to last.

Oh, trust not your power of keeping
Yourself from the shoals before!
Your strength, in an evil moment,
May leave you forevermore;
For the wine cup has conquered millions,
And the brightest minds of earth
Have sunk to the lowest level
From a glass in an hour of mirth.

There are desolate homes, where the demon
Of drink has destroyed their light;
There are hearts that have loved too fondly,
And bowed 'neath the wine cup's blight.
Put away, then, the sparkling poison!
Your danger you may not see,
But heed and obey this warning,
And retain your nobility.

The Bird With Two Songs.

Standing in the garden with a stranger one cloudy, chilly, unsummer-like afternoon in June. Near us was a large clump of lilac bushes, into which we saw a bird of a dingy, faded, black color fly. Presently she broke out into what, perhaps, she called a song; but it was, in reality, just like the fat squalling of an old cat. 'Yaah! yaah!' she continued to cry.

'Pray,' said the stranger, 'what bird is that makes such a horrible noise?'

That, sir, is the cat-bird.'

'I should think so, and a burnt cat too! I thought it was homely enough to the eye, but the color is nothing to this screech.'

'I can't say much at present to defend the poor bird, for looks and voice are a gainst her. But I am confident you will think better of her ere long.'

The next morning I found my friend standing on the piazza, listening to the notes of a bird in a thick sugar-maple near by — The song was that of a mocking-bird, not so wonderful as the notes of a real mocking-bird, nor even so wonderful sweet as that of the thrush, yet they were round and full, and often exquisite. She seemed to repeat the note of every bird with which he was acquainted, robbin, sparrow, oriole, and the like, and with surprising accuracy The morning was fair, the air still, and the bird seemed to be swallowed up in song.

'Pray tell me,' said my stranger friend, 'what bird is that which sings so delightfully?'

'That is our cat bird.'

'You must be making fun of me. You don't pretend to say that the homely, squalling bird we heard yesterday, and this singer are the same?'

'I do, indeed, and to convince you, I will throw a stone into the tree and drive her out, and you shall see it is the same bird'

With that I threw the stone, and out popped Mrs. Cat bird, making directly for the lilacs, where she began to scream 'yaah! yaah!'

The gentleman looked on in amazement.

'This bird,' said I, is very much like some people. In those lilacs she has her nest, and that is her home; but there she never utters a pleasant note. I shou d think her husband would avoid her, and her little ones tremble at the sound of her voice.—But when she gets away from home up in the lofty tree, you see how sweetly she can sing.'

'I know many people just like her.—When away from home they are full of gentle ways; but see them at home! and the cat bird notes are theirs.

'Oh yes,' said the stranger, 'I know scores of such people, fathers and mothers, so smiling and pleasant away from home, but the moment they enter their own doors they are cold, silent, and repulsive. And some young ladies so lively and obliging when away from home that we would think them uncommon lovely; but while at home, disrespectful to parents, coarse and unlovely.—Like our cat bird with her two songs, cheerful and well-bred among strangers, but the moment they get home, rude, disobedient, rough and ill-tempered.'

What is the reason people will be so?

Marbleizing Slate.—Marbleizing slate is said to be carried on extensively at the quarries in Vermont. The process is described as follows: The slate is sent to the mill in rough blocks, and is there planed down to the thickness of an inch; patterns are then drawn upon the slabs, which are cut into the proper shapes and polished. —The mechanical part of marbleizing process has been patented, but the secret consists in a knowledge of the marbleizing composition. The materials is prepared in a vat, and the slab is let down upon the composition, which adheres to the surface of the slate. The slab is next baked in an oven over night, and then receives a coat of varnish manufactured for this especial purpose, and after six repetitions of these processes the slab is finally removed and polished. It is asserted that the coating is then so firmly united to the slate that it can not be scaled or chipped off without taking the slaty particles with it.

Keeping Iron and Steel Goods from Rust — Iron and steel goods of all descriptions are kept from rust in the following manner; Dissolve ¼ oz. of camphor in 1 lb of hogs lard, take off the scum, and mix as much black lead as will give the mixture an iron color. Iron and steel goods, as well as machinery of all kinds, rubbed over with this mixture, and left with it on for twenty-four hours, and then rubbed with a linen cloth, will keep clean for months. If the machinery is for exportation it should be kept thickly coated with this during the voyage.

An Eastern Utah.—Brigham Young has sent seventy-five elders and preachers to Long Island to gather into the fold of the Latter Day Saints all who will embrace their doctrines. These missionaries have made Baldwinsville, a village on the island, their head quarters, and are holding protracted meetings there, not without an ess. Brigham Young has announced his intention of forming an Eastern Utah, and it is supposed from the number of missionaries sent to Long Island, and the zeal displayed in making converts, that it has been selected as the point from which shall flow the streams of Mormonism.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its accession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevator according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 2 & Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

SCANDAL.

'Tis whispered at Court, 'tis uttered at ball,
'Tis a curse to the cottage, a curse to the hall,
It blights the young maiden, and ruins the youth
By its venomed tongue, and semblance of truth.
The bad all shrink from it, the good it avoids.
For thousands from virtue are by it decoyed.
It falls to the maiden, the matron, the sage,
The master, the servant, the warrior and page.
It falls on the royal, the peasant and slave,
And oft on the hero, the quiet in his grave:
It falls on the rich, the beggar, the young,
All alike are reviled by its terrible tongue
We hear it of persons, we hear it of nations,
Wars often are caused by its false revelations,
The severing Simoon on the lone desert cast,
Is by far not so cruel as its cold cruel blast;
For the breath of the Simoon extinguishes life,
While hope, joy and love, all by scandal are rife.

Value of Liquid Manure.

The best use of liquid manure is undoubtedly that of absorbition by muck. Many farmers who would not like to be called careless or wasteful, have their barn yards or stables so unfortunately located that the urine of the cattle escapes; or, if a good heavy rain comes the soakings of the manure are here and there scattered throughout the yard in pools. It ought to be their duty to cover all their manure, and not permit it to soak, but failing in that the next best plan is to draw into the yard large quantities of muck from the swamp, let it be trodden over by the cattle and let it absord the liquid onging out of the entire yard. At least every three months the entire yard should be cleaned out, the manure piled in heaps, and replaced with muck again. If the farmer could afford the expense it would be better to have the yard slightly sloping, with a cistern at the lower end to collect the liquid manure; this can be pumped out as fast as filled on to a pile of muck close at hand, which will require very little time, and yet add many loads of valuable manure to the farmer's manure heap. We cannot urge farmers too much to save all their manure and make as much more as they can. Next to labor the farmer's most important problem is manure. Prices may fluctuate, but a well manured field will never fail to yield a good profit.

Ingenious Charades.

A novel plan of drawing-room charades is thus described by a participator: The curtain of the back drawing-room was drawn aside, and we were rather surprised to see nothing but a wooden rocking-horse on the temporary stage. We were told to guess an Island in the Greek Archipelago. After some demure one individual brighter than the rest exclaimed, "Delos—deal horse." Right; the curtain fell, and after a pause rose again, displaying to the astonished lookers on the very identical, irrepressible rocking-horse, with his head in the contrary direction. We were told to guess another Island in the Greek Archipelago. There was a dead silence. Some one ran hastily suggested "Chios," mispronounced shy horse! but that would not do, for the deal horse was as steady as old time. At length a small boy, late from school, exclaimed, "Samos," and it was the same horse. The curtain fell amidst roars of laughter. The next scene was a portly gentleman of middle age, who was met by a young girl, who said; "Doctor, I am glad to meet you." A word of five syllables. Give it up. 'Metaphysician—not a physician." The curtain fell, and was again drawn up—only to exhibit the same portly gentleman and the girl meeting again. A word of three syllables, "metaphor—met before" was the solution.

Florence Nightingale.—This renowned woman, whose presence has brought hope and comfort to so many dreary hospital wards, is, we are sorry to learn, herself an invalid and confined closely to her room If the blessings and prayers of thousands, relieved by her skilful and tender nursing, could restore health, she would soon be again busy in the divine employment of devising and executing plans for the benefit of the suffering.

Cement for Closing Cracks in Stoves etc.—A useful cement for closing up cracks in stove plates, stove boors, etc., is prepared by mixing finely-pulverized iron such as can be procured at the druggist's, with liquid water-glass, to a thick paste and then coating the cracks with it. The hotter the fire becomes, the more does the cement melt and combine with its metallic ingredients, and the more completely will the crack became closed.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which, had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

CHILBLAINS OR PERNIO, is a painful inflammatory swelling, of a red, purple, or bluish color which affects the fingers, toes, heels, and other parts of the extremities, in consequence of their exposure to serve cold. The pain is not constant but appears at certain times, and is rather of a shooting and pungent character, and an annoying itching is present; these symptoms are more commonly aggravated in cold and damp seasons the skin may remain entire, it may break and discharge a thin fluid or it may when the cold has been intense or long-continued, slough around the effected parts and leave a foul irregular, and painful ulcer. Children and old persons are more apt to be affected with Chilblains from exposure to cold than theose of middle age more especially those of a scrofulous taint. Those who are subject to this species of 'frost bite,' should be carful in cold and damp weather to keep the feet well warmed and dry and when cold to warm them by friction or exercise and not by placing them near a fire or warm stove. Dr. J Briggs' Modern Curative, used according to directions, will cure the worst Chilbains restoring the parts to a sound and healthy appearance. Sold by Druggists ase Country Dealers Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 204 Broadway, N. Y., and No 6 King St. west. Toronto.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The protection this celebrated medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by its powerfulness alterations and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination mingled with the blood, and which, when they were painfully evident, have been speedily cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues at home.

Nevertheless reason is one of the most extensive remedies of our race. Often, this process has united tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasions, rapidly develops into one or other of its loathsome forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no serious symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, in most cases, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or of the forms of Scrofulous disease. Even in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Tic, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and Female Complaints, it has proved itself a potent remedy. For Mercurial Diseases, Chronic Rheumatism, and Gout, when caused by the usual accumulations of excrementitious matter in the blood, it should be freely taken. In short, for Purifying the Blood, it is the best alterative yet discovered. Combining, as it does, the most powerful vegetable antidotes known to the Pharmacopœia, with those extracted from the Honduras Sarsaparilla, it is far more effectual for the purposes of a blood medicine than any other compound that can be had. Its virtues are such as to commend it to the confidence of the afflicted everywhere. Being sugar-coated, it is pleasant to take, and is perfectly safe in any quantity that may be required. Those who have been long afflicted, and who have become discouraged by the failure of many nostrums, may rest assured that this will do them no harm, and will surely benefit them. Prepared by

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine has anything won such unbounded confidence upon the confidence of mankind as this antidote for pulmonary complaints. Throughout long series of years, and among most of the cases of men it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, has made it known as a reliable protector of all of them. While subjected to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for the incipient consumption, and for the unconscious affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as these are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, yet great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by the use of the Cherry Pectoral, and the most distressing cases of this complaint have been relieved by it. Indeed, we have yet to learn the first instance known to us, in which it has failed to relieve the distressed, when any relief was possible. Even in the last stages of consumption, when the hectic fever is consuming the patient, and the sufferer is raising large quantities of purulent matter from the lungs, the Cherry Pectoral will be found to allay the cough, induce refreshing sleep, and make the patient comfortable to the last.

Consumption, Liver Complaint, and Female Complaints, are all subject to it, and all yield to its influence when administered in doses adapted to the severity of the case. Keep the bowels open, the liver active, and the blood pure, with Ayer's Pills, and health will follow the use of the Cherry Pectoral.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong, Pure and Rich Blood — Increase of Flesh and Weight — Clear Skin and Beautiful Complexion, Secured to ALL.

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT

has made the most astonishing cures. So quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes under the influence of this truly WONDERFUL MEDICINE, that

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, unsecured and badly treated Venereal, in its many forms, Glandular diseases, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Boils, Blotches in the Glands, and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, Pimples, Blotches, Mouths, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Erysipelas, Fever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Barbadoes Leg, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all Weakening and Painful Discharges, Blight Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the Life principles, are within the curative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent; and a few days' use will prove to any person using it the either or these forms of disease, its potent power to cure them.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent expel all known remedial agents, in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional Skin and Syphilitic diseases, but it is the only positive remedy for Kidney, Bladder, Urinary, and Womb Complaints, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's Disease, Albuminuria, &c, and in all cases where there are Brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or the color like white silk, or there is a morbid dark, bilious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and when there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of the Back, and along the Loins. In all these conditions Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, aided by the application of Radway's Ready Relief to the Spine and Small of the Back, and the Bowels regulated with one or two of Radway's Regulating Pills per day, will soon make a complete cure. In a few days, the patient will be enabled to hold and discharge his water naturally without pain, and the Urine will be restored to its natural clear, and amber or sherry colors.

THE WASTES OF THE BODY

are supplied with new, healthy and vigorous blood, that furnishes sound structure. Hence all suffering from WASTING DISEASES, and the MALE or FEMALE, of the Womb, Uterus, or other organs, whether Leucorrhea, Sperm, or Eruptive discharges of every kind, or from privileges of "self abuse," from the Genital Glands, or Venereal discharges, or Ulcers, or Sores, through the reparative powers of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is arrested, and the ruptured organs healed

THE TRUE THEORY OF CURE.

Radway's sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies the system, through the blood, urine, sweat, and structure-making constituents, with Tissue-making, Flesh-making, Heat or Caloric, and Fat-making elements. All of its constituents are nourishing, purifying, and strengthening. It Repairs, Heals, Restores, and drives out of the body the products of Decay and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, WHITE SWELLING, DROPSY, SYPHILIS, CANCERS, TUMORS, &c., are all of a scrofulous diathesis, and as such are within the curative range of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent!

1. That Scrofula, by whatever name designated, is the result of deposits from the blood, induced or caused by Chronic inflammation. That these deposits take place when the blood is poor, weak, watery, and incapable of holding in solution its proper constituents, or from the presence of some virus or poison in the blood, as Mercury, Calomel, Corrosive Sublimate, which is the Corrosive Chloride of Mercury, or other agents given in medicines and which enter largely in the common assorted Sarsaparillas, NOT ASSORBED OR CHANGED FROM THEIR NATURAL CONDITION.

2. That unless the repairs or nutriments are greater than the waste, that decomposition and decay will supervene, and the powers of life become exhausted.

3. That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medication that enhances the system, or fails to nourish the blood, the only medium through which the cured forces are preserved, and on which the growth of the body depends.

4 That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before possessed or known to exist in medicine, in that the new and novel principle in Chemical science, which has been brought to bear a perfect system of cure, is exhibited as follows:

1. Its great power in assimilating the food in its first stage of distillation to the process of digestion, as chyme and chyle with the nourishing elements of blood, separating from these liquids refuse and inert qualities before they are taken up by the lacteals and are formed into blood. Here we see that by its wonderful power it changes the system into the very essence or principle that forms the vital powers of the body, and its chemical action on the blood in its primitive and complete condition, separates every atom of refuse material or element, out of which the virus of disease is formed.

2. That the blood thus prepared, and supplied with these nourishing properties, becomes strong, rich and healthy and holds in solution its proper constituents, through the Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and repairs the wastes of the body with sound and healthy structure. Such is the wonderful power the Sarsaparillian Resolvent exerts on the blood and juices of the system, that no virulent humors or poisons will exist by which deposits are made.

3. The rapidity which the Sarsaparillian enters the

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while the weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoneen Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoneen Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoneen Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoneen Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

FIRST DAY.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Second County Sabbath School Convention of Peterborough, commenced its session at 2.30 P. M. on Tuesday, 16th of March, 1870. in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. A considerable number of delegates, and others, from different parts of the county, and some from the neighboring counties, were present.

Mr. R. Rutherford, Superintendent of the Wesleyan S. School, who occupied the chair, pro tem, opened the Convention with singing, "For the Lion of Judah shall break every chain," conducted by Mr. Coates of Toronto, whose services were secured for the Convention. The Rev. Mr. Rogers then read the 4th chapter of the Book of Proverbs. After which the Rev. Mr. Butcher engaged in prayer.

The chairman at the request of the convention, appointed the following gentlemen nominating as a committee; Messrs. J. W. Gilmour, T. Donnelly, Wm. Johnstone, Wm. Brownscombe, and Wm. Cameron.

The chairman remarked that he was pleased to see so many present under the circumstances, at the first session; it augured well for the success of the convention. Though comparatively few in number, God would pour down his blessing upon them, if they earnestly desired it. Their presence evinced an interest in the enterprise which had brought us together, and would undoubtedly be the means of awakening our sleeping energies. He deeply regretted, that, owing to a severe attack of influenza, the Rev. Mr. Marling, of Toronto, was unable to be with us. He was glad to inform them, that the Rev. Mr. Millard, and Mr. Beadle, were present, and he had no doubt, from past knowledge of these gentlemen, they would contribute largely to the success of the convention, and be the means of stiring us up to renewed zeal in Sabbath School work. The Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, who was to deliver the opening address, being absent, he would request Messrs. Beadle and Millard, to occupy the time allotted to him.

Mr. D. W. Beadle, of St. Catherines, said, that if we might judge from numbers, the attendance this afternoon was an evidence, that the Sabbath School workers of the County of Peterboro,' needed no stirring up. He had been acquainted with Sunday School Conventions for many years, and found that the numbers present on the first session were comparatively few, as this is the meeting at which much routine business is transacted. If the following meetings increased in the same proportion as elsewhere we would have a successful convention. The chief end and aim of these meetings are to awaken our dormant energies, to increase our zeal which is so necessary to success. Under the influence of love the affections are drawn towards each other, however different in minor points of scriptural doctorine, we are one in Christ. In laboring for the convertion of the children under his care, (in many instances an arduous task) he had learned by experience, that the older a child is, in the ways of sin, the greater will be the discouragements, and difficulties, that beset the teacher; let us strive then without the least delay, by the help of God to lead their hearts to Jesus. It is especially the field for laymen, let us then faithfully discharge this good work of Sabbath School instruction.

The Rev. Mr. Millard, continually felt a desire to visite Peterboro' as a Sabbath School worker, he had often heard of it, traced it on his pocket map, there were its chain of lakes, its streams and its townships, wherein laid a large field for the Sabbath School Missionary. Mr. Beadle and himself, had come here for the purpose of encouraging and rendering assistance to the association, in maping out and doing their own work so that the most remote and isolated townships might be occupied by Sabbath School workers. He had no doubt that the time was not far distant when in this Dominion of ours there would be a Sabbath School within the reach of every child. And he was sure the good people of Peterboro' would not be behind hand in forwarding this good work.

He regretted exceedingly the absence of Mr. Marling, but if his absence tended towards our placing greater reliance on the Lord, then it perhaps were better he was not here.

The General Secretary read a communication from the Rev. J. H. Marling, expressing his regret that on account of his sickness he was unable to attend the convention, but hoped though absent in body, he would be present in spirit, and make the meeting a subject of prayer to God.

Mr. Thos. Donnelly, Chairman of the nominating Committee, then proposed the following list of Officers, &c., for the Convention:

President.—Mr. D. W. Dumble.
Vice-President.—Mr. Wm. Cameron.
General Secretary and Treasurer.—Mr. J. A. Hall.
Business Committee.—Messrs. R. Rutherford, J. W. Gilmour, Wm. Brownscombe, T. Donnelly, D. Portland, R. Kingan and W. Johnston.

The nominations were unanimously confirmed.

The Chairman called on the Rev. Mr. Burns of Omemee, to introduce the first topic in the programme, viz: "The end and aim of Sabbath School Instruction." He said he would have to throw the whole responsibility of his position on the local committee, who had selected him to the duty of introducing and speaking on this important subject, now brought up for consideration. He would do his utmost, hoping that some good might result, however small. We cannot exist without doing a certain amount of good, no matter how listlessly or selfish may be our desires; the most selfish when in the act of attaining an object, cannot help doing good to some one either directly or indirectly;—therefore, each and every one of us should do a little service in the furtherance of the good cause of Sabbath Schools.

The Sabbath School has one sole and definite object in view, the conversion of every scholar in connection with it. It's work is not an experiment, no trial, no problem to be solved; it is a fact established by experience, that the aim and object in the conversion of the children. Let each individual teacher have this clearly and satisfactorily before his mind. The understanding is enlightened, truths are taught, but unless the soul is taught by God, our labour availeth us nothing.

Some will have it said, that the Bible is too high a standard of teaching for children; no doubt there are great depths, and mighty heights, which the greatest intellect cannot fathom; yet there are shallow streams, and pleasant by-ways, wherein little children's ideas may be refreshed and renovated.

Then again, who should teach? All those who teach, should undoubtedly be christians; devoutly pious, and humble in their manifestations. The end in view settles who are to teach. None are able to teach Christ and him crucified, only those who have Christ's love in their hearts. The work of Sabbath Schools, is somewhat different from that of any other work of the Christian Church. Its operations commenced at early childhood, proceeding upwards toward the perfect man, —modest in its instruction, approaching gradually towards its aim and object, committing all our labours into the hands of the Giver of all Good.

The Rev. Messrs. Davies, and Dyall, fully concurred with the Rev. Mr. Burns, in his remarks on the salvation of the children, we should strive for their conversion, which should be our sole aim and object, nothing more or less,—without this Sabbath School work is comparatively a failure.

Mr. D. W. Beadle, remarked, it should be the teachers real aim and object, to bring the children under his care, into the fold of Christ at once, delay not, time is precious, and souls are fast being called away.

The business committee reported,—That the Rev. Dr. Hamilton, of Woodstock, would take the subject allotted to Mr. Marling, in the next session.

After singing, and prayer by the Rev. Mr. Butcher, the Convention adjourned till seven o'clock.

The Second Session commenced at 7 o'clock. Mr. R. Rutherford occupied the chair. A very respectable and appreciative audiance was present. After the usual devotional exercises,

A communication was read by the General Secretary, from Mr. D. W. Dumble, the President elect, that through pressure of business he could not attend to the duties of President, and begged to decline the office.

The communication was referred to the business committee. The Chairman here stated that in consequence of the absence of Col. Haultain, President of the last Convention, the address from the retiring President being the next in order in the programme, must be omitted; he therefore had great pleasure in calling on the Rev. Mr. Millard, to address them, on "The importance of County Sabbath School Conventions."

Mr. Millard, on rising, said, we who love the Lord Jesus, have through the good providence of God, been brought together for the definite purpose of doing good to one another. No matter what society, be it Temperance, or Bible Societies, or even the church of God itself, it is necessary that its several workers, co-workers, and members be brought together, to get and to give good. As we differ in appearance, so we differ in judgment. Sectarian differences are set aside to such an extent, that it is forgotten to what section of the church we belong. Having the same object in view, we come here for the same purpose, of getting and giving good; impressed with the same hopes and expectations, with discretion do we put forth these remarks, that we offend not, neither take offence; but bearing each others burden, loving one another more deeply, as we see the likeness of the Saviour in each other. Those of a riper experience, brought to bear on the inexperienced, the experience of even the humblest worker is precious, as a means of mutual help and encouragement. The most impressive thoughts expressed in the fewest words, all exert a benign influence on those who attend, each retiring to his or her field of labour with renewed devotion to the work. and a zeal re-kindled with fire from on High; awakened by the stirring anecdotes in which we have taken part, with increased energies, will we labour for our Lord and Master. He had learned from experience, that County Conventions were very valuable to Sabbath School workers, as being a source of information and instruction, that would enable them to do much more good. These Conventions, are chasm in their own teaching.

A collection was taken up to defray expenses connected with the Convention.

The business committee reported that the following gentlemen will address the children's meeting in the Canada Presbyterian Church, to-morrow afternoon, viz:—The Revds. Messrs. Millard, Dyall, Kines, Burt and Mr. D. W. Beadle, for a term of 6 minutes each.

The evening session closed after singing, and prayer by the Rev. Mr. Burt.

The third session commenced at 9.30 a. m., on Wednesday.

After one half hour being spent in prayer unto God to pour down his blessings on the work of Sabbath Schools.

The President proceeded with the business of the convention, and called on Mr. D. W. Beadle of St. Catharines, to introduce the topic "The Sabbath School Teacher". Sabbath School teachers should have a clear and distinct appreciation of their all important duties. Have a system, in the mode of conducting the class, allott a distinct time for each exercise, and let it be confined to that time. He did not at all disapprove of verse, they being a valuable help to the teacher. But too much time must not be expended over them, over time spent is a waste of time. While it is very desirable to have verses let them be few, and well impressed on the mind of the child. Have a discriminate manner of hearing them, you may thus be able to ascertain whether they have taken the pains to commit them thoroughly to memory. Acquaint your scholars with Scripture History, make it a point with each of them to search for themselves. Fix on their minds the moral teachings of the lesson, but rest not there. The principle object of Sabbath School instruction, is to educate the hearts, teach the love of Jesus, engraft it in the mind, let it be seen that love is the motive power of your own actions, so present Christ, that the child may have a clear perception of Him. He did not wish to find fault with non-christaine teachers, but would ask one question. How can we lead children to the Saviour! Study the lesson at the throne of Grace. Study it that we may direct it towards one individual scholar, the truths taught in it we should bring to the heart of one individual scholar of the class. Study also the scholars as much as the lesson; Obtain a knowledge of each scholar by social intercourse, and invitation to your own homes if practicable, make them feel quite at ease in your presence, that they may the more readily speak out their own feelings without restriction. Visit them also in their own homes, make the acquaintance of their parents, let them feel that you are interested in their welfare, and thus obtain a power over them that will not be lightly esteemed. He related a striking instance, wherein the social influence, was the means of converting a whole class of young men. The foundation of successful teaching is love.

Singing "Far from the fold of Jesus," by Mr. Coates.

Rev. Dr. Hamilton said, the remarks of Mr. Beadle, brought to his recollection a portion of scripture wherein it saith, "Charity covereth not itself, is not puffed up." Build up, then, your house in love, love is the great instrumentality whereby all things should be done. He mentioned a case in point, which came under his own observation while in Belfast, of a young student, whose memory was so retentive, that he was able to recite any portion of the New Testiment, by merely mentioning the chapter and verse, and one who bid fair for a life of usefulness in God's service. But through that direful and soul destroying curse, intemperance, died a suicide. Showing that knowledge may puff itself up, but it is as sounding brass, if without charity.

Rev. Mr. Burns, was of the opinion, that, as it is the main object of Sabbath Schools to convert children, the teachers must be converted to God,

Rev. Mr. Millard, deemed it highly necessary, that the teacher should commence the study of the lesson at the commencement of the week, he will then have it before his minds eye throughout the whole week.

Mr. Coates, of Toronto, recommended the use of question drawer in Sabbath Schools as being a source of instruction that would be taken hold of by a great many of the older scholars.

The business committee recommended that in place of the "Infant class instruction," by Mr. Coates, the time be occupied in completing the organization of the County Convention, and the appointment of Township officers.

Rev. Mr. Halstead, in speaking on the topic, was under the conviction that the pioneers of Sabbath Schools were influenced by love; look over the length and breath of many lands, and see the result, charity indeed doeth wonders, when we have it rightly working in our own hearts, we shall not soon be discouraged.

Rev. Mr. Millard now spoke, on the completion of the organization of County Conventions, and the appointment of township secretaries. He deemed it highly necessary to the correct working of conventions, that there should be a secretary for each township, who can communicate with the County Secretary; doing the general work in the formation of Township Conventions, calling together Sabbath School workers, for that purpose. We want men of determination, able and willing to do the work. He would therefore also recommend the appointment of township secretaries, to correspond with the County Secretary, and do the general work of Township Conventions.

Mr. Beadle recommended the appointment of Township Secretaries, to convene Township Conventions. It is utterly impossible for all the workers in S. Schools to attend this County Convention, it is accordingly necessary that Township Conventions be formed, wherein brethren of the most remote Townships could gather together to give and get good, limiting the sessions to one afternoon. He then read a circular, which the County Convention of Welland prepared and sent to all the Township Secretaries, soliciting their co-operation and sympathy, in this good work, giving them also the necessary instructions of their office. He read one also sent to the people, soliciting their sympathy and support.

Mr. Coates, then favoured the Convention with "Gather the children in."

The business committee requested the Convention to nominate suitable persons for the office of Township Secretaries, when the following were appointed:—

Township of Monaghan, Mr. J. W. Gilmour.
Township of Otonabee, Mr. Evans Ingram.
Township of Belmont and Methuen, Peter Pearce.
Township of Asphodel, Mr. J. P. Brown.
Township of Dummer, Mr. Jacob White.
Township of Harvey, Mr. B. Ventriss.
Townships of Eastmore, Minden, Galway and Snowdon, Rev. Mr. Burt.
Townships of Harcourt and Dysart, Mr. D. McFarlane.
Township of Douro, Mr. J. Shearin.
Townships of Smith and Ennismore, Mr. Woods.
Township of Burleigh, Chandos, Anstruther and Cardiff, Mr. John Young.
Village of Ashburnham, Mr. J. Stanton.
Town of Peterboro, Mr. T. Donelly.

Mr. Hilliard was under the impression, there would be an advantage in those back townships, situated near the boundary line, to be amalgamated with our County.

After a little discussion, it was left in the hands of the County of Victoria.

It was then moved by Mr. J. W. Gilmour, seconded by Mr. Johnstone,—That the President, Vice President, General Secretary and Treasurer, Minute, Municipal and Township Secretaries, be an Executive Committee for the ensuing year, with power to add to their numbers, and that 5 members be a quorum. Unanimously adopted.

Mr Coates rendered "Battling for the Lord."

The Rev. Mr. Paul, pronounced the benediction, and the Convention adjourned to meet at 2 p. m.

The Convention re-assembled at 2 p.m., in the Wesleyan Church.

The President conducted the devotional exercises.

Mr. Beadle not having arrived, short volunteer addresses were requested from the delegates, when

Mr. Graham observed that Sabbath School Teachers have an important duty to perform. They have [illegible] souls to save, and are responsible if they do not put forth their energies and improve every opportunity to lead these souls to Christ. What a reward awaits the faithful worker, who has been the means of saving, if but one soul, from the wrath to come.

Mr. Beadle introduced the next subject in the programme, "The model Sabbath School." He did not wish the audience to expect from him a perfect Sabbath school, he himself was only a learner. One of the greatest helps, and needs, to a Sabbath School, is the formation and regular holding of teachers meetings, for the study of the lesson. He here mentioned the several difficulties, that he had to encounter in St. Catherines, before he was able to have regular teachers meetings. Difficulties however of whatever nature, could be overcome, with a little perseverance. He would especially impress on the minds of superintendents, the great benefits to be derived from these meetings by the teachers, and so contributing to the successful working of the School.

In conducting a school, he did not think it desirable to call a particular child or class to order; after ringing the bell there should be silence immediately, if not, he should remain quiet fixing his eyes on that part of the school whence proceeded the noise, his continued silence would attract the attention of the whole school, quiet and order prevail and thus enable him to proceed with the exercises. The opening prayer should have direct reference to the subject, contained in the lesson; it should be simple and adapted to the minds of the children. He allowed the teachers 30 or 40 minutes, for the application of the lesson, not allowing, Secretary, Librarians, or Visitors to disturb them. The Librarians were then permitted to change the books. The plan adopted in the St. Catherines Wesleyan School, is Mr. Egglestone's, it worked admirably. His own plan is to subdivide the books into as many sections as there are classes, sending about a dozen to each class, leaving the checking in the hands of the teachers. He afterwards proceeds to catechise the school on the lessons of the day. He earnestly recommended the use of the Blackboard and object lessons, as assisting in the ready appliance of the truths taught, strive to arrange your remarks, so that they tend toward the one object of the Sabbath School, namely, the conversion to God of every scholar.

The Convention then adjourned to the Presbyterian Church where the several Sabbath Schools of the town were assembled, in spite of a raging storm and great depth of snow the body of the church was filled, and a considerable number in the gallery.

The meeting opened with singing by the children, conducted by Mr J. W. Gilmour.

The Rev. Mr. Roger then led in prayer.

Then Mr. Coates, next proceeded to test them showing the manner in which he conducted his Infant class in Toronto. He engaged the attention of the children by relating anecdotes of the every day life of children in such a manner that their minds were inevitably led to dwell on Jesus and his teachings. He interspersed his instructions with bodily actions. His system of teaching being suited only for small children, he could not exemplify it so well on the present occasion, as the children were of various ages. To those interested in infant classes his method was very suggestive.

After singing the children were addressed by the Rev. Mr. Kines, who desired to impress on their minds the responsibility they are under to pay more attention to that which is indestructible towards improving the soul more than the body.

The Rev. Mr. Burt and Mr. D. W. Beadle also addressed the children, the tenor of their remarks bearing upon the love, of Christ. We should love Jesus as he first loved us.

During the interval between the addresses, the children sang, sweetly and affectingly which, considering the few opportunities they had for practicing together, showed that children have a natural aptitude and love for song, and therefore this is a valuable means of imparting scriptural truth to the young mind.

The Rev. D. J. McDonald pronounced the benediction, when the convention adjourned, to meet again in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, at 7 p. m.

The closing Session began punctually at the hour; The attendance was very good, considering the unfavourable state of the weather.

After devotional exercises, Mr. Coates sang "My Sister."

Rev. Mr. Millard, then proceeded with the topic of the evening, "The Value of Object Lessons," remarking that he divided object lessons into two kinds, viz:—Inscribed and Pictorial. He strongly recommended the use of the blackboard teaching, in Sabbath Schools as tending to fix the children's attention on the subject of the lesson. The object lessons were prepared by himself expressly for his own Sabbath School, not having the remotest idea that he would use them at Conventions. His object lessons were excellent, just suited to the capacity of youthful scholars. His subjects were from Holy Writ, such as the Parables, wanderings of the Israelites, descriptions of the Tabernacle, &c. He attributed the large attendance in his Sabbath School to the use of these lessons, and would recommend every Superintendent to "go and do likewise."

"Go work in the Vineyard," was sung by Mr. Coates.

Rev Mr. Burt, recommended the use of object lessons, they were calculated to benefit every Sabbath School that adopted them. He would suggest the teachers use of them when studying the lesson at home, it would aid them in remembering the truths and teachings set forth in the lesson.

Rev. Dr. Hamilton, thought we could learn many lessons from such a worthless thing as a bottomless pitcher, when properly applied. As regards object lessons, he drew his on the floor, which fully answered his purpose. He fully believed that great good was derived from their application, his own experience testifying thereto. He would, however, desire to impress on the minds of the teachers, the desirability of instructing their children in the Physical and General Geography of the time; thanks to [illegible] not its [illegible] attached to it.

[illegible]
by Mr.

[illegible]

A few of the delegates, not seeing clearly to what purpose the funds would be appropriated, raised some questions which gave rise to considerable discussion. The President clearly defined that after defraying the necessary expenses of the Convention, the surplus funds would go to assist in reconstructing old schools, organizing new schools in localities where they are not; provide schools requiring assistance, with books and other necessaries.

The amount needed having been obtained, the question drawer was opened, and—

Mr. Beadle being appointed to answer the questions, remarked, that some of the questions had been fully answered during the discussion of the several topics; others were of such a nature, that he thought they had a tendency to run things into the ground. (However, they evinced generally pleasing characteristic, that the temperance cause has a firm hold on the minds of many of the Sabbath School workers of Peterboro.)

Mr. Coates again favoured the Convention with singing "The Rescue."

The business committee then submitted the following resolutions, (through Mr. J. W. Gilmour.)

1st. That in the opinion of this Convention, the establishment and successful carrying on of County [illegible] School Conventions, tend very much to the promotion and extension of the Sabbath School work; and trust that these meetings now brought to a close, will be the beginning of a new era in the Sabbath School work of this County.

2nd. That it is incumbent on all christians to countenance, aid and encourage, by their personal efforts and prayers, the work of Sabbath Schools.

3rd. That the thanks of this Convention are due, and are hereby tendered, to the Rev. W. Millard, Messrs. Beadle and Coates, for their cordial compliance with the invitation to be present with us, and for the valuable assistance they have given to us, during our meetings.

Also to the christian people of Peterboro, for their kindness in entertaining the delegates during the sitting of the Convention.

To the Trustees of the Wesleyan Methodist, and Canada Presbyterian Churches, for the use of their edifices, and to Miss Kennedy for presiding at the melodeon.

The resolutions were unanimously confirmed.

Mr. Coates by special request again sang "Recollections of Childhood."

The Convention then closed its last session with singing the doxology; Dr. Hamilton pronouncing the benediction.

WM. ED. JAMES,
Minute Secretary.

EASTER BEEF.—Mr. Henry Collins, of North Monaghan, brought a fat heifer (not yet three years old) into town on Monday. She weighed 1430 lbs. gross, and was expected 1140 lbs. dressed. Beat that, who can? He also brought in a fat cow that last year raised two calves. She weighed 1220 lbs.

Whether the Fenians really come or not—and we are inclined at present to be somewhat sceptical in the matter—it is quite evident there is no danger of their finding us unprepared. Several militia regiments have received orders to hold themselves in readiness. Capt. Muir's troop of cavalry have already taken the field, and marched at one o'clock yesterday for Huntingdon. On the Eastern frontier a number of regiments are under arms. The gunboats have been fitted out for service. Provisions, guns, ammunition and sailings crews are on board, and fighting crews are ready to go on duty at the shortest possible notice. A rumour was widely circulated in this city yesterday that the Fenians had actually crossed the line, but it turned out to be unfounded. In addition to the foregoing, a meeting has been held at Oshawa where very strong resolutions were passed, and the Mayor of Kingston has issued a proclamation for a meeting to be held there this evening.—Globe.

Judge Black and Major Boulton, who left St. Paul for Canada, report all quiet at Fort Garry. There were no prisoners remaining in the Fort, and the people were looking anxiously for tidings that the delegates had settled matters satisfactorily at Ottawa. They are in urgent need of the revival of business, which is not likely to improve under "President" Riel's regime.

Ayer's American Almanac, for 1870, has been received by druggists for delivery gratis, to all who call for it. This number contains proofs to show that some of the cures have existed for sixty millions of years. We had not supposed such proof possible, but the Doctor gives it in a shape which seems indisputable. His testimonials have long made his book acceptable; his medical advice makes it indispensible to families and now he adds the most startling problems of abstract science to its attractions.

From the new expectoration, increased respiratory power of the Lungs, and the removal of irritation, manifest from cessation of Cough and other alarming symptoms, after using FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES, it is clear that the formation of tuberculous matter is not only stopped, but that already deposited is being carried away.

Radway's Ready Relief, Renovating Resolvent, and Regulating Pills.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 25, 1866.

DOCTOR RADWAY & Co.

DEAR FRIENDS:— * * * * * My wife blesses these preparations, when she thinks that after three nights and days of suffering of violent pains in the stomach, brought on by overdoses of Quinine, by the use of four drops of "Ready Relief" in some water, she was able to sleep tranquil all night, and the next day she was completely re-established. I have also cured a slave from heart disease with "Ready Relief" and "Pills," and have also cured sore throat, rheumatic pains, toothache, headache, &c. With the "Resolvent" I have cured Erysipelas, Skin diseases, &c.

It is my full impression that the "Pills" are the best purgative that can be found, not alone for the facility which they can be taken, but also as they do not cause griping or make you feel sick.

I have a son of five years old now, who took the "Ready Relief" when 4 months old, as he suffered from some irregularity in the bladder, preventing him from making urine. The following was the treatment: 20 drops of "Relief" in a cup of water, and divide it in portions of a table spoon, which he took every ten minutes, which completely cured him. He has since had colic, which I treat in the same way, and also rub the stomach with it (pure).

Major Joaquim Vieira do Silva Pinto, proprietor, in the Cidade Leopoldina, can prove that after more than ten years suffering from Paralysis, through the medium of your remedies he obtained that which he had been deprived, and thought at the time that he would never be able to get, and that was the use of his legs

You can fully believe that there are a great many people in this vast empire who truly confess that they owe their life to the use in time of your precious medicines, You can make use of this as you think proper.

I remain, dear friends,

THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1870.

Red River.

Since our last, Father Richot and Scott, delegates from Rial, have arrived at Ottawa, and the Government is about to add another stigma to its past mismanagement, by receiving them. Scott, it appears, was present at the murder of his namesake and offered not a word of palliation for him, in fact consented to his death, and now with his hands stained with innocent blood, presents himself before an offended people, and demands concessions and rights in order to appease the blood-thirsty scoundrel who now usurps authority at the North-West. These men, self-convicted, feared to meet an outraged people, and hence, passing through the United States to Ogdensburgh, were met there by a sufficient force to prevent any violence, and taken to the seat of Government. John A. is still pandering to the Lower Canada party, and is still determined, to further disgrace his party by receiving the delegates. Toronto, Belleville and Ottawa have had enthusiastic meetings condemnatory of the Scott murder, and also of the Government for their inertness in this Red River emeute.

All those who have come from the North West testify to the fact that the clergy are at the bottom of the whole disturbance; that they are the originators of it; and that Riel is a complete tool in their hands. Reporters and refugees assert that he is nearly all the time half intoxicated, and that by the too free use of whisky he succeeds in keeping the half-breeds on his side. Bishop Tache has shown his predilections for the Riel regime, by openly acknowledging his authority and praying his high mightiness to grant certain favors which Riel graciously did for the holy father.

All these things tend to expose the weakness of a government that would send such men to represent it at Winnepeg. Men who at the same time are sowing the seeds of dissension, and bringing about as the fruit thereof, anarchy and blood-shed.

John A. says they now mean action, and that the Imperial Government and the Dominion are in accord. A force will be sent out to quell the insurrection and to drag the murderer to justice. But who will foot the bill? The incapacity and rivalry of Canadian Ministers caused the trouble; can the empire be asked to settle it and pay the costs? Not a bit of it.—British Generals and soldiers may go to the West and restore order, but the expense of the whole will come out of the pockets of Canadians. Ontario will have to pay the lion's share. Shall the people of Ontario be silent, and permit their country to become a mock and by word among the nations and the laugh of our neighbours, that 500 half breeds can set John A. at defiance, laugh him to scorn, and then appear in person before him and demand that he give a favorable answer ere he leaves the spot. This is what we are brought to, through the the silly weakness of an incapable ministry. How long shall Canadians bear with them? or shall they not rise in their might and demand their resignation, and hurl them forever from power and influence. Their incapacity has left a blood stain on our country.

FIRE.

On Saturday night about 11 o'clock, fire was discovered in the wooden block, on Hunter street, east of the Henthorn block. It originated in the back part of the office of Dr. McCullough, from a defective stove pipe or some unknown cause. The office had been closed for about two hours, when the smoke was first seen, and then two pails of water would have extinguished the whole thing—some fatuity prevented this—and all hands present set to work to remove Cavanagh's furniture, and Meyett's, who kept a barber shop next door. The firemen were on the ground promptly and began pouring water into the front of the Doctor's office, which was filled with smoke. It was afterwards found necessary to change the hose to the rear of the block, and the time lost in doing so gave the fiery element a little chance to strengthen and make way through the roof. During this time it was confined to the building in which it originated, but it was making its way to the other buildings slowly. The muddy state of the water, too, prevented the engine working as well as it would otherwise have done. The whole wooden buildings were by this time evidently doomed to destruction, as the flames had crept along under the roof and bursting out in more places than one, the one engine was powerless to even check their progress.

The whole block was therefore consumed. Had there been another engine at first, not over two or three hundred dollars worth would have been damaged or destroyed. While the engine was playing on one side the flames were spreading on the other side.

The Review, to-morrow, will have a long article on water works, we expect. The man with water works on the brain was at the fire.

The buildings were owned by Messrs. Nicholls & Hall and Mr. Samuel Dickson, and were partially insured. The part used as a hotel, and belonging to Messrs. Nicholls & Hall, was insured for $1,000, $500 in the Commercial Union and $500 in the Imperial. Mr. Cavanagh had an insurance of $500 on his furniture, which will cover loss, as the stuff was only damaged; very little was left in the building long before the fire got near it. Mr. Dickson had an insurance of $800 in the Provincial on the two stores occupied by Meyette and Dr. McCullough. Dr. McCullough had about $600 insurance on his books, instruments, stock and furniture, in the Gore Mutual.

The only consolation that can arise out of the fire is, that there is now place for better buildings, which will no doubt be erected at an early date, and the sooner the better.

Those thrown out of business will lose considerable in this way until they can get place to open up again.

The Spring Show of Horses will be held in Town on Thursday, the 28th instant.

No change in the markets since last week.

Mr. Chipman, M. P. for King, N. S., has died at Ottawa of the small pox. We believe Mr. McDougall is recovering.

W. G. Thompson & Co., have received their spring and summer stock. Their Show Rooms will be open on Wednesday next.

Mr. Morrison, Editor of the Toronto Telegraph died, in Toronto, on Monday. Mr. Morrison was very highly respected by all who knew him.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—We are requested to state that divine service will be conducted in this church on Good Friday, (to-morrow,) by the Rev. Professor Mowat, of Queen's College, beginning at 3 p. m.

The "British Canadian," Port Hope, believing there is much in a name, has changed its name. It is now the "Port Hope Times." It is enlarged and greatly improved. It is now a first class country paper, and is well conducted. All success to Mr. Trayes, the enterprising publisher and proprietor.

There will be a railroad meeting in Keene on Tuesday, the 26th instant, when a deputation from Belleville and some local gentlemen will address those present. Let all go and hear for themselves; and after having considered the matter fairly, do what they think best for the people of Otonabee.

FENIANS.—There are rumors of a Fenian raid on the borders of the Eastern townships, and orders have been given to the volunteers in the cities to be in readiness. The brotherhood may seek to annoy us a little, but beyond this they cannot injure us. They will soon die out, however—"No funds" the cause.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We are always willing to permit the discussion of whatever concerns the public, or the acts of public men, but we intreat all who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity to confine themselves to about half a column. What may be very interesting to the writers, may be very insipid to the majority of our readers.

MISSIONARY MEETING.—A Missionary meeting will be held in St. Andrew's Church on Thursday, the 21st instant, at 7.30 p. m. The Rev. John Jenkins, D.D., of St. Paul's Church, Montreal, and the Rev. Charles Doudiet, pastor of the French Protestant Church on Dorchester street, Montreal, in connection with the Church of Scotland, are expected to be present and address the meeting. A collection will be taken up in aid of the Home Mission fund of the Presbytery of Victoria.

FALL WHEAT.—We understand from the farmers of Otonabee, Smith, Monaghan, Cavan and surrounding townships, that the fall wheat looks uncommonly well, after the winter. There are yet heavy drifts around the fences, which in some places may do a little harm, but it is hoped not much. We hope the farmers will have a good year during 1870, and a little advance on prices over 1869. There was, and we think there is yet, plenty of wheat in the country, but low prices prevent its coming to market, and there is consequently a little dullness of trade.—There is a good time coming, however.

Mr. George Tanner, at the sign of the Mammoth Chair, showed us, the other day, a very comfortable chair, which he calls the "Hammock Chair," and assuredly it is a very comfortable and also very neat affair. It can be folded up, so as to occupy very little space, merely stand up against a wall, or be placed in a corner, until wanted for ease. It can easily be extended, when he who is fond of his ease can recline at any angle of recumbency that may suit his weariness. It is also cheap, and not easily put out of repair. We advise all fond of ease to go and see Mr. Tanner's Hammock Chairs, and, if possible, buy one of them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Minden.

FORWARD! FORWARD! In the village of Minden on the 9th instant, quite a show of life was manifested. The farmers of Minden and Snowden assembled in public meeting to form themselves into an Agricultural Society, and the very weather was auspicious. At 2 o'clock p. m., at the Minden Hotel, the meeting was duly organised by Rev. F. Burt taking the Chair and announcing that a Declaration, by Act of Parliament, had been signed by a good many farmers, and that every hope of the full number requisite, was entertained, and thus a membership already formed.

The election of the several officials of the Society was then proceeded with, and resulted as follows:—

President, Mr. John Jopling; Vice President, Mr. John Noice; Secretary, Dr. Curry; Treasurer, Mr. F. Peck; Auditors, Messrs. Fred. Shove, and Geo. Andrews; Directors, Messrs. J. R. Calvert, D. McClarty, A. McDougal, R. Garratt, S. S. Peck, H. Ferguson, Geo. Sharpe, J. Brown, and H. Oglestone.

The election duly over and the minutes signed, the chair was vacated, and the newly elected President filled the same. Mr. Jobling remarked that he felt glad that a Society was really organized, and believed that the union affected that day would send to progress in their case as it had with other Societies.

S. S. Peck, Esq., observed that he was sure the organization of the Society would result in good. The tillage of farms would not be the only matter improved; better stock of every kind would be brought in, and, also, raised in the country. The $200 hoped to be expended, yearly, in stock and prizes would be beneficial in many ways.

The same afternoon, at half-past three o'clock, a public meeting was held for the same laudable purpose at the "Dominion House" Minden village. Mr. Soloman Eastman occupied the chair; Mr. G. Kellatt Secretary. The requisite declaration had been previously signed. The title of this Society is the "Agricultural Society of the united Townships of Lutterworth, Anson, and Hindon."

The chosen officers are—President, Wm. Hartle, Esq. Vice President, Jas. Langton; Secretary, G. Kellatt; Treasurer, S. Eastman; Auditors, H. Andrews, and T. moore. Directors, H. Nelson, H. Hillier, R. Lindsay, J. Morphet, W. Quigley, J. Taylor, R. Gidley, N. Wee[illegible]lee, and L. Elphick

Warsaw.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

SIR,—"A writer who builds his arguments upon facts, is not easily to be confuted. He is not to be answered by general assertions and general reproaches. He may want eloquence to amuse or persuade; but speaking the truth he must always convince."

Taking this motto as a guide, with your permission, Mr. Editor, I will make a few remarks in reply to a communication which appeared in the Examiner of the 7th inst., over the signature "Credena." Now, if I were inclined to be critical, I might sum up the merits of that article, by saying that it is about two feet eight inches in length, by two inches and a half in breath, and that it contains about as much confusion of thought as could possibly be squeezed into so small a space. For instance—"The Warsaw Choir—singing birds and musical anvils—church spires and bedsteads—smoke stacks and chairs, form only a few of the miscellaneous, heterogeneous and irrellevant items in that wonderful production. As it would be quite uninteresting, however, to follow the writer through all his devious wanderings, I will only notice a few prominent points without any reference to the order in which they were written. In one part of his communication, "Credena" says, he will "furnish you with a list of names of good and true and able men" from this township; but I think such a silly and extraordinary proceeding as that could serve no good purpose; indeed, nothing could be more officious, or more destitute of good taste and of common sense than to drag the names of our unoffending neighbors into a newspaper correspondence, and to get up an invidious discussion about their fitness for office, when these good people are at home quietly attending to their own business. In another place, "Credena" informs us that some gentlemen "have lived their lives here, and still enjoy the confidence of the people." This is a misty and indefinite expression. At first sight, the language would seem to intimate that the persons alluded to had already finished their mortal career, but as he tells us again that these worthies are to come into play next January, I presume "Credena" intended to say, that the worthies alluded to have spent the previous part of their lives in this township, and that they are still alive and kicking. So much lucid information as this ought, of course, to be thankfully received. But yet, I beg to say, that the question at present is not how long any man has lived in this municipality, but the question is, how certain gentlemen, now in office here, are discharging their duties to the public.

Again, I may observe in passing, that "Credena" publicly applies the very unseemly epithet of "blundering baboon" to one of Her Majesty's loyal subjects. This language, I think, is most reprehensible, and any gentleman who forgets his dignity so far as to use these harsh words, is, to say the least of it, departing from that mild courtesy which ought to be extended to those who are less fortunate in life than himself. A magistrate is the supposed guardian of peace and of law; to him is committed the solemn trust and the high responsibilites of freedom. It is a trust to be executed in the spirit of vigilance, self-control and the most unbending integrity. He should neither be influenced by prejudice, nor guided by a dishonest expediency, but he should do right upon the high, moral ground that it is right. Without this central, governing principle, no man can be safely trusted.

I observe, again, with surprise, that "Credena" charges me with uttering what is "untrue" resarding public opinion about the liquor traffic in this locality. On the other hand, I assert again most distinctly, that what I said on that subject is true to the letter, and I will now state a few facts which will tend to shew that my former statements were correct.

Sometime in the month of January last, the young man who got the new name from "Credena," but whom for convenience I shall name informant, made information to the Inspector of Taverns, here, against a resident of this municipality, who had a shop license for selling whisky, &c.; and the nature of the information was, that the informant had bought and paid for intoxicating liquor in said shop, and had consumed this liquor on the premises, contrary, of course, to the statute and By-law on that subject.

Now, in such a case as this, it is reasonable to suppose that the municipality, through its inspecting officer, would proceed against the defendant, and that the informant would be cited simply as a witness for said municipality. But in the extraordinary case before us, the informant after testifying upon oath that he had bought and consumed intoxicating liquor on the premises alluded to, was himself actually mulcted in the sum of about six dollars, by three of Her Majesty's J. P's. But, perhaps this was an evidence of "the independence of the bench," and, I should say rather a novel method of proving that a J. P. is "above becoming a partizan."

Now, I may be permitted to explain, that Informant is not well posted on legal proceedings, and when he appeared in Court, one of the J. P's, told him to "bring on his evidence," and by this dodge, the informant was, without seeing the results, cunningly ensnared into the position of a prosecutor. Now, as he knew that one of the principal witnesses was keeping out of the way, for fear of giving evidence on this case, he, the informant, told the magistrates, that they should either send for that witness, or stay the proceedings of the Court. But, of course they would do nothing of the kind. This may surprise your readers, but they will be astonished, when I state another movement which took place in this marvellous Court. An anonymous letter had been written to the owner of the shop license, attempting, it was said, to extort money from him, and the J. P's took it into their heads that the informant was in some way, connected with that letter; and they actually turned aside from the case which they had met to try, and commenced to badger the informant about that letter, for the purpose of course, of making him convict himself. And one of the J. P's on the bench, had the temerity to intimidate the informant, by telling him, that he, the said J. P, could send him to jail, unless he answered the questions put to him about the anonymous letter. But, probably this also, was only another evidence of the "independence of the bench," and of "above becoming a partizan."

Now I was under the impression, that it is the duty of a magistrate on the bench, to tell the witness, that he is not bound to say anything which would implicate himself; and besides, I fail to see any connection between the writing of anonymous letters, and the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors.—They are, of course, two distinct cases, and each case should be tried on its own merits.

Does it not appear evident then, from what I have already said, that this was a one sided proceeding, and that the public had some grounds for holding the opinions to which I referred in a former letter?

"Fair play" is what I ask, for every man, without any regard to creed, color or condition of life. And if the bench should at any time forget this wholesome maxim, I trust it may always be considered a public duty, to "jog" their memory.

Let us now drop the curtain over the Court, and repair to the Dummer Council. And here it may be observed, that two of the J. P's on the preceding case, are also members of the Council.

Now it was necessary for the owner of the shop, already spoken of, to take out a license for the current year. But it was rather a discouraging thing, to have but little chance of violating the law, on this subject, without the danger of a forced march, to Peterboro; and certainly, to extricate the shop man out of this difficulty, and at the same time to grant the license, required diplomacy or dodging, of no ordinary kind. The emergency was very great, indeed, but the fine tact of the Council was equal to it. And instead of giving the license to the owner of the establishment, they, very innocently, gave the license to his clerk. Now, the said clerk is a young man, whose responsibilities here, are so slender, that they are quite incisible; and the dodge here, is said to be, to give the shop man a chance of starting again, on clear footing, without the trifling embarrassment of any previous convictions; and by virtue of this adroit manœuvre made by the Council, it is said, the owner of the shop, can if he wishes, violate the law twice, (the original sin of it, being imputed to his ole k,) and can escape by paying light fines; and probably, he might have the good luck of having one of these fines, at least, refunded; and then, if a third information should be made, and the danger of a conviction, and of a temporary residence in the jug should appear looming in the distance; the clerk aforesaid, could, on the shortest notice, leave for "parts unknown," without any loss to this community, or probably to himself.

I have thus given a faithful sketch of what the public opinion is, about the liquor traffic in this Municipality; and as all the facts I have mentioned are well known to "Credena," how, I would ask, in the name of common sense, could he allow himself to say, that my statement on this subject was "untrue?"

There is a tribe in India, the members of which, are always ready to perjure themselves for the purpose of shielding those who rob them. This may appear very ridiculous to our civilized minds, but does it not appear equally ridiculous to see a council passing a By-law for the regulation of the liquor traffic, and then doing something, which looks very like assisting somebody to violate that By-law.

As I don't intend to say any more on this subject, I may remark, that I have only spoken of the public acts of public men; I have avoided personality, as much as the nature of the case would allow. I have adopted this course, because I have no desire to give pain to any one; and also because I entertain a sincere regard for many gentlemen who hold official rank in this Township. And if this correspondence, which is certainly without any ill-feeling on my part, should tend to make us all a little more diligent in the discharge of our public duties, it will not have been altogether in vain.

Yours. &c,
DUMMERONIAN.

DEATH OF HON. MR. FOLEY.—The Hon. M. H. Foley died on Saturday last, after a short illness. Mr. Foley was a prominent politician, and occupied the place of Post Master General for a short period. He resided at this municipality, who had a shop license for selling whisky, &c.; and the nature of the information was, that the Council met pursuant to adjournment.—All members present.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed.

Mr. Berry moved, seconded by Mr. Hogan,—That the time for collecting the taxes be extended to the 15th of April.—Carried.

Mr. Casement moved, seconded by Mr. Hogan,—That it appearing the arrears of taxes against the W½ of lot 21, con. 5, assessed to Geo. Caddy, have been returned in mistake by the Co. Treasurer, the said arrears, amounting to $34.99 be struck off, and only the balance, viz: $7.47 be collected from him on account of said lot; also, that the arrears of taxes charged against the E½ of lot 17, con. 7, should have been charged to the occupants or owners, of the W½ of the E½ of said lot, for the years 1864-5-6-7, together with the interest amounting altogether to $59.97, and that the Township Clerk do add this lot, i.e. the W½ of the E½ of lot 17, con. 7, in arrears, and return the same to the Co. Treasurer for collection; also, that the arrears of taxes charged against Isaac Watson, be returned on the Non-Resident Roll of 1869, against the N½ and the E½ of the W½ and the S W¼ of the W½ of lot 17, con. 5; also, that the Reeve do give his order in favor of Jas. Caddy for $3.26 arrears of taxes charged to and paid by him, for Village lots 1 to 11, being the S. W. corner of lot 16, con 7, it appearing that the said property was twice assessed; also, with respect to lot No. 3; West of Rabbit St. sold for arrears of taxes, instead of that part of Lakefield, East of Rabbit St; it appears that both these parcels of land were owned by, and should have been assessed to John Galvin, or his Agent; and that this Council agree to refund the purchase money paid by R. A. Strickland, together with the costs of Conveyancing, incurred by the said R. A. Strickland; the same to be paid to John Galvin, in full of all claims against the Township, by the said J. Galvin; the arrears up to 1870 on the unassessed part being also given up by the Township—provided, that should this offer be accepted, the Reeve and R. Casement, be authorised to make such settlement as they may think best.—Carried

Mr. Hogan moved, seconded by Mr. Molouey,—That the balance of arrears of taxes charged against J. H. Campbell, be settled, by him passing a note, payable to the Treasurer, on or before the 1st day of July next.—Carried.

The Reeve was authorised to issue the following orders, viz.:—To the Assessor $15, in part of salary for 1869 present year; to the Collector for $2.25 for his loss in discount on silver; to Adam King, for $4, for two sheep killed by dogs in September last.—Carried.

On motion, the Council adjourned to the first Saturday in May next, which is also fixed upon as the day for the first meeting of the Court of Revision.

JAS. HOGAN, Jr.,
Clerk.

Douro, March 26th, 1870.

The Fenians.

Acting on information that a Fenian raid is threatened on the Eastern frontier this week, General Lindsay, in conjunction with the Militia Department, has already called out about one thousand men of the active Militia, in the counties of Chateaguay and Missisquoi, who are billeted at their headquarters, contiguous to the frontier, and are ready to concentrate at a moments notice.

In addition, it was decided to day to call out about four thousand more men of the active Militia, in the Province of Quebec. These men will hold themselves in readiness, and if necessary, will, probably, be concentrated at Montreal. The companies composing this call will be taken as near as posible to the frontier.

There is a good deal of excitment along the frontier in the counties of Chateaguay and Missisquoi, and if any raid takes place it will, probably, be at the same point at which it took place in '66. viz:—between St. Armand and Frelighsburg.

Those 20,000 stand of arms about which so much has been said the last few years are to be utilized on this occasion.

The Deputy-Adjutant Generals, for the Province of Quebec, have to night carry out thes orders.

It appears that no points in Ontario are threatened at present; but, as a measure of precaution, the Government have called out the Mooretown Volunteer Company, near Sarnia, who are to do duty as mounted infantry along the Detroit River, below Sarnia.

Red River News.

St. Paul, Minn. April 11.—Major Boulton and Judge Black left St. Paul for Canada, via Detroit, by this morning's train.

All was quiet when they left the Red River, and no prisoners were at Fort Garry. The whole Red River community have great hopes that the delegates to Ottawa will succeed in settling matters, so that business will be revived and peace established.

The Toronto Telegraph accuses Donald G. Smith, the commissioner sent to Red River, of being really an agent of the Hudson's Bay Company, more an their interest than in that of Canada, whom he was sent to represent. He is said to have been very officious in procuring signatures to the Bill of Rights, and when questioned about the shooting of Scott, to have given an evasive reply, saying "he was a troublesome fellow."

OTTAWA, April 11.—Father Richot and Mr. Scott arrived here by the six o'clock train. Father Richot is stopping at the Bishop's Palace and Mr. Scott at a private house. Father Richot is middle-aged, wears a long black beard and speaks but little English.

Messrs. Ogilvie and McGouvran have had interviews with the members of the Ministry, who have taken their representation under consideration.

Messrs. Gardiner and Ramsay are placing in store at the Yonge Street wart 2,000 barrels of pork, for consumption by the troops to be sent to Red River. The Board of Works of the Dominion Government are also having a large supply of tents made in this city, and a large number of horses, waggons, &c., have been purchased. The Messrs. Milloy have been notified that one of their boats will be required to start on the 2nd of May for Fort William with a number of men who are to work on the road, some of the Red River service boats now being constructed, provisions, horses, waggons &c. Troops, it is expected, will follow in a very short time.

PREPARATIONS FOR WAR.—Mr. J. Bond, livery stable keeper, of this city, has received instructions from Government to purchase seventy horses and thirty-five large waggons with the necessary harness and equipments for transportation purposes in connection with the Red River expedition, and to engage the requisite number of teamsters to drive them. The horses are to be ready for service in three weeks from the present time.—Globe.

FISTULA IN ANO is a sinous ulcer in the neighborhood of anus and rectum, of a very obstinate character, which will continue for years undermining the patient's health if not properly treated, constantly discharging more or less of a thin watery offensive fluid, and having the walls of its linde fistulous pipes or canals very hard or callous. Dr. J. Briggs' Pile Remedy remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction. Many who have tried it, do not hesitate to say it is superior to anything ever yet used for this disease. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

FALLING OF THE BOWEL, OR PROLAPSUS ANI is a complaint in which the rectum protrudes in a greater or less degree at the verge of the anus. It may occur at any period of life, but infants and elderly persons are more subject to it. Use Dr. Briggs' Unrivalled Pile Remedy, according to directions, for all Diseases of the Rectum; it surpasses any other known. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Indians at Ottawa.

The Ottawa papers state that last week a deputation of six chiefs of the Six Nation Indians waited on the Hon Secretary of state for the Provinces, for the purpose of paying their respects to him, and laying before him a statement of the affairs of the tribe. The body or which the delegation belongs is the Six nations Settlement of Tuscarora, on the Grand River, one of the most prosperous Indian settlements under the Canadian Government. In 1837 the band numbered 2,718 souls, and has been steadily increasing since that time. It had then, as now, eight schools, well attended and conducted, and over 13,000 acres of land under cultivation. Their medical wants have also been admirably cared for, two practitioners of ability being resident among them. They have also flourishing agricultural and temperance societies. The party also waited upon His Excellency the Governor-General on the subject of repealing the Act of 1869, affecting the Indian treaties, and for the purpose of representing its unfairness. Chief William Jacobs stated the object of the delegation as follows:—

"We have come as a portion of the Six Nations to lay before you the regulations we have so long existed under. There are many of us who still adhere to those regulations. It is a long time since we have had the pleasure of appearing before the representative of Her Majesty. We have always adhered to the treaty made by our forefathers in keeping the grass and bushes from growing between us. We adhere strongly to the belief of the Great Spirit, although we are called pagans. When we came to this country our regulations or agreement was shown us; our nation was strong, and the agreement was strong, and we still wish it to remain so; that you keep in your ship, and we in our canoe. It never was expressed or understood we were to abandon the rules of our forefathers. The late Act passed in 1869 conflicts with the agreement made with the British Government and our forefathers. We were never consulted, and think it will not work satisfactorily. We beg the repeal of the said act. It never was contemplated we should be governed the same as the whites. We prefer living as our forefathers did. I speak on behalf of the Cayugas, Onondagas and Senecas. Should any of our people remove from the reserve, they are still a part of the Six Nations, and entitled to all benefits, let them be where they Will."

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. THE SARSAPARILLA DRINKERS OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own, [Boston Commercial.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature convening representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshoness Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound warned after for cure is unsurpassable by Miller, of Echastown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cornecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Horey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trials and has not been found wanting its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subsiding the tortering pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and many other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for he cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Our Father's Well.

BY MRS H. F. OSGOOD.

Come, let's go back, my brother,
And by our father's well
Sit down beside each other
Life's links seems to tell.

For there we played together
In childhood's sunny hours
Before life's stormy weather
Had killed its morning flowers.

And since, no drought we've tasted
In all life's journey through
As we so far have hasted
Like that our father drew.

I feel as at a mountain
I cannot pass nor climb
Till from that distant fountain
I drink as in my prime.

My spirits longing, thirsting,
No waters else can quell,
My heart seems near to bursting
To reach that good old well.

Though all be changed around it
And though so changed are we
Just where our father found it,
That pure well spring will be.

In earth when deeply going,
He reached and smote the rock,
No coin its finest flowing—
It opened at his knock.

The way he smoothed and stoned it,
A clean, round shadowy cell;
Whoever since has owned it,
It is our father's well!

His prattling son and daughter,
With curb as infant's cap,
We waited for the water
His steady hand drew up.

When we had paused and listened
Till down the bucket dashed,
How its rising glistened,
And to the sunlight flashed!

And since that moment never
Has that cool deep been dry;
Its feast is living ever,
While man and seasons die.

Around is mouth is growing
The moss of many a year,
But from its heart is flowing
The water sweet and clear.

Fond memory near it lingers.
And like a happy child,
She plucks with busy fingers,
And wreathes the roses wild.

Yet many a lip whose burning
Its limpid drops alloyed,
Has since to ashes turning,
Been veiled in silent shade.

Still we are here, and telling
About our infant play,
Where that fine spring is welling
So true and far away.

But O, the deeper, my brother!
Our children hear it hear;
The tender name of mother
Is once to call no more.

And now around this gather,
Such little gaps as we
Where here, fields our father,
And look to theirs in thee.

While fast our years are wasting
Their numbers none can tell,
So let us hence be hasting
To find our Father's well.

Come, we will speed us thither,
And from its mossy brink,
To flowers that never shall wither
Look up to heaven and drink.

They spring beside the waters
Our Father there will give
To all his sons and daughters,
Where they shall drink and live.

Recreation for Farmers.

'Humph!' I hear some farmers say, 'what does it mean by recreation for farmers?' I will try to tell you what I mean. At the present day it is found that all classes and conditions of men are greatly advantaged by occasional relaxation from their daily round of duty, whatever its name or nature. None seem to be exempt from this law of our being. None can ignore it without serious loss to person and purse.

The loss to person grows out of the fact that we cannot continue one set of muscles in work, to the neglect of others, without sooner or later overworking the one and impairing or obstructing the other. Persisting in this course tends to deteriorate the the whole system. This is in all probability less true of farmers than of people in most other occupations. Their necessary labour brings about all their muscular system into use. The extent of the use in their cases is just where the evil comes in. Unceasing toil tells upon them to such an extent as to bring on premature old age. We see them bowed over in what should be the prime of life. They lose their buoyancy and elasticity of mind; they become taciturn in their homes. A sombre sadness seems to prevade all around. The wife is too often overworked and partakes of the same spirit. The children, growing up in such an atmosphere, lost interest at home—if they every had any interest at it—and look forward with longing eyes to the time when they can escape to the city, the west or the sea. Too much of the emigration from our New England farms has its cause just here. I know of individual cases to which this is true. The homes are not pleasant to them by reason of unceasing work and the want of cheerfulness in family.

The remedy, I think, in a measure, is to be found in farmers finding out that they can accomplish more, year by year, if they devote a portion of their time to recuperate their powers by relaxation. A case in point occurs to me.

A cousin of my father went from Rhode Island, when about thirty years of age, to Madison, N. Y. He came back to visit the old place some three or four times before he was fifty years old. After that his visits became frequent, so he felt before he died that he must come about every season. He said he could spend from three to five weeks from home and gain double the amount of time before the year expired, in consequence of the new energy with which he could enter upon everything he had in hand. He felt happy and joyful and wanting to sing all the time. He was seventy-nine years old when he made his last visit. He was preparing for another the following spring as soon as the crops were in the ground, or after his hay and small grain harvest was over.

What is true of this man is true of all others, to a greater or less extent. After a season of relaxation we bring new energy into all we have to do. Work is done with a will. More of cheerfulness accompanies it. Disappointments fail to depress as formerly. Old things have passed. The future wears a new aspect. "We have renewed our youth as the eagle."

I am aware that most farmers will say "this is all very well; but we cannot possibly bring it round." Just here is where the trouble lies, I am ready to admit. At the same time I would urge you to seek for some way to accomplish it. Take your wife into your counsel, and also your children. You will find that they will enter into a solution of the difficulties with a will. Your combined wisdom will be sure to triumph in the end, because your interest is involved in it. When once the matter has been put to the test, no fear of it ever being dropped. Much of the discontent and seeming hardships will disappear. Try it.—New England Farmer.

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as it were by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From headache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, ripping or nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and carcinomious humors. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowels, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

A Candid Bankrupt.—At a recent examination of a bankrupt, it was observed that he kept a great number of banking accounts. "I see," said the learned judge, "that you have had six or seven bankers; what could you want so many for?"—"To overdraw them, to be sure," was the frank and candid reply.

Poetry.

The Eclipse.

BY A. MCDONALD.

The Earth was all silent,
The Ocean at rest.
The sun-gilded cloud,
Floated down from the West;
A rich banner of gore,
In the sky was unfurled,
And the stars sweetly smiled,
On a guilt stricken world.

The bright silvery Moon,
In the East had arose,
From its cloud curtained bed,
From its azure repose,
It smiled on the East,
And it smiled on the West,
As a child on its parent
Just awoke from its rest.

It arose in its splendor
Of a bridal deck'd maid,
A fit handmaid of earth
In her bright robes array'd;
But its face was half veiled,
And its eye closed in sleep,—
Threw a shade on the Earth,
And a shade on the deep.

I gazed on it awhile,
As the shadow advanc'd—
My soul overpower'd—
My spirit entranc'd;
I thought of the Being who ruleth above,
Whose voice is mercy
Whose nature all love.

But the clouds passed away,
And the Moon's mellow beams,
Lit up the wild landscape,
Like infantile dreams;
They danced on the Ocean,
They laughed on the Earth,
As the star of Judea,'
On Immanuel's birth,

There's a voice in the heaven's
That calls unto man;
A volume wide open,
Our vision should scan;
It speaks to the head,
And impresses the heart,
With the power of God,
That should never depart.

Miscellaneous.

The Proposed British Expedition to Red River.

On the authority of the London "Post" we have to believe that an expedition is being got up for, and that it will soon set out to Red River territory. A cab's despatch which we publish this morning has it that the expedition for some time be necessarily delayed. At the same we learn that instructions have been given by our own War Department to establish a military post at Pembina. If the British send the expedition to the Red River and back it up with one or more steel batteries—in other words, if they go into this thing as generally they go into a military row, as they went into that of Abyssinia—and if the United States Government make a strong post at Pembina, the whole Red River district will be claimed by civilization. All accounts agree in calling it a magnificent country. Protection to life and property is all that is required to make it an advanced outpost of civilization. Now that Riel has taken to shooting citizens and playing the part of tyrant it is time that a little wholesome law was administered in that region. On the whole, there is good cause for rejoicing in the fact that a new and valuable tract of territory is about to be added to the area of the civilized world. —N. Y. Herald.

Indians on the War Path.

Colonel Johnston, the popular chief of the Six Nations of Indians, residing on the Brantford reserve, returned from Ottawa yesterday and remained over at the Queen's hotel. The gallant chief has offered eight hundred of his "braves" for service in the Red River country. The Government informed Col. Johnston that they would inform him in a few days as to whether the offer would be accepted or rejected. The Government will no doubt be glad to receive the aid of the Canadian Indians to act as scouts for the proposed expedition to Red River. They would be used in keeping the woods clear of Riel's party during the advance of the regular troops into the territory; and these Indians would be invaluable for service in this respect, being so well used to bush life. No doubt if it should be found necessary to send troops foward the services of Col. Johnston's "brave" will be gladly accepted.

CHILBLAINS OR PERNIO, is a painful inflammatory swelling, of a red, purple, or bluish color which affects the fingers, toes, heels, and other parts of the extremeties, in consequence of their exposure to serve cold. The pain is not constant but appears at certain times, and is rather of a shooting and pungent character, and an annoying itching is present; these symptoms are more commonly aggravated in cold and damp seasons. The skin may remain entire, it may break and discharge a thin fluid or it may when the cold has been intense or long-continued, slough around the effected parts and leave a foul irregular, and painful ulcer. Children and old persons are more apt to be affected with Chilblains from exposure to cold than those of middle age more especially those of a scrofulous taint. Those who are subject to this species of 'frost bite,' should be careful in cold and damp weather to keep the feet well warmed and dry and when cold to warm them by friction or exercise and not by placing them near a fire or warm stove. Dr. J. Briggs' Modern Curative, used according to directions, will cure the worst Chilblains restoring the parts to a sound and healthy appearance. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co. Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King st west, Toronto.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

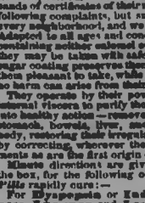
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compositions. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Lanquor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued as taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

DROPSY — HUMORS
NATURES OWN VITALIZER

CAUTION.—All genuine has the name "Peruvian Syrup," (NOT "Peruvian Bark.") blown in the glass. A 32 page pamphlet sent free. J. P. DINSMORE, Proprietor, 30 Dey St., New York. Sold by all Druggists.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HUNT'S EGYPTIAN HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JAGGERS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

Of all Wasting Scrofulous, and Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Ears, Head, LUNGS, Kidneys, Bladder.

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic diseases, and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other scrofulous diseases are curable. This fact has been demonstrated in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption,

where one lung in over seventy cases was destroyed and dried up, and in over

500 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of Consumptives, showing in every stage, that where tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Intestines, establishing Consumption of those organs, the Blood is thin, weak, pale, watery, and is deficient of such constituents as fibrin Albumen, Phosphorus, and the rich red coloring discs of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood in exhausted of strength and nourishment, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to hold in solution its natural constituents, and Ulcers, cancers, Cancers, and Virulent Humors are formed. The presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and consequent suppuration.

This, reader, is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases, and prepared the Radway's Resolvent to supply the Blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions of system, and to give it the nourishment and strength to hold its natural constituents in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in England, France, Germany, and America, and was seized upon by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his last medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption, but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr Radway was the first to advance this theory, and the first and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure. In Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, Bronchials, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Throat, Glandulæ and Urinary Organs.

In all Wasting Discharges, such as Involuntary Loss of Sperm, Leukorrhœa, Weakness of the Genital Glands, Leucorrhœa, and all Uterine difficulties, Gravel, Lime stone, Brick Dust, Uric Acid, and Calculous Concretions, the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is a positive cure. In Dropsy, Diabetes, uncured Venereal, Syphilis to its many forms, it cures when all other medicines fail.

EVERY DAY

an increase of flesh, weight, and strength is experienced. It is Fat-tissue, Calorie or Heat-making. It is to the blood what oxygen is to the atmospheric air—it supplies the life principle. It swiftly removes from the surface all Spots, Blemishes, Pustules, Tetters, Rash, Flesh Worms, Sores, &c., imparting a Clear & Beautiful Complexion to all.

CERTIFICATE OF BEAUTY.

The following letter is from a highly-gifted lady, well known in the "circles of our best society":

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SHAW, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
HADDO, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1846 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became afterwards such that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

FLAX! FLAX!
FARMERS intending to grow Flax this year will give in their names early, if they wish to secure the imported seed.
For particulars apply to
H. CALCUTT, Brewer.

The following are some of the returns of last year's crop:

W. Rutherford,	135	lbs. seed,	yielded	$45

C. Howson,	60	"	"	40
J. Tayler,	125	"	"	70

Flax is the best crop sown. One acre of land, well prepared, and sowed early with 60 pounds of seed, will yield on an average three tons of Flax, worth $12 per ton, or $36 for the acre. It is ready for market by the end of August, making only four months for a return for your labor. What steep equals that?

Poetry.

Voice Of New England.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Is this the land our fathers loved?
The freedom which they toiled to win?
Is this the soil whereon they moved?
Are these the graves they slumber in?
Are we the sons by whom is borne
The mantles which the dead have worn?

And shall we crouch above these graves
With craven soul and fettered lip?
Yoke in with marked and branded slaves,
And tremble at the driver's whip?
Bend to the earth our pliant knees,
And speak—but as our masters please

Shall outraged nature cease to feel?
Shall mercy's tear no longer flow?
Shall ruffian threats of cord and steel—
The dungeons gloom—assassin's blow
Turn back the spirit roused to save
Our Truth—Our Country—and the Slave?

Of human skulls that shrine was made,
Whereon the priests of Mexico
Before their loathsome idol prayed—
Is freedom's Altar fashioned so?
And must we yield to freedom's God,
As offering meet the negro's blood?

Shall tongues be mute, when deeds are wrought
Which well might shame extremest hell?
Shall Freemen lock the indignant thought?
Shall mercy's bosom cease to swell?
Shall Honor bleed—Shall Truth succomb?
Shall pen, the press, and soul be dumb?

No—by each spot of haunted ground
Where freedom weeps her children's fall—
By Plymouth's Rock—and Bunker's mound—
By Griswold's stained and shattered wall—
By Warren's ghost—by Langdon's shade—
By all the memories of our dead!

By their enlarging souls, which burst
The bands and fetters round them set—
By the free Pilgrim light around
Within our inmost bosoms set,—
By all above—around—below—
Be ours the indignant answer—No!

No—guided by our country's laws,
Nor truth, and light, and suffering man,
Be ours to strive in freedom's cause.
As Christians may—as Freeman can!
Still pouring on unwilling ears
The truth oppressions only fears.

The Ghost at Beechover Hall.

'I have no hesitation, Captain Arden, in asserting that you are an infidel and a heretic!'

Miss Dampier preferred this grave charge against me solely because I had expressed an utter disbelief in spiritual manifestations.

The attack was made in the long drawing room at Beechover Hall, where a large party were gathered around the old-fashioned fireplace; and never did the 'jolly dogs' which supported the blazing wood grin upon a pleasanter circle—at least, I thought so; but perhaps my opinion may be considered unbiassed, when I say that I should have found the society in an Irish cabin or an Esquimaux hut just as agreeable, so long as the firelight was reflected in Ethel Dampier's eyes.

My brother officer, Jack Beresford, and myself were, I believe, the only members of the party who could not claim ties of kindred with either Sir Harry or Lady Dampier, and both of us were earnestly desirous of enrolling our names amongst their connections, for Jack was as much in love with Laura as I was with Ethel Dampier. We had both lost our hearts at the same time. We happened to be on guard the day the Miss Dampiers made their first curtseeys to her gracious Majesty, and of all the young and fair débutantes who passed before us, we agreed that not one could bear comparison with the sisters. Our verdict was soon endorsed by public opinion, for they left St. James' Palace the acknowledged belles of the season.

We were not long before we were introduced to the beauties, nor were opportunities lacking for becoming intimate, as there were few evenings that we did not meet at some gay reunion. Our attentions must, I suppose, have been remarkable, for before the season was over we found ourselves tacitly acknowledged as the Miss Dampiers' cavaliers.

Laura was taller, and her presence more commanding; her hair and eyes, too, were darker. By many she was thought the handsomest; but she wanted that provoking fascination which Ethel possessed—at least, I thought so; probably Jack was of a different opinion.

The 'season' for both of us was unusually pleasant, and passed more quickly than ever; but the regret that came with its close was mitigated by an invitation to Beechover, Sir Harry's country place. The invitation pleased us all the more because it seemed to indicate that Sir Harry did not disapprove of our attentions to his daughters, and that the young ladies had no particular aversion to their admirers. In London our intercourse had not gone further than the limits of flirtation, and neither of us felt sure that it would ever be permitted to out-step those bounds. We had plenty of time to canvass the question, as Sir Harry was sent to Vichy, and a round of visits had to be got through after his return, before we could be received at Beechover.

This was the state of affairs when we found ourselves at Christmas under the same roof with the objects of our affections.

Shouts of laughter, of course, hailed Miss Dampier's attack upon my incredulity.

'Did you ever see a ghost, Miss Dampier?' I retorted.

'I am thankful to say,' she answered, 'that I can believe without seeing; but as you are not gifted with the same amount of faith, I only hope you may be convinced by an ocular demonstration.'

'There is nothing I should like better,' I replied. 'Let us advertise for a ghost; but perhaps, Miss Dampier, you have one on the premises, which will save us the trouble.'

'Of course we have. Did you ever hear of a respectable family that had not? It is only your nobodies who are ghostless.'

'I should have said that it was your no bodies who are ghosts.'

'For shame, Captain Arden! I did not think you would condescend to a pun, and such a one!'

'I will try and blush, if you will only tell me all about this family ghost. I hope it is a female, young and pretty, if I am to make its acquaintance.'

'I shall not waste my breath upon an unbeliever; you would only laugh at me and my story.'

'Give me a chance Miss Dampier. Think what a triumph it would be if you were to convert me. I promise to do my best to believe. Indeed I will if I can. So, pray tell us all about your ghost.'

'Do tell us, Ethel,' echoed a chorus of pretty cousins.'

After a little more pressing Miss Dampier complied with our request, and told her tale so well that I should only spoil it by attempting to repeat its words. It was the stereotyped ghost story. There were rustling silk heard in the corridors; the wearer was deadly pale, and was dressed in a Court costume (why is it that ghosts are always dressed for Court?) The only thing which gave this ghost any individuality was, that though her silks were often heard, she was only seen on Christmas Eve, and that on those occasions she carried a baby in her arms to the centre window in the picture-gallery, and, after a succession of cries from the infant, returned without it. This evidently hinted at a murder, and caused great excitement amongst the audience, which became intense when some one remarked that the following night was that of the annual infanticide.

Miss Dampier's tale was only the first of a series. They would have gone all night, I believe, had not Lady Dampier at length made a move, and carried off the young ladies. I accompanied them to the foot of the stairs, and thought I had never looked upon a prettier group than our hostess in her mature beauty, surrounded by her fair relations, amongst whom her daughters shone out as the moon inter stellas minores.

We men remained behind, and a smoke in the billiard-room drove the subject of our evening's conversation entirely from my mind.

'Will you meet me in half-an-hour in the picture-gallery?' said Dampier, after breakfast next morning. 'I have something very particular to talk to you about. I will bring the battledores and shuttlecocks as an excuse for a tete-a-tete.'

I need not say how gladly I promised to Miss Dampier at the appointed hour and place. To be taken into her confidence upon a matter however slight was a step in the right direction: there was no knowing what might come of a private interview; a word might fall or a glance be given which might serve as a clue to the feelings of her heart.

The intervening half-hour was spent in vain conjectures as to what could be the purport of Miss Dampier's communication. At its expiration I made my way to the gallery, and while waiting for Miss Dampier had ample time to look around me. The gallery was very long and low, running the whole length of the house. It was lighted by fifteen oriel bay-windows, upon which were various coats of arms in colored glass. The space between the windows and the whole of the opposite wall, except where doors led into the principal bed-rooms, was entirely concealed by family portraits, so closely packed together that it was impossible to discover the color of the wall. After making the tour of the room, and endeavouring to trace a likeness to Ethel amongst her ancestors, I turned into one of the bays, and took a seat.

'I know I am late Captain Arden' said Miss Dampier, running up to my resting-place with the battledores in her hand, 'but you must excuse me, as I could not affect my escape before from the drawing-room. Of course you are burning to know what I have to communicate. Talk of woman's curiosity—it is nothing to man's. Take a battledore, and I will let you into my secret. I have got a capital idea in my head, and I want your help to carry it out. You remember, perhaps, that this is the ghost's night? Well, I mean to play the ghost! Won't it be fun to frighten them all out of their senses?

'I know I could have asked one of the girls to accompany me, but if there was any cause for alarm, she would be sure to faint or run away. Now I think, Captain Arden, you would stay and protect me, wouldn't you.

'Protect you Eth—Miss Dampier, I mean! I would protect you with my life—against all comers, ghosts included!'

'Dont be rash! but listen to my plans. Up-stairs there is an old wardrobe filled with costumes worn by our great grandmothers. I have taken the key off the housekeeper's bunch, and intend this afternoon to abstract a dress of the stiffest silk I can find; one that will rustle well. I think I remember a blue silk that will suit exactly. I shall powder my face and look very ghastly, and when all have retired for the night I will join you here. Is it not a glorious idea? Every one will be on the qui vive to-night, and the first rustle of my silk will be sure to be heard.''

I agreed that the idea was capital, and laughed with her at the thought of the terror which her ghost-like appearance would inspire, my conscience all the while telling me that I was wrong to encourage a practical joke, which might be followed by bad effects. But how could I give up the sweet pleasure of pleasing Ethel, and with sharing a secret with her.

'But you have forgotten the Baby,' I suggested.

'No, indeed, I have not,' she replied. 'There is a young puppy in the stables, which I shall carry to my room; an old doll's dress and cap will convert it into a first-rate infant: and a judicious pinch, administered at the right moment, will extract a cry not unlike a baby's. Every one will be too frightened to be critical.'

We did not meet again alone, the subject of our conversation was not therefore renewed, but though there was no verbal communication, our eyes kept telegraphing. There was a secret between us, and I wonder that no one discovered the fact. The snow was falling fast and kept us all prisoners to the house, but for once in my life I did not abuse the weather.

By half-past twelve the house was still, and at a quarter to one, having put on a pair of noiseless slippers, I made my way to the picture-gallery. There was no need of a candle to find the way, for the moon was shining brightly; in the gallery it was almost as light as day. There was no curtains to the windows, and the moonlight, rendered more powerful by the reflection from the snow, photographed every line upon the polished floor, even reproducing in colors the armorial bearings on the glass.

It was the beau-ideal of a scene in which a ghost might play a part; the very smell of the room had something supernatural about it, and to an imaginative mind many of the pictures on the wall might have appeared possessed with life, as the branches of ivy which dangled over the windows cast moving shadows across their faces.

The clock struck one, and Ethel had not arrived. I was beginning to feel drowsy with the cold, and I in a half sleepy state, when Ethel's voice close to my ear startled me from my reverie.

'Asleep, and on duty, Captain Arden? I must report you to your colonel; but I suppose it is my fault for keeping you waiting in the cold. Am not I a first-rate ghost? I was quite terrified at looking at myself in the glass. I really believe I should frighten the ghost herself.''

There was a tremor in her voice which betrayed agitation. I saw that she shivered slightly as she seated herself in the bay window, all the animation which had glistened in her eye in the morning, at the prospect of her midnight walk had vanished, and the smile with which she asked what I thought of her "get up" was only a counterfeit. She was not a girl to give up an enterprise once entered upon, but it was evident that she was frightened at what she had undertaken. I knew her too well to think of recommending her to abandon her project, so I did my best to remove her nervousness by ignoring it, and by talking in a cheerful strain.

The costume was, of course, perfect, not being an imitation but a real antique. It consisted of a robe of blue silk brocaded with bouquets of flowers in their natural colors. the skirt was opened in the front to display a petticoat of yellow satin, stiff with gold embroidery, and round the neck and sleeves hung a profusion of old point lace. It could hardly have been possible to make a closer copy of the dress in the portrait.

We talked in whispers for a few minutes, for Ethel seemed to wish to have an excuse for not starting on her expedition immediately. I had no desire to hurry her, for could have sat there all night joyfully, forgetting altogether the object of our meeting, in the happiness of gazing into her eyes, and feeling her breath upon my cheek. At last, however, she declared it was too cold for sitting, and proposed starting on her walk. Taking the puppy in her arms, with a laugh she stepped into the gallery and left me with a caution not to lose sight of her. She walked slowly up the room, and slowly down again, but although her silk rustled loudly, no doors were open no noise was heard. She returned to her old seat in the bay, to arrange, she said, her baby, before making it cry on her next turn; but really to regain her breath which had been lost through fright. I tried to cheer her again in whispers, but with no result; her spirits were quite gone—gone past recall. I stood leaning against the wall, with my face to the window, my back to the room, my eyes wandering now over the moonlit landscape, now over Ethel's form. A sudden impulse caused me to lean back and look down the gallery—why, I cannot tell, unless some sound almost inaudible may have reached my ear. To my amazement I thought I saw a figure at the farthest end of the room —whether man or woman I could not tell—I only saw that something moved. It approached very slowly, and at last came full into the moonlight—it was a woman! thought a long way off, I could see that she was dressed like Ethel, in an ancient costume, and I could see that she carried something in her arms—something white. It was the real ghost and her infant! There could be no doubt of it. I could see her now more distinctly, for she advanced as far as the second window. This was decisive for an Oliver with a vengeance. I did not feel nervous but awe-struck. I believed at once in spiritual manifestations. On it came, gliding slowly with an almost imperceptable motion, pausing constantly and looking back; it reached the fifth window, the rustling of the silk was growing quite audible. I wondered that Ethel did not catch the sound; what was I to do? Was I to tell her? She must hear the sound before long. My brain was in a whirl. I had heard of the terrible effects of sudden fright—of people turning gray in a single night; nay, even of becoming raving mad. God knows I would have died to save my darling from such a fate; I was helpless, powerless. I felt like one in a nightmare—the danger was approaching, but I was spellbound; like the poor rabbit, I was fascinated, though the serpent's fangs were close upon me. The ghost was now at the seventh window; it stood still for a second, and then disappeared in the bay. Thank Heaven! now I might be able to persuade Ethel to leave the gallery; but how to do it was the question. I was just going to take her up in my arms and rush with her from the gallery when the ghost emerged again and stood full in the moonshine. Too late Too late! She had now reached the eighth window; she stopped again and disappeared in the recess. There are fifteen windows, thought I, then the eighth must be the centre; we shall hear the baby's cry in a minute: Ethel must hear that. I was distracted—in despair. The ghost was again in the moonlight, she had put off the murder for a time; the rustling became more distinct. I was in an agony, half maddened my face must have betrayed my emotion, for Ethel jumped from her seat.

'What is the matter, Harry?' she cried 'are you ill? your face is so strange.'

It was too late—I could not save her. She pushed past me, and stood face to face with the ghost, who was now only four windows distant. Uttering a piercing shriek, she cried—

'Harry!—dear Harry, save me!' and fell fainting into my arms.

'Help!—help!' I called but before the words were past my lips, another cry rung through the gallery.

Was it the echo? No, it was in a different key to Ethel's. I looked up, and saw the ghost upon the floor—fainting, too. In a second more Jack's strong arms were supporting the inanimate form. He, like myself had been concealed in one of the bay windows.

My eyes were opened; my disbelief in ghosts returned stronger than ever. The ghost was not a ghost after all, but flesh and blood. The ghost was Laura Dampier, and now the rival ghosts were fainting each with terror at the other—each fully believing that the other was the Lady in Blue, who haunted the picture gallery.

The two successive shrieks had more effect than the rustling of the rival silks. Bolts began to unbolt, locks to unlock, and doors to open, displaying startled faces. Eyes scarcely open from their first sleep peered into the gallery, and drowsy voices asked what was the matter? Women's cries muffled by the bed clothes, sounded from some chambers. 'The ghost! the ghost!' echoed wildly from others.

"Water!" I cried.

"Salts?" called Jack.

Sir Harry seemed the only practical man in the house, for in a second he was with us holding a water jug in his hand, which I seised and sprinkled Ethel's face with its contents, and then passed it on to my friend who performed the same operation upon her sister.

"What is the meaning of all this?" asked their father. "I insist on an explanation, Captain Beresford—Captain Arden! Answer me at once: who are these masqueraders?"

"Your daughters, Sir. They have both fainted! Help us to bring them round, and all shall be explained to your satisfaction.

We were now the centre of a crowd, carrying bedroom candles, who had plucked up courage to leave their rooms. Salts and sal-volatile poured in on all sides. There were plenty of volunteers to rub the young ladies' hands, and plenty more to suggest impracticable remedies. The old-fashioned remedies, however, salts and cold water, soon did their work.

"Where am I?" whispered Laura, whilst a deep sigh heralded Ethel's return to consciousness.

They looked round inquiringly, and both seemed bewildered at the circle of faces which hemmed them in. At last the eyes of the sisters met!—For an instant they scanned each other curiously, and then a look of relief appeared on both countenances.

"Were you the ghost?" they cried simultaneously, and a feeble laugh from each proclaimed that they were satisfied. The laugh was contagious and became general.

Had I not been so anxious about Ethel's recovery, I should have found it very hard to control my laughter within moderate bounds when I saw the general result of the escapade—the ghosts laughing, fainting, half-dressed costumes in confusion on without any regard to appearance, the effect may be imagined better than described. It would be impossible to describe the deshabille that appeared in the gallery that night. Tawdry wide wraps of all sorts, shawls of all colors, skunks of all shapes, night-caps of all patterns, forming a tout-ensemble truly grotesque.

We fear, who felt ourselves to be properly equipped at all points, could afford to laugh at the ridiculous figures cut by our friends,—and we did laugh; and as Ethel and Laura regained their strength, their merriment became louder and longer. The rest, of course, could not refrain from laughing at each other, but they could not laugh with a will as we could. We had decidedly the best of it; but there was one member that did not relax even into a smile. Sir Harry's anger was in no small measure, and he talked aside for an explanation of this unseemly disturbance.

"Don't be angry, dear papa,' pleaded Ethel; "we have been foolish, very foolish, but we have been punished enough for our folly. It appears that the same idea struck Laura and myself; we both thought it would be

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1870.

Volunteers for the Red River.

We understand that Lieut.-Col. Poole received intelligence on Monday, that two officers and ten men would be expected to volunteer, from this battalion, for the Red River service. Major Kennedy, informs us that more than 20 men from No. 2 company have already offered their services. We have not heard from the other companies, but we know that they will not be behind. About 100 men and 8 or 10 officers are expected from the district, Kingston to Bowmanville. We are sure that number could be obtained from Peterborough alone.

The people have a thorough detestation of the murderer Riel, and would go in hundreds, to revenge the blood of poor Scott.

We expected some of our prominent citizens would have requested the mayor to call a meeting to express the pent up feelings of disapprobation of the Scott tragedy, and to urge on the government immediate action, as well as to lift their voice against receiving as delegates the men who had been parties to the murder of the brave Canadian. We think the people of Peterboro have been remiss in this matter, but this will not hinder our volunteers to come nobly forward to vindicate the right, and to establish order in the Nor' West; and we trust that all who go will receive a just recompence of reward in the new country. They will make short work of Riel and his few half breeds, if they ever find him, which is not at all likely. He will flee at their approach, and leave quiet possession.

The great difficulty among the volunteers of Ontario will be to keep them from going west. We understand that something like a ballot for those who will have to stay at home, will be necessary here.

Spring Floods.

The river is now unusually high; nearly three feet higher than it has been ever known to be since the first settlement of either the Town or Ashburnham. It commenced to rise about ten days ago, and it still continues at the rate of ten to twelve inches every 24 hours. It is believed to be near its height now, but the immense snow-falls of March, together with all that fell before, are putting to nought all power of calculations on past experience.

The Nassau Bridge is gone, hence all travel across it impossible for a long time, if not for years, as the travel by that road does not warrant much outlay on that bridge.

The Lakefield Bridge, too, has become dangerous, if not entirely useless; and the Lakefield dam has been partly damaged, the top, we understand, has been carried off.

The old piers at Judge Dennistoun's are swept away. The loss however is nothing, their removal only demonstrates the water power that removed them.

All the dams have been in danger. Mr. Dickson has had large bodies of men protecting his dam. And we understand that at the Blythe Mills, Martin's Mill, and Snyder's old Mill, the greatest efforts had to be made to protect the dams and slides, in order to prevent their going off; for if this had taken place, immense damage would have followed below where the break would take place.

There were great fears entertained for the Bridge at Hale's Mill. The water was up to the string pieces on Saturday.

We understand that several small bridges on the small creeks have been swept away, so that travel will be almost impossible for some time.

Those who live on the edge of the river or on low grounds, and who had not provided against contingencies, are suffering in the loss of their wood, fences and moveable articles round their yards. A few in Ashburnham, have had to leave their dwellings.

Up to the time of our going to press the water in the river is still rising, but fortunately no great damage is being done to dams or property near the town, except at the Auburn Mills, where all that could be done was done, and is still necessary to protect the property.

The loss of time and men's wages, together with loss of floating wood; and where machinery was low, the injury done it will be no small item, taking the country all over. Three Fenian raids would not cause as much loss, when crossways, bridges, roads, dams and property swept away are considered.

We are sorry to learn that the dam at Payne's Mill north of Warsaw, and the dam at Choat's Mill Warsaw, are both swept away. Communication to Norwood is almost impossible, except travellers are prepared for swimming their conveyance in places.

The bridge at the Locks was considered in great danger yesterday, but Mr. Walton on behalf of the County, and Mr. Carlisle on behalf of the Town, put on men to protect it by some means.

The river has been seeking a new channel across Mrs. Ware's place, and if it goes much higher, a Canal may be partially and cheaply made.

An old Mill on the Ashburnham side of Mr. Dixon's dam, was carried off on Tuesday; this made a small rent, which did much to carry away the water, and soon it was found lowered on the Town side.—This it was believed would do much to save the clay portion of the dam.

Rumors are current of the weak state of the dam at Young's point, but up to our going to press nothing had occurred to endanger it.

There has been nothing like the present floods in the memory of any one residing near Peterboro.

Easter Show of Beef.

The show of Beef in the Butchers' Market on Saturday, was one of the finest sights in that line that could be easily witnessed.

Mr. Webber, had an excellent animal fed by Mr. Joseph Walton, Monaghan, and several other animals, mutton, lamb, and veal, which could scarcely be surpassed by anything in the Province.

Mr. Winch had some meat brought from the neighborhood of Guelph, that was considered excellent, and certainly looked well.

Mr. Howden's stall was supplied with beef fed by himself, we understood, and also some fed by others, which certainly was a credit to the feeders of this part of the Country.

Mr. Leplant's stall was well supplied; and Mr. Heather had a large supply of excellent meat.

It is very doubtful if a better beef market could have been seen in Ontario, as far as quality is concerned.

Mr. Whyte, on Simcoe Street, had his stall well filled, from the Herd of Mr. H. Collins, Monaghan.

And Mr. Coe, Ashburnham, was ready to supply meat of the best quality, of Mr. Collins' feeding.

There will be diverse opinions of many concerning their favourite butcher's catering in the beef line, but in our humble opinion those animals of Mr. Collins' and Mr. Joseph Walton's feeding, would be hard to beat from any quarter, and this we can fairly say without detracting in the least, the animals brought from a distance.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

SIR,—As a recent decision of ours has become the subject of newspaper comment, permit us to lay before your readers a short synopsis of the proceedings.

The information was made by Daniel Fitzpatrick, on the 31st of Jany. last, before John Rose, one of the undersigned Justices of the Peace, and charged Mr. J. Wason, a licensed shop keeper in Warsaw, with selling, and allowing to be consumed on his premises, spirituous liquors, contrary to law.

The following witnesses were summoned to appear in behalf of the prosecutor, viz: David Forsythe, John MacNaMarra and Daniel Fitzpatrick.

At the hearing of the case, two witnesses appeared, viz:—Forsythe and MacNaMara, the other witness Daniel Fitzpatrick, did not appear.

The informant before proceeding with his action, said he wished the proceedings postponed, as one of his witnesses was not present.

As ample time had been given, and as no reason had been given us why said witness was not present, and as the probabilities were that by adjourning the proceedings, as many of the parties could not be got together again, and as it would have been very inconvenient for two of us to attend, and particularly as there were two of the witnesses for the prosecution present, we decided to proceed.

The informant was examined on oath.—He said he was in Wason's Shop on the 26th of January last, that he went to settle an account, that he asked Wason to "throw off" something from the account, that Wason refused to do this, that he then threatened to have Wason fined, that he brought this action on that account, that he paid Wason his account, and told him to look out for what would follow, meaning that he intended to have Wason fined for selling liquor by the glass; that if he had not disputed with Wason about his account, he should not have brought this action; that he drank whiskey in Wason's Shop, that he paid for it and took the money back.

David Forsythe, in his evidence said that he was present in Wason's Shop all the time David Fitzpatrick and Wason were disputing about the account, saw no whiskey drank, nor money paid, could not help seeing it if it had been done; was present all the time.

John Mac NaMarra, on oath, said, was present all the time in Wason's Shop, to which David Fitzpatrick's evidence relates, could have seen if whiskey was drunk, if it had been, could not have been drunk without my seeing it, saw no spirituous liquor drank nor money paid.

In consequence of the very contradictory statement of David Fitzpatrick the informant, and from the fact that none of the witnesses testified to spirituous liquors being bought and drunk by the glass, and especially because both the prosecutor's witnesses testified positively to none being drunk or paid for, we could give no other decision than to dismiss the case, the informant to pay costs.

We are, &c.,
JOHN ROSE, J. P.
THOS. GEO. CHOATE, J. P.

Dummer, April 15th 1870.

I hereby certify that I was present at the hearing of the action brought by David Fitzpatrick, versus John Wason, in Feb'y last, that I heard all the evidence produced for the prosecution. that Fitzpatrick's case was not sustained, that in my opinion the J. P's present could give no other decision than to dismiss the case. I heard none of the Magistrates present make use of the expression "bring on your evidence" and I am certain it was not made use of.

DAVID FORSYTH.

Dummer, April 16th, 1870.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

Warsaw Again.

SIR,—I have been advised by some of our best men here not to reply to the last effusion of "Dummeronian," and have thought it good advice; but lest he should think he has, without restraint, hoodwinked this community into believing that he has accomplished his seemingly determined purpose to annihilate all before him, I am induced, modestly of course, to make a few remarks.

"Dummeronian" commences his communication with the well known quotation —"A writer who builds his arguments on facts is not easily to be confuted. He is not to be answered by general assertions and general reproaches. He may want eloquence to amuse or persuade; but speaking the truth he must always convince;" to every word of which I unqualifiedly respond, Amen. How my friend has been admonished by this motto, which he says he has chosen as his guide, the sequel will show.

With the aforesaid determination indelibly fixed upon his imagination, "Dummeronian" proceeds to give me a touch of his education, by the way, I suppose, of letting me know he is a professional gentleman; but he would do well to remember that

"A little learning is a dangerous thing,"

And that "they who are learning to compose and arrange their sentences with accuracy and order are learning, at the same time, to think with accuracy and order."

And to remember the words of Macbeth,

"Lay on Macduff,
And damned be him who first cries, hold, enough."

Speaking of my last communication, he says: "If I were inclined to be critical, I might sum up the merits of that article by saying it is about two feet eight inches in length by two and a half inches in breath!" Verily, Mr. Editor, here is the most modern specimen of criticism I have met with. I was not aware, sir, that I could write breathing articles, and seriously I ask did he not mean breadth. Again, he says my expression that "certain gentlemen had lived their lives here" is misty, and he continues, "I suppose 'Credens' meant to say they have spent the previous! part of their lives here." Oh, doctor, if there is mist in my statement, there surely is more than breath in the correction. Be assured, my friend, "Credenda" intended to say nothing of the kind, and if the expression appears misty, it is because your spectacles are not of the right kind. Green ones, I suppose, he will admit, do not change the color of all objects around him when they make observations of that hue. Then change your spectacles, my friend, you certainly need a better article.

I hold, sir, that a writer who blows his own horn so loud in this matter of criticism should be scrupulously careful that his own compositions are not faulty. For my part, I make no pretensions to literary ability, and, therefore, claim that my writings should not be subject to criticism. How stands the case with "Dummeronian?" He takes exception to the language I use, while his own compositions are full of egregious blunders. For instance, "a grocery sold whisky by the glass." Who ever heard of a grocery selling whisky? the proprietor might, and this is, I suppose, what my learned friend meant. Again, he speaks of "having one of these fines, at least, refunded," evidently meaning, at least one of these fines, &c.; and, again, he says, "I have only spoken of the public acts of public men." In my ignorance, sir, I would place his "only" nine steps forward. I could multiply instances of this kind, but I forbear for the present, as there is yet much to be written to follow the "devious wandering" of this gentleman; and I advise him, by all means, the next time he writes, seeing he has taken to measuring things in general, to give me the critical dimensions of a cord of wood or a shin plaster.

Now, after giving poor "Credenda" such a supercilliously critical notice my friend closes this notorious paragraph by saying "the question is not how long any man has lived here, but how certain gentlemen now in office are discharging their duty to the public?" Wrong again. He has mentioned only one of the three questions raised by himself. First, he says the public agree in opinion with the landlord that a certain shop (he meant the proprietor) sold whisky without stint, and that he was encouraged by the authorities, &c. Secondly, "where shall we get men of sterling integrity to administer our laws. Now, unless I am blind, here are the three questions in dispute, and I purpose discussing them, reversing the order in which they appear.

I suppose, Sir, my friend cannot have forgotten who wrote this question, nor the circumstances under which it appeared.—Certain gentlemen in office here were doing all manner of bad things, and in order to displace them, other and more reliable men must be enquired for, and this was publicly done, by my friend "Dummeronian." Now, I must say, in passing, the whole affair smells very strongly of a certain prayer I have read of "I thank, &c., I am not as other men are," but my friend would do well to remember, that the croaking frog in the meadow, when the grazing ox disturbed him, by his quiet feeding near by, in attempting to make himself the size of the ox, by swelling and puffing, burst himself asunder, and that was the last of him (the frog). Has M. D. bursted? I was forcibly reminded of this fable when I read his last production. He talked big, and exhibited his small wares as best he could, but in his blind fury he mistook his game. I agree with "Dummeronian," however, that nothing can be more silly and extraordinary, or more officious, or destitute of good taste, than to drag any unoffending neighbour, who is quietly attending to his own business, into a newspaper controversy; and I think had "Dummeronian" well considered these words, before he rushed into print, he would never have penned the insidious part of his first article; but when he publicly declares in effect that the men in office here are not the men that should be, and asks in the same manner where "we" shall find such as "we" want. I cannot see any impropriety in discussing the qualifications of any individual, in view of his becoming a candidate for office; and if there is, the onus certainly falls on him who raised the discussion; and "Dummeronian" you are that person. Invidious discussions about the fitness of the men in office have been raised, then why not, in order to make an improvement, discuss the fitness of some of those out. These fit, for instance, Dosher Bingham, where could the electors of Dummer, who appear to be shuffling along without either law or order to guide them, find a Candidate for the Reeveship, who could better bring order out of chaos in a twinkling. He has the advantage of a superior education, to that possessed by most of the "worthies" here, and he is a person of the description required by my friend, then by all means, I say, bring him out. Then for one of the Councillors, suppose I mention David Fitzpatrick; he has the advantages at least of being "one of Her Majesty's loyal subjects," and of having a level head, in which there is yet breath, as well as thickness; and judging from the evidence in his case published in this issue, can he not do well in this line? and if after his election he should get furious in discussing the new questions of paying any of our debts in full, the Reeve might send him on a mission to India, where if he choose, he could accept office as leader of one of the tribes "Dummeronian" speaks of. I shall not attempt, Mr. Editor, to furnish names for the whole of the Council, as I have already occupied too much space, but will close this part of my subject by saying this new Council might find a Clerk, in the person, who copies, in the upper story, articles written for the press, of which their author is ashamed, and who may be known by having a pen constantly behind his 'ears'; and by saying, that in my next I shall probably complete the list; if in the meantime I don't hear them exclaim, Oh! Ah! I'll have nothing to do with your Council, I am long since disgusted with municipal matters, and I—modestly of course—pass on.

Now with regard to the second question in dispute, viz., that the opinion of the public is, that a certain shop-keeper in Warsaw was encouraged by the authorities to violate the law, "Dummeronian" says, I observe with surprise, that "Credenda" charges me with uttering what is not true regarding public opinion, &c., and he asserts distinctly, that what he said on the subject in a former communication was true to the letter. Well, Sir, how does my learned friend prove his statement? He says, with a flourish of trumpets, "I will now state a few facts, which tend to show, that my statements were correct," and then he proceeds to give his report of what three J. P's and the Council in Dummer did, and this of course is to be taken as proof clear and positive, that public opinion here is as he describes it. This is certainly a novel way of proving a statement. Suppose for arguments sake every word of his gobble about certain proceedings was correct, it proved only that the J. P's and the Council had been doing wrong, not by any means that public opinion is, &c. I advise my friend to give me the next time he writes, proof that his statement is a correct one, and in the meantime to study up his logic a little more attentively, for I submit he has been obliged to creep out of a very small hole.

Then as to how certain gentlemen in office here are discharging their duties to the public, "Dummeronian" says; sometime in January last the young man whom he calls informant made complaint against a certain shop keeper here for selling whisky, &c., and proceeds, "now, in such a case, it is reasonable to suppose that the municipality, through its inspecting officer, would proceed," &c. Perfectly reasonable; but says he, "in the extraordinary case before us,' the informant after making oath that he had bought, &c., had actually to pay six dollars costs." Hold on, Mr. "Dummeronian" with truth as your guide, you conveniently forget that two witnesses, and these summoned for the prosecution testified distinctly to the contrary, and that your informant contradicted himself more than once in his evidence, and for these reasons his case was not sustained. Who then, I ask, my professional friend, should pay the costs? He proceeds, "when informant appeared in court, one of the J. P's told him to bring on his evidence, and by this dodge informant was cunningly ensnared into the position of a prosecutor." On this point I wish to put in the following from an eye witness:

"I hereby certify that I was present at the hearing of the action brought by David Fitzpatrick versus John Wason, in February last, that I heard all the evidence produced; that Fitzpatrick's case was not sustained; that in my opinion the J. P's. could give no other decision than to dismiss the case. I heard none of the Magistrates present make use of the expression, 'bring on your evidence,' and I am certain it was not made use of.

"(Signed) DAVID FORSYTHE.

"Dummer, 16th April, 1870."

Now, sir, what becomes of the boast that by this dodge, &c. It ends in smoke, like the rest of his twaddle. But why does not "Dummeronian" tell your readers that his informant took the complaint of the inspecting officer to the J. P. on Sunday morning, and that he was very properly told by Mr. Rose "to call around the next day:" that when he came the next morning, he at his own request made complaint against the shop keeper in question, giving as a reason that he wanted one more witness summoned, whose name he had not given to the Inspector, and that he made a deposit of costs on his own account? I'll tell you why; simply because it did not suit his purpose. These, however, are actual facts and as there was no dodge practiced "Dummeronian" again does violence to the motto under which he writes.

I shall not attempt to follow this writer through his description of this memorable case, as enough has been written to show that his report of the proceedings is a most one sided and unfair one, but rather refer him to the magistrates' synopsis, given below, which is a plain statement of facts, and which effectually answers all the nonsense advanced by my friend.

The Council then comes in for a share of the twaddle of this learned writer; but what are the facts? They are simply these. At the close of last licenses year, Mr. J. MacNamara petitioned for a shop license. As no other such license had been applied for, for the village of Warsaw, and as the license fees, some fifty dollars, with the proper sureties for complying with the law, were forthcoming, the council could not reasonably refuse to grant his request. I deny, however, that the object of the Council was to extricate the shopman out of difficulty, or that there was diplomacy of an extraordinary kind practised, and I challenge "Dummeronian" to produce one vestige of proof for his statement, and if it is not produced, let him stand convicted of again violating the precepts of his motto. On the contrary, I most distinctly and emphatically assert, that none of the Councillors referred to, as much as thought of extricating any person out of difficulty in this way.

I acknowledge, Mr. Editor, I have already occupied too much space; but I could not answer the "devious wanderings" of this writer in much less space than I have occupied, and as I have just noticed your hint to correspondents, I shall, in conclusion; be as brief as possible.

"Dummeronian" refers to the responsibilities of a certain person here, as being quite invisible, but he forgets that the person furnishes good and sufficient sureties for his compliance with the license laws, and, therefore, I infer his responsibilities are quite tangible.

The magistrates of Dummer next come in for a lesson,—poor ignorant fellows. A magistrate, he says, is the supposed guardian of peace and law; to him is committed the solemn trust, &c. No doubt they feel grateful to him for telling them what they already know; but as he closes his lesson with the expression, "without this central governing principle of doing right because it is right, no man can safely be trusted," his words apply as well to himself as any one else, and I submit, if "Dummeronian" is in the necessary moral condition to cast the first stone, he is a person of more than ordinary excellence, indeed. I can safely say, if such be the case, he is the only one of that kind of "worthies" we have in these parts. No doubt it was on this principle of doing right because it is right, that he told a neighbor "if anything appears in the "Examiner" in reply to my letter, I'll write, by thunder, all day Sunday." Seriously, I think the M. D., has blown a loud blast, "I'll blowed if I don't.

Now, Mr. Editor, I trust "Dummeronian" will remember the points in dispute. I ask for proof that public opinion is as he describes it; that the Council granted a certain license by dodging and diplomacy, for the purpose of keeping a certain person out of difficulty; and proof, that the J. P's referred to, made a wrong decision, or one not warranted by the evidence. Let him leave my musical anvils and his own "devious wanderings" and all such irrelevant items out of the question, and attend closely to the points in dispute; and if he does, my word for it, his communications in future, will not be like those in the past, as full of airy nothing as a dandelion top.

I will now close by saying if much more thunder is raised about here, some one will have to buy a lightning rod!

Very truly, &c.,

CREDENDA.

Radway's Ready Relief, Renovating Resolvent, and Regulating Pills.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 28, 1866.

DOCTOR RADWAY & CO

DEAR SIR:— * * * * * My wife blesses these preparations, when she thinks that after three nights and days of suffering of the lent pains in the stomach, brought on by overdoses of Quinine, by the use of four drops of "Ready Relief" in some water, she was able to sleep tranquil all night, and the next day she was completely re-established. I have also cured a slave from heart disease with "Ready Relief" and "Pills," and have also cured sore throat, rheumatic pains, toothache, headache, &c With the "Resolvent" I have cured Erysipelas, Skin diseases, &c

It is my full impression that the "Pills" are the best purgative tha can be found, not alone for the facility which they can be taken, but also as they do not cause griping or make you feel sick

I have a son of five years old now, who took the "Ready Relief" when 4 months old, as he suffered from some irregularity in the bladder, preventing him from making urine. The following was the treatment: 20 drops of "Relief" in a cup of water, and divide it in portions of a table spoon, which he took every ten minutes, which completely cured him. He has since had colic, which I treat in the same way, and also rub the stomach with it (pure)

Major Joaquim Vieira do Silva Pinto, proprietor, in the Citdale Leopoldina, can prove that after more than ten years suffering from Paralysis, through the medium of your remedies he obtained that which he had been deprived, and thought at the time that he would never be able to get, and that was the use of his legs.

You can fully believe that there are a great many people in this vast empire who truly confess that they owe their life to the use in time of your precious medicines You can make use of this as you think proper.

I remain, dear friends,

They have been throughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box.

MONEY MAKES THE MARE GO.—This is an old and true saying, and it is equally true that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" will make all pains go from the body and cures Bowel complaints, Tooth Ache, Head Ache, Sprains, Bruises, &c., sooner than anything else discovered. Price 25 cents a bottle.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hord & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

THE Glengarry Cheese Factory lately called at Rome is an instance of the collierads of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion may be as harmonious and unanimous as the applause in favor of the Great Steamboat Factory, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

THE BARBADOSVILLE DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. [Boston Commercial.

PARSONS IN ARMS in the neighborhood of name and reckon, of a very obstinate character, which will continue for years unless mining the patient's health if not properly treated, constantly disburging more or less of a thin watery offensive fluid, and having the walls of its little fetulous pipes or canals very hard or callous. Dr. J. Briggs' Pile Remedy remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affection. Many who have tried it, do not hesitate to say it is superior to anything ever yet used for this disease. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 266 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Shaves of Time's Harvest.

BY ELIZABETH C. WHITNEY.

Time passed his head o'er the brow of youth,
And ploughed deep furrows where once 'twas smooth.

Then he wrote great lines of thought and care,
In the [illegible] the smiles it used to wear;
Then sprinkled the clean locks with gray,
And faded the light of the eye away.
And the reaper smiled at the mourner's grief,
As he gathered home this ripened sheaf.

Time stood by a forest dim and old,
As its thousand years were well nigh told,
And its fallen king lay mouldering there
Where the grey moss swung to the chilly air,
From ocean to ocean's distant shore
That trackless forest shadowed o'er;
But a nation tells where these wild-wood leaves
Where gathered once with that reaper's sheaves.

Time stood on Babylon's stately walls,
And paced thro' proud Palmyra's halls,
And like the echo of his tread
Came funeral wailings for the dead;
And now the desert blasts alone
Sigh o'er each fallen monarch's throne—
The only spirit abroad that grieves
Over those long since gathered sheaves.

Time leaned against the humble shed,
That sheltered the starving peasant's head,
And though heart-strings broke as the roof fell in,
The groans of the dying were drowned in the din.
What reeked old Time the peasant's woes?
He had looked on a dying nation's throes!
Alike to him man's joy or grief,
As he gathers one more human sheaf.

Yet waited not the reaper dread,
For the flower to wither and droop its head,
For he cut with his sickle sharp and keen,
The golden ear and the loveliest green,
The baby that sparkled its grandsire's knee,
And the grey old man alike takes he.
The starting bud and the withered leaf,
He gathers to add to his well-grown sheaf.

The rose-tinged petals together rolled,
And tne bud untwisting each fragrant fold,
The flower on its stem, scarce fully blown,
He bears with his sheaves to his harvest home;
The youthful while hopes still points on the air
Visions of glory enchantingly fair,
The reaper gathers, nor heeds our grief—
He has need, perhaps, of this blooming sheaf.

Alone that silent reaper stands
And binds his sheaves with his bony hands,
And he scans the field of his harvest o'er
As he scanned it a thousand years before—
And he laughs as he watches the puny toil
Of those whose labours he makes his spoil,
For the world and its creatures, like autumn leaves,
He bind's together—Time's harvest sheave.

Eternal Dishwashing.

The quiet fidelity with which she will dish wash her life away for 'him," is a marvel of endurance and grace. Just here is the acerbitude of woman heaviest; no sooner is her work done, than it requires to be done again. Man works up jobs, ends them and takes his pay. This pay can be translated it to something else desirable. A man works all day, and draws pay for his day's work. This pay allures him, as eats a horse homeward bound. Thus men work by terms and jobs; and although work is endless as to quantity, yet when cut up thus into terms and jobs, we men go heartily on our journey and count our milestones.

Not so with our mites. "She" mends our socks, and we put our irrepressible toe upon the darned spot, and she darns it again. 'She' washes for the family, and the family makes haste to send back the same garments to be washed again. '8' puts the room in in order, and we get it ready to be 'red up again. The same socks, the same washing, the same room every time. She has no successive jobs, no terms, no pay-day, no tally-stick of life. She washes the same dish three hundred and sixty-five—yes, three times three hundred and sixty-five times every year. No wonder she breaks it and is glad of it! What a relief to say, "I've done with that dish!"

Not only have we washed dishes, but also we cooked and served and helped eat a meal (with 'bated appetite because of cooking), and now we are astounded at the number of thoughts, and steps, and acts, and processes involved in a very plain supper. Only two of us, jolly cronies, caring nothing for style, and needing only a very plain supper. And we had it, and with it came wisdom.

Gentlemen, all! We go into a room and see a table ready set. It seems to us one thing—it is' in fact, from fifty to two hundred separate things, taken down one by one for us to use, and for "her" to wash and put back whence they came. There is a plate of biscuit. To that plate of simplicity we with our own hands and feet brought together a new quick fire for baking, viz: kindling wood, raking out stove and bed of coal; flour from the bin, shortening from the gravy-drip down cellar, salt from one box, sugar from another, soda from the jar, acid [muriatic] from a bottle, a spoon, a pitcher of water, a dripping pan, and a tin pan for mixing up these ingredients; and, after all, happening to forget the things for ten minutes, we burned the biscuits half through, in a way which we men reckon unpardonable in a cook.—Meanwhile, that one plate of biscuit added to the eternal dish-wash, two spoons, two pans, one plate and a little cup. Just a little piece of stock contributed eight pieces to the dish-wash. A few strawberries sent in six pieces to be got ready, to soil again. Four eggs impressed themselves on six separate articles.—"Arthur's Home Magazine."

The Fortune of War.—Prize money.—"Punch".

To A Bonnet.—"Though lost to sight to memory dear."—"Tomahawk".

Interesting to Youthful Barristers.—A maiden brief is not a little girl.—"Judy".

The Height of Impudence.—Taking shelter from the rain in an umbrella shop.

Why is the treadmill like a true convert? Because its turning is the result of the man's conviction.

It is said that the United States census embraces seventeen million women. Who wouldn't be a census?

A tailor who, while skating, fell through the ice, declared that he would never again leave his hot goose fat a cold duck.

A Frenchman boasting of the inventing genius of his country, said, "We invented lace ruffled." "Ay," said John Bull, "and we added shirts to them."

Swift, who reasoned upon the folly of the dread of death, sums up thus: "It is impossible that any thing so natural, so necessary, and so universal as death should ever have been designed by Providence as an evil to mankind."

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditive Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Conditive Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions—thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

An old lady in New Jersey, having read an account of the bursting of a grindstone in a manufacturing establishment, became terribly alarmed last a grindstone which was standing in her cellar should burst and blow the house down.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from the cures it has made of those afflicted with scrofulous complaints. Innumerable cases of terrible disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous constitution, continued until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into ope or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or liver, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Tits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various grievous affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilitic Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Obstructions, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who use Leucorrhœa and Whites, Despondency, Sleeplessness, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthmas is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient, the number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the unbounded judgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Disacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Poetry.

At the Gate.

Footsore, cold and weary,
The child stood at the gate,
Drench'd with rain and faint with hunger,
All forlorn and desolate;
While the shrieking winds are flying,
And the autumn day swift dying,
Still the patient child doth wait.

Now and then, through wind-stripp'd branch an Fitful tossing to and fro,
Comes the gleam of many windows,
All with ruddy light a-glow;
And the child's ear something catches
Sounds of music faint and low.

In her soft and trembling accents,
This sentence sought in vain;
Ah! these cruel gates are cliost,
Though she prays, again, again;
For one thought seems ever burning
In her fever'd childish brain.

"Mother said that she was going,
And that I, too, must go,
Through the gates of that far country;
And it must be here. I know;
For all there is warmth and gladness,
And all here is grief and sadness,
And my heart is aching so."

"And she said, for me my Saviour
Wash'd a robe all white from sin;
So that, torn, and soil'd, and bleeding,
Even I might entrance win;
But, ah me! He will not hear me,
Now the angles bright come near me.
Mother, mother, take me in!"

But the dark night gave no answer,
To the voice of child's despair;
Till at last the porter opening
And that oft-repeated prayer,
In rough and cruel accents,
Bade the child not linger there.

On she wander'd, no one caring,
Where she dragg'd her weary feet,
All along the stony roadside,
Through the city's crowded street,
Where perchance strange words of kindness
The forsaken child would greet.

But too late all earthly comfort!
Need of earthly care is o'er!
For the broken heart is passing
Swiftly to that happy shore,
Where the pearly gates are open,
Bless'd be God, for evermore.

There all care and grief forgotten,
Safe as on her mother's breast;
If the way was rough and toilsome,
O how sweet the early rest,
Within the endless glory,
As in the old, old story
In the arms of Jesus blest!

Ah! earth's gates how hard and cruel!
Where we stand, day after day,
Oft with sore and bitter weeping,
And all broken-hearted pray,
Not knowing in our blindness,
That God's tender loving-kindness
Is turning us away,

To where for ever open,
Stand heaven's glorious gates of gold,
Trough earth's dreary storm and tempest,
Summer's sun and Winter's cold;
Till all God's wandering children
Safe are gather'd in the fold.

Literature.

For Life or Death.

"Senor Inglese, a young lady renders a visit to your grace," said fat Juan, the waiter, throwing the door wide for the visitor's admission.

I was sitting in the window of my little room on the third floor of the Fonda de l'Alameda, looking down upon the darkling promenade where the lighted cigar tips were beginning to twinkle among the fountains and marble statutes, and where the beaux and belles of Malaga, with fan and rustling mantilla and jingling spurs, were passing and repassing in endless groups, full of mirth and gossip. As for myself, I was heartily tired. We had a long day's work in getting the cargo on board. Nor did I grudge it, the rather that Price and Thompson, our owners, had as good as promised that when the Tudor next sailed away out of the sight of the tower of St. Mary Redcliffe, Henry West should command her, vice Micklejohn, retired on a pension. Old Mr. Croft was one of the few English, excepting the invalids whom the warm Winter climate had at that time begun to attract, resident in Malaga. He was a widower, and Alice was his only child, and about nineteen years of age. Her father had married late in life, and on this account, perhaps, and for the sake of the wife, to whom he had been tenderly attached, and who had died when Alice was still very young, he was unusualy wrapt up in his daughter, of whom he was excessively proud and fond. . . . At last I learned the truth; Mr. Croft had the habit of taking a morning walk outside the landward gate of the city, and in the direction of the mountains. He was an early riser, and had an artist's fondness for the face of nature, when the earth seems to awaken, fresh and young, at the first kiss of the sunshine. He was used, then, to stroll out beyond the walls as soon as the gates were opened for the ingress of the peasants coming to the market, and many of his best sketches were made in these rambles. In one of these strolls, that very morning, Mr. Croft had by ill luck stumbled into an ambush of the banditti, from whom the wild sierras neighbouring on Malaga are seldom free. These robbers, under a bold chief named Moreno, had of late been very audacious and troublesome, and it was conjectured that a party of the gang lying in wait for the chance of kidnapping some wealthy townsman or landed proprietor, had pounced on Mr. Croft for lack of loftier game. . . .

"How shall we save him!" were the words that broke from the lips of both. I had to learn, however, that Alice had not sought me in the first instance. As soon as she received the pencilled lines, and had rallied from the effects of the first stunning shock, she had been nerved to exertion by the thought of her dear father's danger, and she had gone from place to place, accompanied by old Seraphina. But in vain. The most obvious course to pursue, since there were but a few dollars in Alice's slender purse, was to sell the modest furniture of the little household; but a short interview with the broker proved the uselessness of this step. Those humble Lares and Penates would bring but a fourth of the necessary sum, and the landlord, too, had claims for the rent of the current half-year. Only one hope I had, and that was that the merchants to whom our cargo was consigned might lend me the money on my note of hand, backed by the captain's recommendation.—Alice, the good old Spanish woman, and I lost no time, late as it was, in hurrying to the residence of the gentlemen of whom I have spoken. They were a well-known firm, Edwards & Son, and had many dealings with my employers at Bristol.

'Mr. Edwards is absent, Senor. He went yesterday by the steamer to Barcelona,' said the servant who opened the door.

'Mr. James Edwards?' asked I, as my heart sank.

The man arched his eyebrows. He wondered, he said, that I was not aware that Mr. James had been away from Malaga this week past, was expected back for the grand bull-fight to-morrow. Mr. James had too much good taste to miss such a spectacle as that, Pedro was sure.

Meanwhile the preparations for the great bull-fight went gaily on. The savage spectacle was to be an unusually grand one for Malaga. The Captain-General of Andalusia, with some foreign guests of high rank, were to honor the show with their company and the town had gone to considerable expense in providing for their entertainment.

Noon at last. I went again to the house of Mr. Edwards. The young merchant, with two of his friends, had arrived, and, after partaking of breakfast had repaired to the amphitheatre 'like all the world."

To the bull-fight I therefore hastened at once, and having purchased a ticket, elbowed my way through the swarming crowd, and I had no eyes for the mass of gay-coloured apparel, or the rows of eager, excited faces tier above tier, and still less for what was going on in the ring, where a young bull was being goaded to fury by sharp tridents and fluttering flags, a mere prologue to the more thrilling scenes that were to follow. But the crowd baffled me. Such multitudes had poured into Malaga that it was only for the ladies and a favored few of the magistracy and nobles that seats could be retained. The rest stood so thickly massed together that I soon found that to trace out Mr. Edward was hopeless.

Giving up the effort in despair, I turned to depart; but through some mistake, instead gaining the open air, I struck into a long passage I knew not whither, though I heard the bellowing of the bulls from the dens where they were shut up.

Suddenly, from a sort of crypt, the half-open door of which was on my right, came the sound of voices, and I caught these words in Spanish:—

"If you offer a large reward! Say four thousand reals. Consider, gentleman, four thousand reals for an hour's work!"

"We shall not find a man, bid what we may," said another voice, despondently; "no one not tired of his life would run the risk, and, Caramba! what will the people say? There will be a riot, and our houses may pay for it, and. Only think what will be the fury of the thousands up yonder when they hear that Manuel Zagal cannot perform at all, and that we have no matador to take his place."

"If the idiot had but had the sense to break his leg after the bull-fight instead of before!" said a third speaker, in a whinning and querulous tone. But, senores, what is to be done? I would sooner pay four—ay, six thousand reals out of my own pocket, than be the one to tell the people that they are to be disappointed of the cream of the sport. They may sack our houses in revenge, and mischief will surely be done.—What can we do? Not a matador worth a straw within leagues, and Choco only fit to face the young bulls and those with the wood on their horns. We shall have to use the demilune, and before the captain-general, what a disgrace!"

I began now to understand more clearly the purport of this discourse. I knew that a celebrated matador, named Manuel Zagal, had been engaged to come over from Seville, the head-quarters of bull-fighting, to exhibit his skill in despatching the infuriated animals that had been previously provoked to fury by their mounted tormentors, the picadors. This man, who was famous for skill and courage, stood so high in his profession that it had not been thought needful to hire any other artist in the same line, and as matadors, like opera singers, travel from place to place, as their engagements serve, there was no member of the guild then in Malaga. I could easily divine what had happened. The talanted performer from Seville, Senor Manuel Zagal, had met with a serious accident, and the authorities were afraid to announce to the people what had happened, aware that a violent outbreak of popular wrath would ensue. As for the speakers, by moving forward a step, I could see them. Two were in civil uniform, the alcade of the city, and a heavy beetle-browed man, the corregidor of the police. The third was a supple, deferential personage in black, well dressed in the French style. He was manager of the shows.

"His Excellency has arrived. I hear the trumpets," said the head of the police gruffly; "we must go and meet him, or we shall be thought lacking in respect. Pity there is no time to find a substitute; but who, even for four thousand reals, would face our two best bulls—the black Portuguese and the brindled Murican fiercer than—"

"Make the reward five thousand reals, and I am your man, noble senores," said I with sudden resolution, emerging from my hiding-place.

Had I risen, like a theatrical spectre, through a trap door, my appearance could not have created greater consternation. The corregidor was the first to recover his equanimity. He knit his heavy brows into a dark frown, and sagely demanded who I might be.

"Henry West, British subject, mate of the ship Tudor, now in port," was my answer, "ready to be your matador to-day, if you will raise the pay to five thousand reals.

An animated discussion then took place. The idea of a sailor, an Englishman, undertaking the difficult and perilous task of bull-killing—for the matador, as is well known, is the only person exposed to real danger—seemed absurd. But then, it was shrewdly observed by Don Ramon, the alcade, if I chose to get gored to death it was no concern of theirs, and the catastrophe would at least put the people in good humor. But the worthy magistrate was reluctant to give so much as five thousand reals. If I accept three thousand, or even four. But I was firm. Five thousand or nothing was my terms, and as the mob began to get very noisy and impatient, the bargain was struck. An agreement was hastily written and signed by the alcalde, and a cheque for the money was drawn and entrusted to the master of the shows, to be handed to me when I should have earned it. As I traced my signature on the paper I felt that I was bartering my own life and blood to save Alice's father. That five thousand reals would be his ransom. But I had little time to meditate, for I was hurried off to another room, and there bidden to assume, as quickly as possible, the costume of a matador, and in the meantime the magistrates hastened to their place, and the master of the shows went on the somewhat awkward errand of explaining to the multitude that Manuel Zagal had broken his leg, and that a tyro would take his duties on himself. At first his speech elicted much disapprobation, but presently laughter and cheers drowned the oration, and when he came back he wiped his forehead with an air of self-congratulation. The audience had been reduced to good humor. They had been testy irritable, the manager told me, as he lent me his practised aid in dressing, until he reminded them that at the worst, they had never seen an Englishman killed, and might look out for a novel excitement.

"I told them. St. Lartin forgive me, that you were the first toreador in all London, and had come to Spain to challenge our best bull-fighters to a contest of skill," continued the man, as I then bade me look at myself in the glass.

I did so, but hardly recognised myself, so much was my appearance altered by the embroidered jacket, the slashed calzoncillos, the many-colored silken sash, the scarf heavy with silken fringe, and all the lace, bell-buttons and trippery of my costume.

The master of the shows eyed me critically, from the broad leaved sombrero with its red plume and golden cord, down to the pumps and silk stockings, as essential to a matador as to a master of the ceremonies, and clapped me on the shoulder with a good natured word or two of approval. These he presented me with the scarlet cloak and the long straight-bladed sword, and rapidly explained to me what strokes were considered "foul," and what were in accordance with the etiquette of this gory pastime. He was by no means ill-natured, and did his best to encourage me, offering me wine and refreshments, and insisting that I should swallow at least one goblet of strong Calcavella.

"Cheer up, comrade," said he; "keep cool, avoid the first rush, and you may get off with unbroken bones and a whole skin. Throw the cloak well over his horns, and drive in the sword thus, turning the wrist in this manner, and avoiding the breast-bone. Never be in a hurry or you are lost. I have seen old hands lose their heads at the first roar and dash of a hurt bull; but I like you lad, scismatic as you are, and don't want to see you go out feet foremost." Then bidding me be of good courage, he left me to attend to his duties.

I was alone, though I could hear the hoarse bellowing of the bulls confined in dens near me; and now for the first time I had leisure to realise the rashness of my undertaking. I had followed the bidding of impulse in what I had done, and now, as I looked around, and remembered that the thousands of spectators would gloat over my dying agonies as greedily as over those of the brute victims of their cruel sport, I realized the full danger of my position. But I quieted my apprehensions by the thought of Alice. It was for her dear sake, to earn her father's ransom, that I was crouching where I was, in the mumer's garb, waiting till I should be called forth, like a gladiator of the old pagan days, to redden the sand of the bull ring with my blood.

As yet the sports had been merely of an introductory character. Three or four young bulls had been worried with tridents and flags. A "craven," as those pacific animals are called whose temper is known to be meek, had been tormented with squibs barbed darts, and the incessant brandishing of red scarfs before his eyes, and had finally been dispatched by Choco, who did what may be called the comic business of the theatre. Of this the people grew weary, and a general shout arose—

"Toros, toros! the Murcian bull at once. No, the Portugese! Let the English matador show us what stuff he is made of.—Toros!"

The manager looked up apparently to the captain-general, and receiving an august nod of permission, bustled out.

Very soon there was a flourish of trumpets, and then a deep roar, and then, amid clapping of hands and hurrahing of countless voices, the brindled Murican bull came at a heavy canter into the ring, stopped short, lifted his head and gave a second roar of impatient anger. A noble beast he was, and the populace enthusiastically shouted forth their comments on his tossing mane, his deep chest, his dauntless look, the strength of his limbs, and the sharpness of his horns. Then, to the sound of martial music, in poured the mounted picadors, two and two, fluttering with bright ribbons, and dressed in the old Castilian garb. They lowered their lances before the captain general, and rode three times round the arena to exhibit their bright scarfs and rich jackets, while the cymbals clashed and the drums rolled out their loudest notes. The bull pawed the ground, distended his nostrils, and with a short bellowing cry, stooped his head and began the attack. The words "Bravo, toro!" rent the very sky.—It was a butcherly business at the best, though I admit that the rich dresses, the long lances, and waving of scarf, and ribbon, and plume, gave a false glitter and gallantry to what was really a very dastardly and disguising scene. The picadors, padded as they were, and furnished with immense boots through which the bull's horns could not pierce, while scores of watchful attendants stood ready to distract the animal's attention in case of need, or to carry off a prostrate combatant, were safe enough.—But the bull, itself bleeding from the repeated lance-thrusts, did great execution among the horses, plunging his sharp horns into their quivering flanks again and again, and inflicting ghastly wounds, while still the wretched steeds went reeling round the ring, until loss of blood made them drop down dying on the ensanguined sand. And still the music played its most stirring strains, and still the people shouted, while the ladies waved fans and handkerchiefs in token of applause, and all the gory savagery of the Spanish national sport went on with sickening repetition. At last, nine horses being dead or frightfully injured, two picadors having been bruised by falling against the oaken barriers, and the bull being much spent, the remaining horsemen left the ring. Ropes and hooks were fixed to the carcasses of the slain horses, and they were dragged away, and fresh sand and sawdust were thrown down. It was time for the matador to appear.

"Now, Englishman, they are waiting for you. Remember the thrust, and be cool," whispered the manager.

He led me into the ring, and I made my bow to the captain-general, and another to the audience, while the manager, with much grandiloquence, presented me to the public as "Don Enriquez, of London, the distinguished volunteer who had so kindly undertaken to fill the office of the eminent Manuel Zangal."

Scarcely had he finished this speech before the bull began to advance, and my introducer hastily retired. I stood alone in the ring, my heart beating thickly, and a red film seeming to obscure my dazzled eyes, while the clamor of the crowd, and the consciousness that I was the mark on which thousands were gazing in pitiless expectation, almost unnerved me. Then came the thought of Alice, and I was myself once more. Disregarding the spectators I bent my whole attention on the bull, which was slowly approaching me, with its head bent down, and bloody foam dropping from his lips. I steadied myself on my feet, carrying the cloak gathered up on my left arm, and with my right I kept the sword pointed to the earth, ready to spring aside when my antagonist should charge. But the bull was more hurt than I had expected. His movements were slow and painful, and the blood trickled fast from his brindled flanks. His rolling eyes fixed upon me, then he gave a roar and dashed at me, while following the manager's instructions, I avoided him by springing aside. I thought the animal would have wheeled to renew the attack, but the last rush had manifestly exhausted his remaining strength. He fell on his knees, and did not rise till the men on foot beset him with squibs and darts, when pain and fury revived his forces, and he again made a floundering charge. This time I stepped aside, and without throwing the cloak over the bull's hor

THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1870.

Parliamentary.

The session is now lengthened out to several months, and very little has yet been done. No very important bill has been passed, nothing of importance for the good of the Country has been introduced. The greatest uneasiness prevails in the North-West, and nothing has been done to quiet matters. A promise, it is true, has been made, that some policy will be expounded, some day, in the future, but what that policy is likely to be, no one knows, not even Ministers themselves.

The tariff has been altered, but to the manifest dissatisfaction of parties interested, and especially to the farmers of Ontario. A duty is put on flour, entering the maritime provinces, which will tend to prevent trade with the provinces, and still continue to force our trade through the United States.

The greenback system too has been introduced, and in a way that takes the money out of the people's pockets, to fill the coffers of a reckless Ministry.

The unsuspecting farmers, mechanics, and many others were compelled by force of circumstances to take American silver at par. Now that Sir Francis Hincks requires money, greenbacks are issued, and silver is fixed at 20 per cent discount, unless bought for the Government, when it is reduced to 5½ per cent discount, and will be still reduced to 6 per cent of a loss. These 6 cents in every dollar of silver on hand at the time of the proclamation the Country actually looses, and a certain sum is gained by the Finance Minister.

American quarter dollars are worth about 97 cents in gold. The Minister of Finance is buying them in at about 93 to 94 cents, thus robbing the Country of nearly 4 cents on every dollar. It is believed that there is about three millions of this silver in the Country, and hence by the silver proclamation, the Country loses $120,000, which goes to enable Sir John A. McDonald and Company to retain office, by retaining influence in their usual way.

In their great haste to pass the Interest Bill, a scene that would hardly be enacted in a Bacchanalian Club took place in the House. In the back lanes and alleys where forty rod, instead of John A., rules, it is not uncommon to hear members of a certain class of society liar each other. On Saturday night last, however, Sir Francis Hincks condescended to imitate the rowdy by calling Mr. Holton, in effect, a liar.—Mr. Holton, of course, resented this, and urged that Mr. Hincks' words should be taken down in order to test their truthfulness; and then followed a scene which throws parliamentary discussion into the shade.

Poor Cockburn, who sold himself to the dirty work of the Coalition, had light enough to know his duty, but labored to save his master from the unseemly position into which he had fallen, and partially succeeded. Afterwards Sir John A., Cartier, Hincks & Co., actually in their eagerness to carry things their own way, BROKE THE SABBATH DAY, by continuing the business of the House till nearly one o'clock on Sunday morning. Mr. McKenzie and others protested against the desecration of the day, and left the House, but this did not prevent them.

Where is the country drifting to! The Legislative Halls of the Dominion have been disgraced by scenes of drunkenness there this, and now the sanctities of the Sabbath are violated. Our rulers despise the Commandments, set at nought entreaties, and brave the contumely; and these are the men whom Canadians delight to honor.

Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

These bridges have caused no little uneasiness to their promoters, to find whether they would stand the test of the spring floods, and the drifting of the ice. They were found to answer well last fall, being pretty substantial, very convenient for travel, and likely to work well for the people of Ennismore.

The Commissioners appointed to see after the bridges until completed, met on Friday last at Bridgenorth, to witness the true state of affairs, so as to be able to give an intelligent report.

During winter a substantial boom had been erected about 30 feet from the bridge, so as to prevent if possible, or at least break the force of any ice drifts, and their hopes were high that their expectations would be realized.

Messrs. Garbutt, Millar and Pearce, crossed the Mud Lake bridge about 2 o'clock, and found all right. They then went to dinner.

Immediately the wind rose, and the ice began to move before it, affording an excellent opportunity to test the boom and bridge. The ice struck the boom, and carried it and its anchors completely to the bridge, and also removed the bridge out of its position, leaving it in a very crooked state. Only one anchor iron however was broken, and in this case the iron was not of the best quality. Some of the other anchors must have been moved, we learn, about 20 or 30 feet. This must have been a severe test, and if it stood it at all, we may hope that when it is completed, and contingencies provided against, it will meet the expectations of the County, and all those concerned. It would be a very great pity, now that it has been so far constructed, that if for want of a few extra heavy anchors, and a pier or two, it would be found deficient.

The quasi acknowledgement of Riel's Government, by receiving his delegates, places the Ministry in an unenviable position. Sir John and Sir George are virtually afraid to make a move least the Lower Canada members take sides against them.

Obituary.

It becomes our painful duty to record the sudden death of Samuel Dickson, Esq., on Tuesday 26th instant, at the age of 61 years.

Mr. Dickson was in his usual good health on Monday morning, and went at an early hour to see about getting stone for a pier in front of what was known as the Old Mill. The pier was injured on Sunday, and in consequence, the stone was falling out, but Mr. Dickson concluded it was best to rest on the Sabbath, and to commence early on Monday morning. About 8 o'clock he took some men and teams to refill the pier, and took Mr. E. Crow, and a man named Dancy to fix the pier. Mr. Dickson stood on it to show the men what to do. While Mr. Crow was carrying a plank unto the pier he found it giving way and gave the alarm, and jumped off; Dancy also got off, but Mr. Dickson who was farther over, failed, and was dashed into the raging waters, by the upsetting of the pier on which he stood.

The men who were near could render no possible aid to him, he was so far below them, and the foam was dashing him about unmercifully, taking him up and down several times. On coming up, he made an effort and caught a stick of timber passing him, and by clinging to it, was carried down the river as far as Rogers' dam, the men on the shore in vain attempting to get near him. As he was floated along, another stick got unto the other side of him, and between these two sticks he was jammed up against the pier, with all the force of the angry torrent, and must have received the injuries there that caused his death. The pier that had been dashed out of its place, soon after lodged in the same place, and increased the pressure on him. The wonder is, that he ever came out alive.

Mr. Rogers and one of his men were just coming to see after the dam, and were the first there to extricate him, which was not done without difficulty, crowbars and handpries being necessary before he could be got out. He was then put into Mr. Rogers' wagon and taken home to his own house, and Dr. Harvey was immediately on the spot. He found one leg very badly lacerated, the muscles actually torn across, and the small bone broken. His body was also much bruised, and he must have received internal injuries of a serious nature. During that evening some faint hopes of his recovery were entertained, but next day he had taken such a change for the worse that all hopes were gone—congestion of the lungs giving warning of a speedy dissolution. After suffering greatly till about four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, he departed this life, surrounded by his whole family.

Mr. Dixon came to Peterboro in the year 1830, when the town consisted of only a few huts; and very few men have done so much to make it a town. At first he engaged in distilling; eventually he rented a saw mill not far from where the woolen factory now is. After a few years he erected a saw mill on a larger scale, which still stands on the south-west side of the dam. He afterwards had a mill on the Ashburnham side—the one which was swept away by the present high water.

He also erected the steam saw mill lately consumed by fire and owned by Messrs. McDougall & Ludgate, but which he exchanged to obtain control of the whole water privilege that has long been called after himself. For several years he has been engaged in the lumber business, largely, and employed a large number of hands, and through them was the means of considerable outlay in the town.

Mr. Dickson was a man of great energy and industry, far-seeing in all his calculations, and successful in his enterprizes, having a strong will to carry out his designs. This was the great cause of his success. He was sociable, generally, and fond of conversation on both public and private matters and not haughty in his demeanor. He was intimately connected with the progress of the town and was several times chosen councillor for his ward, and was also a councillor in the Village of Ashburnham after its erection into a Village. Whatever may have been his short comings, the general sympathy now felt on account of his very sudden and unexpected decease is universal, every class of the people feeling that one of our most prominent and worthy citizens has been taken away. He leaves behind him a cherished wife and six daughters, three of whom are married, to mourn their sad bereavement; but he leaves them an extensive property.

THE TOWN COUNCIL

Met yesterday evening in special session on account of his death, when the following resolution was unanimously carried:

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. English,—That this Council, having specially assembled in view of the melancholy catastrophe which has just occurred, resulting in the death of a highly esteemed and much lamented member of their body, Samuel Dickson, Esquire, desire now to express their unfeigned sorrow at his sudden removal from amongst them, under such distressing circumstances; that this Council look upon Mr. Dickson's death in the light of a serious public calamity. His sterling worth and active enterprise, large capacity for business, and indomitable perseverance, constituted him an independent element in the material progress and advancement of the town, and they believe his loss will be felt accordingly.

It is resolved, that, as a mark of their respect and esteem for his memory, the Council do attend, as a body, at his funeral, each member wearing crape on his right arm; and further, also, that the Clerk be instructed to convey to Mrs. Dickson and the other members of the family their sincere feelings of condolence on the occasion of this their great bereavement, and their heart-felt sympathy with them in their affliction, and that for the purpose, a copy of this resolution be engrossed and transmitted to Mrs. Dickson.

His funeral takes place to-day at three o'clock, p. m.

STATE RELIGION IN AUSTRALIA.—A London Times letter from Melbourne says that State aid to religion in that country has received its death blow in the Colonial Parliament. The sum of £50,000 has hitherto been annually distributed among the different sects, including the Jews; and latterly the Chinese, who are numerous, have been clamoring for a share in support of their Joss houses. The absurdity of the State lending its support to such various and conflicting beliefs has been becoming more and more manifest, and the voluntary principle has grown rapidly in public favor. Accordingly a bill was recently introduced in Parliament and passed one stage without a division, providing that the grant shall be reduced by £10,000 every year, until, at the end of the fifth year, the subsidy will be abolished.

Meeting in the Music Hall.

At the call of the Mayor a meeting was held in the Music Hall last night to devise means of aiding immigrants who may come to Peterboro. Several members of the Council and prominent citizens were present.

The Mayor occupied the Chair, and Mr. J. A. Hall was requested to act as Secretary.

Several motions by Messrs. Carnegie, Fairbairn, Blomfield and Stevenson were passed, and a committee appointed to make the best possible arrangement.

We intend to refer more fully to the proceedings next week.

There is not a mill dam or bridge on the Indian River but what has received serious damage, and many of them swept entirely away. The Trent slides are reported as greatly damaged, and that, in consequence, no timber can go by the Trent this season.

Father McMahon.

This now celebrated gentleman lately lectured at Chicago, and during his lecture he dwelt on the cruelty of England to prisoners. He lauded General O'Neil, talked of the splendid race the Queen's Own made at Ridgeway. He said "there were three millions of Catholics in Canada, and they all had been turned against England, which showed how foolish the course of England was." He said that the jury that tried him consisted of Orangemen, and a hard set at that. He was convicted and sent to the Penitentiary, where he got a sickness he would never get over. After Father McMahon, a man named Cooney came forward, and said he felt it his duty to let them know what Fenian prisoners suffered, and that the Irish had no liberty in Canada. Those who had emigrated there and settled, were oppressed and tormented. Their horses were killed, their houses burned, and their families murdered. They remembered the affray with the Orangemen at Peterboro, and how there was no law in Canada to protect an Irish Catholic. No one could wear the green there without danger of getting his head broken. He himself was the worst persecuted Irishman in America; called a British spy here, and a Fenian organizer in Canada. There he was arrested, nearly mobbed, and sent to the Penitentiary for life. When Father McMahon came there all the officers tried to make him work, and would but for the interference of the clergy. As was not allowed a fire, and was made to black the guards' boots. For a time he had coffee and bread sent him in his cell, but afterwards he had to go and get it like any convict. He had also been forced to fall into the ranks with them, and that by a Catholic. On Sunday he got no breakfast. One Warden, an Irish Catholic, would not let him read his Breviary, but told him to go in the garden and dig.—There were many such Irishmen, who were corrupted by office, what must they feel when they saw their priest thus maltreated by the spawn of Irish tyranny. The priest stated various other instances of cruel treatment of Fenians—how they had been whipped, starved, put in dark cells, and driven insane. The word of a convict was taken against them, and all sorts of plots were resorted to, to get them in trouble. The convicts were fed for fourteen days on rotten potatoes and bran bread. The men in the foundry struck, and some of the leaders were flogged. It was the hope of every Irishman that the day was not far distant when the possessions of England in the Western Hemisphere would tremble to the tread of their feet, when they would have a base whence their swift fleets might sweep, like an Alpine avalanche, upon the foe, and consume him like a flood of lava from Mount Vesuvius.

Who can Mr. Cooney, who knows so much about Peterboro, be?

ASSAULT ON MISS EDITH O'GORMAN.—Miss Edith O'Gorman, the ex-sister of Charity and the well-known lecturer against Catholicism, narrowly escaped with her life at Madison, N. J., where she lectured on Friday evening. Madison is the place where Miss Gorman first entered the Roman Catholic sisterhood as a nun. The subject of her lecture was "The Romish Priesthood" During the evening a large crowd gathered around the church, and while she was being escorted by the Rev. Mr. Parsons from the church to her carriage the mob made a rush, and used abusive and insulting language. A number of students from the Drew Theological Seminary came to the rescue, but just as the lady was stepping into her carriage a shot was fired, the ball passing over her head. She was rapidly driven away. On reaching the parsonage a crowd surrounded the premises, and stones were hurled and violent language was used. Most of the students remained on guard during the night, and the next day a number of them escorted her to Jersey City. It is not known who fired the shot, but the leaders of the mob are known, and prompt measures will be taken to bring the guilty person to justice.—N. Y. Tribune.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Temperance.

MR. EDITOR,—On Tuesday evening, the 19th inst, the Temperance workers, (and their friends) in connection with "Friendship" Temple No. 146 I. O. G. T., held a social meeting of a purely Musical and Literary character, presided over by the Worthy Chief Templar, Bro. W. J. Mason, which was a veritable success. Among the pleasing features of the evening, and the one for which the meeting was projected was the presentation of a well filled purse of money, accompanied by an appropriate address to Bro. John Robertson, one of the most effective and energetic laborers in the Temperance cause in the Lodge, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by his co-workers.

The address was read by Bro. Wm. E. James, P. W. C. T., the presentation made by Bro. R. Rutherford, W. C., on behalf of the committee, and was feelingly replied to by Bro. Robertson, wherein he remarked that he would spend, and be spent, in the cause of total abstinance, which he, form experience, had learned was the only safeguard against the temptations and allurements of the fascinating wine cup, wherein lies the downward road to a wrecked fortune, ruined health, and eternal misery.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I have agreed with "Dummeronian" that to continue the correspondence which has, over our respective signatures, recently appeared in your columns, can conduce to no public good; and in concluding it, I beg to say, in justice to Dr. Bingham, that his name should not have appeared in connection therewith. And therefore, I cheerfully withdraw that part of my last communication.

Very truly, &c.,

Red River Affairs.

The troubles of this distant territory are becomming more settled. Riel begins to look at matters in a very different light. Canadian volunteers are about to visit the Country to ensure order, and to bring him to his right mind.

IMPORTANT FROM RED RIVER.

The upper country around Fort Garry is so badly flooded that no mails have passed Georgetown either way for fifteen days.

Bishop Tache has been endeavouring to give the people of the Settlemen a better understanding of the Canadian Government's intentions toward the Red River.

Riel has surrender all the property confiscated from the Hudson Bay Company. Almost every person of the country desires that the mission of the delegates to Ottawa be successful, and that amicable arrangements may result from their deliberations. The Sioux Indians are becoming very troublesome and the Crees and become jealous that so many presents should be made to the Sioux; presents have been sent to them from Fort Garry weekly, to keep them quiet.

The whole community have agreed to recognize Riel as their head, until Canadian authority is established in the territory.

Riel has issued the following proclamation Let the Assembly of 28 representatives which met on the 9th of March be dear to the people of the Red River. That Assembly has shown itself worthy of confidence. It has worked in union, and the members devoted themselves to the public interests and yielded only to the sentiments of good will duty and generosity. Thanks to their noble conduct the public authority is now strong, and that strength will be employed to sustain and protect the people of the country.—To-day the government pardons all those whom political difference led astray only for a time. The amnesty will be generously accorded to all those who will submit to the Government, who will discountenance or inform against dangerous gatherings. From this day forth the public highways are open, the Hudson Bay Company can now resume business, and they themselves contributing to the public good, circulate their money as of old. They pledge themselves to that course. The attention of the Government is also directed very especially to the Northern part of the country, in order that trade may not receive any serious check, and peace in the Indian districts may thereby be all the more securely maintained. The disastrous war, which, at one time threatened, has left among us foes and various deplorable results; but the people feel reassured, and elected by the Grace Providence and the suffrage of my fellow citizens to the highest position in the Government of my country. I proclaim that peace reigns in our midst this day. The Government will take every precaution to prevent this peace from being disturbed. While internally all is thus returning to order, externally, also, matters are looking favorable. Canada invites the Red River people to an amicable arrangement. She offers to guarantee us our rights and give us a place in the Confederation equal to that of any province, undefined with the Provincial Government. Our national laws, well based upon justice shall be respected. And this is a happy country to have escaped many misfortunes that were prepared for her, in seeing her children on the point of a war. She recommends that old friendship, which used to bind us, and by the ties of the same patriosm she has reunited them again for the sake of preserving their lives their happiness. Let us remain united and we shall be happy. With the strength of unity we shall retain prosperity.

Oh, my fellow countrymen, without distinction of language or without distinction of creed, keep my words in your hearts. If ever the time should, unfortunately, come, when another division should take place amoungst us, as foreigners, heretofore, sought to create, that will be the signal for all the disasters which we have had the happiness to avoid. In order to prevent similar calamities, the Government will treat with all the severity of the law, those who dare again to compromise the public safety. It is ready to act against the disorder of parties as well as against that of individuals; but let us hope, however, that extreme measures will be unknown, and that the lessons of the past will guide us in the future.

(signed) LOUIS RIEL

Troops are being set in motion for the Nor, West and are expected to leave about the 30th instant. Every man is to recieve a kit; the pay for Privates $ 12; Corporal $13; Sergeant $15 and color Sergeants $18 with free Rations. Married men are eligable, but no women or children will be allowed to accompany the expedition.

The new shinplasters which have just been issued are small in size like the issue of the U. S., about 4 inches by 2½ inches. The American Bank Note Company got up designs for 10, 20 and 50 cents, but the Department decided that the 25's alone shall be issued. They are quite handsome, and have a strong head of Minerva, the helmet surmounted by a lion as a centre piece. On the one side is "25 cents" in black and green on either side, on the other side "25 cents" in lathwork, the caption authorized by the Dominion of Canada, and at the foot engraved signatures of Mr. Dickenson, for Finance Minister, and T. D. Harrington for Reciever. On the obverse side are the words "Payable at Montreal, Toronto and St. John, in lathwork.

The Interest Debate.

The Speaker took the Chair, at half-past two o'clock.

After reuntine business,

OAKVILLE HARBOR.

Mr. Mackenzie moved that the return respecting the Oakville Harbor, be referred to the Committee of Public Accounts, and explained that there was debt of from seven to ten thousand dollars due on this harbor, and that he wished to see if steps could not be taken to have the amount collected.

Hon. Mr. Wood explained that this was one of the assets which, according to the Union Act, belonged to the Dominion, and which was by it allowed in reduction of the debt due by the late Province of Canada.

Hon. Mr. Tupper spoke at some length on the motion.

Mr. Mackenzie withdrew it, as he had not expected any discussion thereon, as the House had not met to discuss the Supreme Court Bill.

BANK OF UPPER CANADA.

Sir Francis Hincks introduced a bill to vest in the Government the powers now vested in the Trustees of the Bank of Upper Canada. He said it was desirable to place the winding up of the institution on a more economical footing than that on which it now stood.

The Bill was read a first time after some discussion.

INTEREST BILL.

Sir Francis Hincks moved the third reading of the Interest Bill.

Hon. Mr. Holton said the pledge made last night that the sitting to-night should be devoted in the first place to the second reading of the Supreme Court Bill.

Sir Francis Hincks said that there was no such pledge.

Hon. Mr. Holton said most distinctly there was.

Sir Francis Hincks said that most unquestionably there was not.

Hon Mr. Holton said if the hon. gentleman would call in his leader (Sir John A. Macdonald being out of the House) he would find that before the adjournment of the House last night, it was plainly stated to-night would would be devoted to the second reading of the Supreme Court Bill.

Sir Francis Hincks reiterated that no such promise had been made.

Hon. Mr. Holton—(Excitedly)—Well, I tell the hon. gentleman he cannot go on with the Interest Bill to-night. (Hear).

Sir Francis Hincks—But I will go on. (Cheers and uproar). The hon. gentleman is not correct. It has been the invariable custom this session to dispose of third readings, which are first on the paper before proceeding with other business. I tell the hon. gentleman he will not put me down. (Cheers).

Hon. Mr. Holton—I expect the hon. gentleman will keep faith with the House (Opposition cheers). I say the hon. gentleman is proposing a distinct breach of faith with the House. (Cries of no, no; yes, (Cheers).

Sir Francis Hincks—It is not true; it is not true. (Cheers).

Hon, Mr. Holton—I ask that the hon. gentleman's words be taken down.

The Speaker said the words were unparliamentary, but he hoped nothing would be put upon the journals.

Mr. MacKenzie said they need not be taken down, if the hon. Finance Minister retracted his words.

The Speaker said the words were undoubtedly unparliamentary. Still, to ask that they be absolutely withdrawn was going a step too far.

Hon. Mr. Holton—I demand that the words be taken down.

Sir Francis Hincks—I demand that the words of the member for Chateauguay be also taken down. (Cheers).

The Speaker hoped the hon. gentleman would make satisfactory explanation.

Sir Francis Hincks said he had tried two or three times to make an explanation, but he had been prevented. There was no one less desirous than he was to infringe upon the rules of the House; but he desired to ask if he was to be charged with breach of faith, if he could not answer in the strongest terms. If it was parliamentary to charge him with breach of faith, his reply was parliamentary. He would leave it with the Speaker.

The Speaker said the language of the hon. gentleman was unparliamentary, but a greater latitude was allowed in speaking against the members of the Crown.

Sir Francis Hincks was not aware of that.

Hon. Mr. Holton could not accept the explanation. The hon. Finance Minister had hurled the lie across the House, and the words must be taken down.

Hon. J. Sandfield MacDonald said the House must have something to say about the matter. He read from May to show that the words could not be taken down unless it was the pleasure of the House.

Hon. Mr. Holton said he had declared the words unparliamentary, and they must be taken down.

Sir Geo. E. Cartier said the doctrine of the hon. member for Cornwall was correct. No hon. member could do anything in the House, except by the leave of the House. If the motion be made to take down the words of the hon. Finance Minister, he would move that the words of the hon. member for Chateauguay be taken down.

Mr. MacKenzie said the House had worked harmoniously so far, and he hoped the matter would go no further, and that the hon. member for Chateauguay would accept a reasonable excuse. He trusted there would be no copy upon the Journal of what was really a very unseemly affair.

Sir Francis Hincks felt that the language of the member for Chateauguay was offensive and unparliamentary. He had heard for the first time that the Ministers of the Crown had to submit to language that other members of the House need not submit to, but he would receive the decision of the Speaker with the greatest respect.—He did not think he interrupted hon. members more frequently than the member for Chateauguay.

After some further discussion, in which several questions of Order were raised

Mr. MacKenzie moved that the words uttered by the honorable member for North Renfrew addressed to the honorable member for Chateauguay while he was addressing the House, namely, that "It is not true," shall be taken down by the Clerk, the Speaker having declared such words unparliamentary.

The Speaker said it appeared to him that the words used did not appear to him of such a nature that called for a vote of the House as to their entry in the Journal.—He had already stated that the explanation given by the Minister of Finance relieved the words of their unparliamentary character. He (the Speaker) could not, therefore, stultify himself by allowing the motion to be put. He, therefore, ruled this out of Order.

Some further discussion arose, during which the Speaker withheld his decision.

Hon. Mr. Holton said that the Minister of Finance had made no explanation that could be accepted by a gentleman for a personal insult. His object in wishing the words to be taken down was that the matter should be decided afterwards by the Minister of Justice, who was not in his seat. He pledged his word of honor, as a gentleman, that the Supreme Court Bill would come up the first to-night. The Minister of Finance had not made the apology necessary to a man of honor.

Sir Francis Hincks said that if the member for Chateauguay was not so warm, he would see that there must be some misunderstanding in this matter. The Minister of Justice had told him (Sir Francis Hincks) that he was to go on with the third reading of the Interest Bill. It was always customary that the third readings should be taken first, in order that they should go to the Senate. No doubt, the Minister of Justice understood that the Supreme Court Bill should come up after the third readings. What he (Sir Francis Hincks) meant was, that there had not been a breach of faith by the Government, not that the member of Chateauguay had spoken what was not true. That hon. gentleman was the last in the House whom he would wish to offend.

Francis Hincks moved the third reading of the Bill.

Hon. Mr. Holton moved the recommittal of the Bill to a committee of the Whole, with instructions to amend, by enacting six per cent, shall be the maximum legal rate of interest chargable by private persons and banks alike.

Hon. Dr. Tupper thought the interest law would fail to produce the benificial results anticipated, and would cause dissatisfaction in Ontario and Nova Scotia. He desired uniformity as much as possible; but there was no commercial necessity for an uniform interest law.

Mr. Grey also spoke against the bill.

Mr. Cameron (Peel) moved an adjournment of the debate.

The House divided on the member for Peel's amendment, which was lost—Yeas, 59; Nays, 79.

Mr. Dufresne said he did not believe the Interest Bill a sound measure: but as the majority of the honorable members from his Province were in favor of it, he would yield to them. He thought it would be better to fix the rate of interest six per cent, and would support the amendment of the members for Chateauguay. If the House did not vote for it, the result would be that a large class of borrowers, now paying six per cent, would have to pay ten per cent. (Hear.)

Mr. Ross (Champlain,) wanted the rate fixed at 8 per cent, as he considered 6 per cent too low.

M. Gaudet, in French, spoke against the motion of the member for Chateauguay

Hon. Mr. Holton's amendment was put and carried; yeas 70; nays 67.

Hon. Mr. Carling was called upon to vote, and explained that he was not in the House when the amendment was put.

The House went into committee, with Mr. Mills in the chair, and amended, as instructed. The committee arose, and reported the Bill as amended. The amendments were then read a first and second time. On the third reading,

Mr. Joly moved that the parties stipulate for a higher rate of interest than 6 per cent shall forfeit the whole of the interest.

Mr. Mackenzie said he hoped the House would not perpetrate the iniquity of sitting on the Sabbath. It was now five minutes to twelve.

Considerable excitement ensued, several members calling out adjourn, adjourn, Mr. Mackenzie and others leaving the chamber The motion was, however, persisted in. The remaining members were called in, and the division taken on Sunday morning, and resulted in the carrying of the amendment. Yeas, 61; nays, 44.

A most desultory debate arose, and

Hon. Mr. Tupper moved the third reading now.

The speaker ruled the motion out of order.

Hon. Dr. Tupper moved the third reading for Tuesday.

Mr. Scatcherd moved, seconded by McDonald (Glengarry,) in amendment, the adjournment of the House.

The motion was carried, and the House adjourned at 25 minutes to 1.

The Coal Fields of the Northwest.

Sir William Armstrong, some few years ago, raised the question in the old country of the possibility of the coal mines of England becoming, after a time, exhausted. The question was widely discussed at the time, and all became thoroughly convinced of what paramount importance a country's prosperity was the coal fields. From geological reports and engineers surveys it appears that the Territory of the Northwest possesses one of the largest coal fields in the world. Between the 50th parallel and the North Sea, it has been calculated that there cannot be much less than 500,000 square miles that are underlaid by true coal. On the east it is bounded by a belt of metamorphic rocks, that extend from the Artic Sea to the North Shore of Lake Superior. The average breadth of this belt is about 200 miles. In addition the coal this district contains rich deposits of iron ore, and likely gold, as the rocks are of similar formation and of the same age as the gold bearing rocks of Nova Scotia. From the Westend of Lake Athrabasca to the 49th parallel, between 97° and 98° West London, near Pembina, the coal measures may be traced for about 900 miles, passing down into the States; where, on the Missouria river, the strata are exposed on its banks.

This is a wonderful provision of coal in the North west country, and makes its possession of immense importance to the Dominion of Canada. The scarcity of coals is one of the most serious wants at present felt, and effects every branch of manufactures and industry, as well as the people. At present almost all our coal has to be imported from the States. But with this region properly developed, we may draw our supplies from our own resources, and possibly compete with our neighbors in an article for which at present they hold the complete monopoly.

This measure of working the coal mines of the Northwest, is of such importance to the country in every respect, that immediately on acquiring possession of the country, a railroad should be constructed with all possible speed, and every inducement held out to private Companies to develope these rich fields; and, if private speculators are laggard in seing the advantages to be derived, it behooves the Government of the country to attend to the matter themselves, so as to put the Dominion in possession of those treasures which are more important to the prosperity and the development of her industries, than the possession of a mine of diamonds. Were such coal measures discovered in European countries there would be but little delay in having them advantageously worked. Let not our people or Government be behind Europe, in a work of such imortance to the prosperity of the entire nation. Toronto Telegraph.

ROMAN CATHOLICISM.—From the 18th report of the Scottish Reformation Society, we learn that while the total Roman Catholic establishments in Great Britain in 1867 was 1,143, the total in 1868 was 1,267, being an increase of 164 in one year. In Yorkshire alone there are in the year 11 new chapels and stations, and in Durham 7. The number of Roman Catholic priests in Great Britain is 1,680. There are 38 Roman Catholic members of the House of Commons, 24 peers, and 47 baronets. In Scotland there is one Roman Catholic to every 10 of the population; in England one in every 20 is of the same persuasion; and it is well said in the report that;—"The views of this population, as it becomes mixed with the Irish priesthood, are becoming more and more Ultramontane, and hence increasingly dangerous to the Protestantism of the country."

FROM observations under the microscope, of the blood of patients (using FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES) taken from time to time, positive proof has been obtained of the steady removal of diseased and dead particles, and the substitution of vitalized discs, so necessary to the construction of healthy muscle.

Price $1 50 a bottle; 6 for $7 50. Sold by Isopthearies and by F. Cundill & Co wholesale agents, Montreal.

THE ŒCUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shenhoness Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

Economy in Health and Physic is as important as in business, and we know of no cheaper, better, or surer means of preserving health and divesting the sick of their infirmities, than through the medium of Dr. Radway's famious medicines. We present a case in point:

Case 1,236.—Marcus W Mount, long a sufferer from liver complaints, has paid, he says, at different times, about $50 to physicians, and as much more for medicines. Is induced to try RADWAY'S PILLS, with occasional doses of the RENOVATING RESOLVENT, to assist in removing from his system the effects of the mercurial treatment to which he had been subjected. Soon feels the benefit of the change Takes, in all, five boxes of the Pills and three bottles of the resolvent, and at the end of the course is "as well as he ever was in his life."

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Dacley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd &Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

Brant's Wafers, (The great public Remedy) have now been in use over twenty years, hence cannot be said that they are on trial. THE RED RIVER ROUTE MAP

Will be ready for delivery

ON THE 25th OF APRIL, 1870.

LAURIE'S MAP OF THE North-West Territories!

This map supplies a desideratum long felt, and shews:—

I.—The whole of the Fertile Belt, and those parts of Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Dacota through which the waggon roads pass to Fort Garry.

II.—The actual survey of the Selkirk Settlement, with all the roads, churches, &c., including the New Government Road from Fort William to Fort Garry.

III.—The Canoe Route from Fort William to Fort Garry.

IV.—A Sectional Map giving all the Railway or Steamboat Routes by which St. Cloud can be reached—(St. Cloud is the present terminus of railway travel).

V.—Tables of distances on the Overland route.

Emigrants can see at a glance where every good Camping Ground or Station (Hotel) on the road is situated, and calculate the rate of travel accordingly.

Newspaper readers will find it an invaluable aid to a proper understanding of the news from that interesting region.

The Map has been compiled by D. CODD, Esq., of Ottawa, from official maps and reports never yet made public; and in this work he has been assisted greatly by a practical knowledge of the country laid down.

The Map is 29 by 55 inches, beautifully lithographed, and will be furnished at the following prices:—

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Brenstown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Our Childhood.

BY GEORGE D PRENTICE.

'Tis sad, yet sweet, to listen
To the soft wind's gentle swell,
And think we hear the music
Our childhood knew so well;
To gaze out on the ocean
And the boundless field of air,
And feel again our boyhood's wish
To roam like angels there!

There are many dreams of gladness
That cling around the past—
And from the tomb of fading
Old thoughts come thronging fast;
The forms we loved so dearly
In the happy days now gone,
The beautiful and lovely,
So fair to look upon.

These bright and gentle maidens
Who seemed so formed for bliss,
Too glorious and too heavenly
For such a world as this;
Whose dark soft eyes seemed swimming
In a sea of liquid light,
And whose locks of gold were streaming
O'er brows as sunny bright.

Whose smiles were like the sunshine
In the Spring time of the year—
Like the changeful gleams of April,
They followed every tear!
They have passed—like hopes—away,
And their loveliness has fled;
Oh, many a heart is mourning
That they are with the dead.

Like the brightest buds of Summer,
They have fallen with the storm;
Yet, oh, it is a lovely death
To fade from earth like them!

And yet the thought is saddening
To muse on such as they,
And feel that all the beautiful
Are passing fast away;
That the fair ones whom we love
Grow to such loving breast
Like the tendril of the clinging vine,
Then perish where they rest.

And we can but think of these,
In the soft and gentle Spring,
When the trees are waving o'er us,
And the flowers are blossoming;
And we know that winter's coming
With this cold and stormy sky,
And the glorious beauty round us
Is bedding but to die!

Gossip for the Ladies.

The French Empress will deign to visit the Dases in May.

The Grand Duke Alexis, of Russia, is to run the gauntlet among the Saratogian belles next season.

A female fortune-teller in Paris practices palmistry, by tracing the lines in people's feet. Her predictions are sole-searching ones.

All the wealthy women of Constantinople are slave-owners, and all the poor ones slaves. Such is Destiny, the world over.

Great excitement has been raised, in artistic circles, by the report that Miss Foley, an American sculptress, is engaged, "on a bust"—of George Ripley, of the "Tribune."

Female Bostonera are to have a "jamboree," (whatever that may be) on the occasion of the anniversary of the birth of Margaret Fuller D'Ossoli, May 23rd.

Long Island belles, numbering sixty, are the latest consignment to Utah, and to the saintly guardianship of the very married brethren, who reside there.

Mrs. C. E. C. Stanton is the first woman who had the manhood to strive for civic honors. And she failed; that is all she got for it.

Next season, Olive Logan will lecture upon "The Passions." Wonder if the lecturess touches upon the passion for notoriety, but then, we scarcely suppose she will be so egotistic and personal as that.

Victoria C. Woodhull, of the firm of Woodhull, Claflin & Co., brokers, New York, does not see any reason why, as Victoria is upon the throne of England, she (Victoria C.) should not be Presidentess of the United States.

A "pretty waiter-girl" at Milwaukee, answers to the rather aristocratic title of Miss Pauline Rivers de Vere. How she came, with such a name as that, to occupy her present position, we cannot say, but must suppose with Tennyson, that:

Her manners had not the repose that marks the caste of Vere-de-Vere."

"Michigander" is the latest flattery addressed to a man who hails from Michigan; and "Michigandrem" is a still newer term applied to a woman in the same predicament. Why not, in the latter instance, say "Michigoose" at once, even if it should sacrifice euphony at the shrine of strict grammatical propriety.

The Best Yet.—We have lately noticed some heavy fleeces taken off sheep this season, but the following throws all previous samples into the shade. A three shear ram, Lincoln breed owned by Mr, Stirton. M. P, and imported by Mr. Joseph Kirby, of Milton, produced a fleece weighing 24 lbs. This is heavier by some pounds than any fleece we have heark of this year from a long wooled sheep. A number of Mr' Stirtou's shearling ewes yielded fleeces of twelve, thirtee, and in some instances fifteen lbs.—

A country editor tried to write an elaborate article on "Woman's Influence," and was sorely distressed to find it printed next morning "Woman's Influenza."

It is rather a curio is incident, that when the American Congress sent Dr. Franklin, a printer, as Minister to France, the Court of Versailles sent M. Gerard, a bookbinder, as Minister to the United States. When Dr. Franklin was told of it, he exclaimed, "Well, I'll "print" the Independence of America and M. Gerard will "bind', it.

Arithmetical Problem.—If a baker's wages are thirty shillings a week, what's the pay of a good loafer who has been bread to the profession?'

As you do not belong to my parish," said a gentleman to a sailor, with a wooden leg, "I cannot relieve you." "Sir," replied the sailor, with an air of heroism, "I lost my leg fighting for all parishes."

Politeness and Pudding:—A young lady when invited to partake of a pudding, replied, 'No, many thanks my dear madam. By no manner of means. I have already indulged the clamorous calls of a craving appetite, until a manifest admonishes my stay; my deficiency is entirely and satisfactorily satisfied.'

There are two eventful periods in the life of a woman—one, when she wonders whom she will have, and the other, when she wonders who will have her.

An Ohio town proposes to give its women the right to vote, provided they will become responsible for their husbands,' debts, and turn out to mend the roads.

NOTICE.—Learning that my name has been unwarrantably used in connection with Directories now being canvassed in the Provinces, and entirely distinct from my works, and that in other cases it has been stated that my Directories have been abandoned, I would request those desiring to give a preference to my works to see that persons representing themselves as acting for me are furnished with satisfactory credentials.

These are engaged mainly on the towns and villages on the Railway and Steamboat Routes, important places on the lines being held till the completion of the former, to admit of correction to latest date.

I anticipate issuing, in October next, the CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY, and SIX PROVINCIAL DIRECTORIES, which will prove a correct and full index to the DOMINION OF CANADA, NEWFOUNDLAND, and PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, and a combined Gazetteer, Directory and Hand Book of the six Provinces.

The Old Clock on the Stairs.

BY LONGFELLOW.

Somewhat back from the village street,
Stands the old-fashioned country seat
Across its antique portico
Tall poplar-trees their shadows throw;
And from its station in the hall
An ancient time-piece says to all—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

Half-way up the stairs it stands,
And points and beckons with its hands
From its case of massive oak,
Like a monk, who under his cloak
Crosses himself, and sighs, alas!
With sorrowful voice to all who pass—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

By day its voice is low and light,
But in the silent dead of night,
Distinct as a passing footstep's fall,
It echoes along the vacant hall,
Along the ceiling, along the floor,
And seems to say at each chamber door—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

In that mansion used to be
Free-hearted hospitality;
His great fires by the chimney roared,
The stranger feasted at his board;
But like the skeleton at the feast,
The warning time-piece never ceased
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

There groups of merry children played,
There youths and maidens dreaming strayed;
O precious hours! O golden prime,
And affluence of love and time;
Even as a miser counts his gold,
Those hours the ancient time-piece told—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

From that chamber, clothed in white,
The bride came forth on her wedding night;
There in that silent room below,
The dead lay in his shrouds of snow;
And in the hush that followed the prayer,
Was heard the old clock on the stair—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

All are scattered now and fled;
Some are married and some are dead:
And when I ask, with throbs of pain,
"Ah, when shall they all meet again,
As in the days long since gone by?"
The ancient time-piece makes reply—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

Never here; forever there,
Where all parting, pain and care,
And death, and time shall disappear:
Forever there, but never here!
The horologe of Eternity
Sayeth this incessantly—
"Forever—never!
Never—forever!"

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twichings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, riping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 30 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R. R. R. Sold by Druggists.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppressions a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

Of all Wasting Scrofulous, and Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Ears, Head, LUNGS, Kidneys, Bladder.

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic diseases, and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other Scrofulous diseases are curable. This fact has been demonstrated in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption,

where one lung is or more seemly tissue was destroyed and dried up, and in over

500 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of Consumption, showing in every stage that where tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Intestines establishes Consumption of those organs. the Blood is thin, weak, pale, watery, and is deficient of such constituents as fibrin Albumen, Phosphorus, and the rich red coloring discs of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood is exhausted of strength and nourishment, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to hold in solution its natural constituents and Clears, cures, Tumors, Cancers and Virulent Humors are formed. the presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and pus extent suppuration.

This leader is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases, and prepared the Resolvent to supply the Blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions of system, and to give it the nourishment and strength to hold its natural constituents in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in England, France, Germany, and America, and was reared upon by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his text medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption, but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr Radway was the first to advance the theory, and the first and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure. In Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, Bronchials, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Throat, Glands, and Urinary Organs.

In all Wasting Discharges, such as Involuntary Loss of Sperm, Emissions, Weakness of the Genital Glands, Leucorrhea, and all Uterine difficulties, Gravel, Lime Stone, Brick Dust, Uric Acid, and Calculous Concretions, the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is a positive cure. In Dropsy, Diabetes, uncured Venereal, Syphilis in its many forms, it cures when all other medicines fail.

EVERY DAY

an increase of flesh, weight, and strength is experienced. It is Fat-Insue. Caloric or Heat-making. It is to the blood what oxygen is to the atmospheric air—it supplies the life principle. It surely removes from the surface all spots, Blemishes, Pustules, Tetters, Rash, Flesh Worms, Sores, &c., imparting a Clear & Beautiful Complexion to all.

CERTIFICATE OF BEAUTY.

The following letter is from a highly-gifted lady, well known in the "circles of our best society:"

LOCKPORT, Feb 25, 1868.

I had not much confidence in your SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT Having been disfigured for the last four months with BLOTCHES and PIMPLES, I resolved, as all events, to try it, and took TWO TEASPOONFUL three times a day, as directed. To Messrs. Chamberlain & Sells, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Manor, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to beat the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Poetry.

The Widow's Appeal.

Stay, stay thy hand! O tempt him not!
For he is all that's left to me—
The guardian of my lonely lot,
The partner of my misery,—
My youngest born—
His father's pride;
O tempt him not!
Take all beside.

Take all beside, but spare my boy,
Nor tempt him with the accursed bowl;
He's the widow's only joy,
The solace of her troubled soul;
Father and friend
Thy victim fell;
O spare the boy
I love so well!

Thrice have I seen the cold grave yawn,
And swallow in its darksome gloom
The forms I've loved from earliest dawn,
And thou, alas! did'st seal their doom!
The tempting bowl
Thy hand did'st hold,
And all was done
For paltry gold.

Those painful scenes I can forget:
This bruised heart can heal again,
And burning tears shall no more wet
Those pallid cheeks so sunk with pain.
All is forgiven
If thou'lt but swear,
By hope of Heaven,
Thou wilt forbear.

And tempt no more my darling boy,
Nor taste those bitter drops of woe—
No more the mother's peace destroy,
But onward let thy footsteps go,
To seek the lost
From virtue's ways,
And joy shall crown
Thy future days.

Dream of the Rum-seller's Wife.

I dreamed last night that I was passing leisurely through the streets, dressed with care, as I usually am when walking out for pleasure; and as I intended making some trifling purchases by the way, I recollect I had the beautiful purse which was my Christmas present in my hand. Mrs. B—was walking a few yards ahead of me, and I was wondering how she got every new fashion so soon, and whether she used her cast off things to pay her help with, or sold them to the china peddlers, or whether it could be really true that she gave them to the poor. Well, just as the foolish train of thought was passing through my mind, all at once a woman advanced towards me, with no bonnet, and a miserable shawl drawn over her head. I thought she was going to beg, and was beginning to tell her I had nothing to give, when she seized the strings of my hat with a resolute hand, and a look that almost petrified me, took it off and put it on her own head and walked away! I looked after her with astonishment, but what could I do—go in at the first door? The people were strangers, and what would they think? There was no milliner's shop at hand, and I was quite a distance from home. As I could do nothing, in my turn I drew my shawl over my head, and tried to quicken my steps; but my feet seemed to be paralyzed, and I made little progress.

Just then, I saw a woman in the distance, coming towards me. Oh! if I could only walk as she does, thought I. The woman was very meagre, poorly dressed, and with nothing about her shoulders, though the air was quite keen. The moment we met, she stopped, looked me sternly in the face, and exclaimed in a voice as stern as the look, "Give me my shawl, madam." And without waiting for my reply or resistance, stripped it from me, and wrapping it about her own shoulders went on.

Scarcely had I begun to cast about in my mind what to do next, when another of these wretched beings came upon me. She wore the tattered remains of an old cloak about her; but as she raised her arm I saw that she had no dress beneath it, or rather but the remains of one.

"For mercy's sake," said I as she laid her hand heavily on my shoulder, "what do you want of me? I have met with robbers enough already." "Robbers!" cried she, in a voice that went through me like a sword. "Boobers! Take back that lie, base thief! Thou art the robber! Give me my own!" So saying, she tore from me my dress—that splendid silk one you have so often admired—and putting it on, disappeared.

In utter dismay and confusion, there I stood, not knowing which way to turn or what to think. But I was not allowed much time for reflection. Immediately I felt my hand grasped by the cold, bony fingers of three ragged children, who were crying, and clinging to her clothes. "Give me my money!" said she, as she wrenched the purse from my trembling hand. "There, it will buy you some bread, poor things!" she added in a softer tone, as she flung it into the eager hands of the children, "it will buy you some bread!" I looked after her as she followed the tattered group; but my tongue was dumb, my feet were glued to the earth, and my whole frame was shivering with cold and terror.

The woman had only just gone, when her place was taken by another, who was very delicate and pale, her dress, though much disordered, bearing evident marks of good taste. Her eyes were red as if she had been weeping, but they brightened up when they saw the watch and chain, which, strange to say, were still upon my person. "Yes, thank God!" exclaimed she, "this will save him!—my own beautiful watch, my father gave me on my marriage day—the self same one—I know it well. This will pay it all—this will take him out of prison! Give me my watch!" And without looking at me at all, she seized upon the watch and hurried away, repeating wildly to herself, "Yes, this will save him—this will take him out of prison—my own beautiful watch!"

Next I was disrobed of my elaborately quilted skirt by a squalid Irishwoman, who went away muttering, a sort of apology for her rudeness. "Poor crater, it's not that I would harm ye, to be sure; and may be yes've got as much left upon you now, as many a poor thing that deserves more!—Wasn't it Patrick's wages that bought the quilt? and isn't it one's own he takes, wherever he finds it?"

Then three pallid creatures, from different directions, surrounded me, as I stood like a marble statue, hardly knowing whether I was dead or alive. One immediately divested me of my jewelry, saying contemptuously as she turned away, "I care not for the trash, but it is mine. It was pawned for rum; now it shall keep alive my starving little ones a little longer." The second took my scarf, gloves, richly embroidered cuffs, undersleeves and handkerchief, saying with a bitter smile, "How exquisite! How beautiful! Yes, I will put them on. I will adorn myself once more, and see if my husband will recognize me.—I used to wear such things when he loved me better than rum. What have I done, that I should be clothed in rags, and see the finery that was purchased with my own money sported on the person of another? Oh yes, I will put on these fine things, and see how they will compare with my present home, with those emaciated limbs, and the garments that scarcely hide them! Shall I not look like a queen? Saying this, she turned away with a horrid laugh, leaving me with the third, who, with a resolute arm seated me on the steps of a building beside which I stood, and speedily taking off my best gaiters and lamb's-wool stockings, put them on her almost naked feet, muttering to herself, "I have needed them sorely, sorely. How cruel in the heartless thief to keep them from me."

Once more I was left alone. If I could have sunk into the earth, gladly would I have done so. But no! there I sat, dressed only in under garments, and looking more like a ghost than a living creature. But I had not yet reached the climax of horror.—Another female appeared in the distance; she approached, and I felt a death-like sickness as she stood before me. I tried to close my eyes against the spectre, but could not. She was the perfect picture of despair; and, besides, there was something in her look that overawed, that made me quail like a criminal. Laying her hand on the full white skirt that flowed to my feet, and examining its texture, she said in a low, thrilling voice, "Yes, this will do; it is beautiful, very beautiful indeed! and should it not be?—Purchased with the money that was toiled for by these poor hands, while my darling angel lay moaning in his hard cradle, and I could not take him up—could not hush him on my bosom! Woman," she said, looking me in the face with a gaze I shall never forget, "I will take this linen now, for it is needed, and I have no money to buy more." I did not answer her; I had lost all power of utterance. There was a calm despairing expression in her eyes that froze me. She fastened them on me a moment, then perceiving my shudder of horror at the idea of being utterly deprived of clothing, and left a gazing stock in the public street, she drew back, saying, "No, sinful, soulless man—no! I cannot take away the covering. O my child, my cherub, my blessed angel of heaven! thou art innocent, but she is guilty. No, madam! I had thought to take it for a shroud, to lay out my dead baby, my murdered child—murdered by the cruelty of a drunken father! There he lies, in his pillowless cradle, with the little soiled frock he has worn for weeks still on him! I could not go to the neighbors for a shroud. I could not beg when I knew there was cloth of my own, so white, so fine, so suitable. But no, I will not take it from you! If I am a mother, I am a woman. Better that I should be clothed in rags—better that my innocent one should go to the grave uncovered! He has never sinned; let him lie in his pure nakedness. God, e angels shall spread over him their spotless wings. Keep thy ill-gotten clothing. It may shield thy form from the gaze of man, but it cannot shield thy soul from the curse of the childless mother—the Drunkard's Wife!"

O my husband, the sound of that voice is ringing in my ears at this moment! Perhaps I am weak and foolish; but truly as I am alive and sitting here, I will never use one of those articles of dress again. I will put on mourning, and eat bread and water. I will see no company—no, never will I show my face to the world; never will I set my foot into the street again, so long as I am the wife of a rum-seller.

Money.

The power of "the root of all evil" in these times is overwhelming. Before Mammon, man trembles. It is the god of the rich, and the idol of those less favored. Its influence pervades all ranks and classes of men. Heroes loose their manhood in grasping after it.—Honor quails before its influence. Crime is set down as naught in comparison with the respectability (?) and weight which he who possesses a well-lined purse can command. Its influence for good is undoubtedly powerful, but in the hands of the vile and unprincipled, it has a tendency to taint and pollute the entire social and moral atmosphere. Backed by money, a man, in these times, can, with impunity, commit every crime in the calendar, and escape unscathed. He can, if his villainy is deep seated and he is in possession of the quality vulgarly denominated "brass," hold his head high and ride down all frowns and the contempt of an entire community. He can buy up those who have suffered insult and injury at his hands; and pulled up with his pride of purse and acknowledged influence, he can tread the public thoroughfares with a stately step, and receive the smirking salutations of those who, in their hearts, despise him, while he inwardly gloats over his untold crimes and plots new schemes for the gratification of his base passions and injury of his fellow men. Justice can be subverted—the laws set at defiance—the grossest immorality practiced—and the blackest and most degrading crimes committed without fear, by the depraved, if they can but command, as will, the influence of money. Such has been and will be, we suppose, the record of this, as well as all other communities. The strong minded man ceases to be powerful when tempted with the alluring bait. His knees smite each other, and he quietly worships at the shrine. The weak and puerile readily grasp with nervous activity the glittering bauble, and daily in all ranks and stations of life homage is paid Mammon.—Dundas Banner.

A THOUGHT FOR YOUTH.—The heart of youth is a wide prairie. Over it hang the clouds of heaven to water it; the sun throws its broad sheets of light upon it, to wake it to life; out of its bosom, spring the long season through, flowers of a hundred names and hues, twining together their lovely forms waiting to each other a grateful odor, and nodded each to each in the summer breeze. Such would man be would he hold that purity of heart which God gives him. Therefore, O youth, guard your heart-purity. Never lose it; if it be gone, you have lost from the casket the most precious gif of God. The first purity of imagination, of thought, and of feeling, it soiled, can be cleansed by no fuller's soap of lost, it cannot be found, though sought for carefully with tears. If a harp be broken broken art may remedy it; if a light be quenched, the flame may rekindled it; but if a flower be crushed, what art can repair it? If an odor be wafted away who can collect or bring it back?

Let a young man at twenty years of age put twenty dollars at interest, instead of expending it for tobacco. Then, at the beginning of the next year repeat it and include also the principal and interest of the preceding year, and then continue to do from year to year, until he shall have reached the age of seventy; the amount he would realize would exceed thirty thousand dollars.

Room in Heaven.

"And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth; and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal."—Rev. xxi. 16.

There are some who never think of heaven. In their minds a thought of the better country would starve for want of room. Others think of it occasionally, when the voice of sweet music seals upon their ear, or Providence or the preacher lifts them above earth. But when they do think of it, how poor and meagre their thoughts; to them it is a narrow circumscribed spot in the universe, a small place just large enough for their church, but too small to admit within its pearly enclosure, even the good beyond their communion. Such were not the views entertained by John when, on the lonely Isle, he saw in grand panoramic view, the heavenly city.

John was in the Spirit on the mountain of holy contemplation, and he had a delightful conversation with one of the royal surveyors of the heavenly country. He says, verse 15, "And he that talked with me had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the walls thereof. The idea he gives to us, is, that there was solidity, firmness, durability, and strength, all combined with indescribable beauty, surpassing grandeur and infinite glory.

The city, as he saw it, was in the form of a magnificent cube of vast dimensions. The surveyor had the golden reed, and he measured the city in the presence of his visitor. It was 1,200 furlongs (stadu) long, and 1,200 furlongs broad, and 1,200 furlongs high. The length, and the breadth, and the height of it are equal.

Here is absolutely uniformity, a thing long talked of and prayed for, but something not to be realized on this side the heavenly home.

In this cubic form the new Jerusalem recalled somewhat the form of the tarnished old Jerusalem, on its encampment above the valley of the Kedron.

In this view of the great city we are quite in harmony with the rabbinical books.

We take the passage as it reads,—"1,200 furlongs," which when reduced to feet and cubed, is 948,938,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 cubic feet. The half of which we reserve for the throne of glory and the heavenly court. Half of the remainder I reserve for the angel's thrones, dominions, principalities, and powers. Half of the remainder I reserve for celestial gardens of heavenly fruits and flowers. Half of the remainder for shady bowers and lovely parks. Half of the walks, and the remainder, or thirty second remainder for the golden streets and of the whole, I divide into rooms of (20) twenty feet square, and ten feet high, of rooms we have 7,413,578,125,000,000,000,000,000.

Then I suppose that this world was populated at present with say 900,000,000 of human beings, and that three generations pass away every hundred years, that is allowing 33⅓ years for each generation, and at the close of the seven thousandth year the trumpeter will proclaim that 'time would be no longer,' and that earth's population would all be be brought home to the city of our God.

I also suppose that there are in the universe of our Father (800,000) eight hundred thousand worlds like ours existing under the same circumstances, and for the same term of years as ours; each having the same number of inhabitants as our own, and each inhabitant obedient to the universal some.

Take all these multitudes of human of created beings, and the heavenly home the angel measured for John and for us, dear reader, would afford (49) forty-nine rooms as are measured above for each inhabitant of all of the 800,000 worlds, and leave more than four millions of cubic feet yet unsurveyed. 'And yet there is room.' O how true it is that in 'my Father's house there are many mansions.'—Guide to Holiness.

Night in the Arctic Regions.

The author of "the Polar World" thus writes of "Night in the Arctic Regions:"—

"Night covers the snow-clad earth; the stars glimmer feebly through the haze which so frequently dims their brilliancy in the high latitudes, when suddenly a broad and clear bow of light spans the horizon in the direction where is is traversed by the magnetic meridian. This bow sometimes remains for several hours, heaving or waving to and fro, before it sends forth streams of light ascending to the zenith. Sometimes these flashes proceed from the bow of light alone; at others they simultaneously shoot forth from many opposite parts of the horizon, and form a vast sea of fire whose brilliant waves are continually changing their position. Finally they all unite in a magnificent crown or cupola of light, with the appearance of which the phenomenon attains its highest degree of splendor. The brilliancy of the streams, which are commonly red at the base, green in the middle, and light yellow toward the zenith, increases, while at the same time they dart with greater vivacity through the skies. The colors are wonderfully transparent, the red approaching to a clear blood-red, the green to a pale emerald tint. On turning from the flaming firmament to the earth, this also is seen to glow with a magical light. The dark sea, black as jet, forms a striking contrast to the white snow plain or the distant ice mountain; all the outlines tremble as if they belonged to the unreal world of dreams. The imposing silence of the night heightens the charms of the magnificent spectacle. But gradually the crown fades, the bow of light dissolves, the streams become shorter, less frequent and less vivid; and finally the gloom of winter once more descends upon the northern desert."

Beautiful Figure.

Two painters were employed to fresco the walls of a magnificent cathedral; both stood on a rude scaffolding constructed for the purpose, some eighty feet from the floor.

One of them was so intent upon his work that he became wholy absorbed, and in admiration stood from the picture gazing at it with delight. Forgetting where he was, he moved backward slowly surveying critically the work of his pencil, until he had neared the end of the plank upon which he stood.

At this critical moment his companion turned suddenly, and almost frozen with horror, beheld the imminent peril; another instant and the enthusiast would be precipitated upon the pavement beneath; if he spoke to him it was certain death—if he held his peace death was equally sure. Suddenly he regained his presence of mind, and seizing a wet brush flung it against the wall spattering the beautiful picture with unsightly blotches of coloring. The painter flew forward, and turned upon his friend with fierce imprecations; but, he listened to the recital of danger, looked over the dread space below and with tears of gratitude, blessed the hand that saved him.

He said a preacher we sometimes get absorbed in looking upon the pictures of this world, and, in contemplating them, step backward, unmindful of our peril when the Almighty dashes out the beautiful image, and [illegible] stretches forth the hand of mercy, and saves us!

Who Rules the Dominion?

We have heard the above question so frequently asked of late, that we now consider it an appropriate heading for an article on the subject; in which ye think the question can be answered to the satisfaction of our readers.

In common with the great body of the Canadian people, we hailed Confederation with satisfaction, believing that we were about to enter upon a brilliant career as a Dominion; that all party lines should be obliterated, and that the peculiar grievances of each province would forever be done away with, and that all our energies should be exerted to build up a great British Confederation in North America, whose people should be endowed with national feelings, national politics, and a spirit of self-reliance and patriotism, which would in the end, make us a happy and contented people, and gain for us the respect of other nations of the earth.

With this grand object in view, no doubt, many of our ablest Statesmen cast aside their differences, and entered upon the work of Union, in a manner, which gained, at the time, our confidence and admiration. Their efforts were so far successful, as to be able to unite the principal portion of British North America, in one Confederation, with every prospect of the remaining part joining the Union, at no far distant day. So far they were successful in their efforts, and the people with one voice offered up the prayer "God bless our young Dominion." The Ship of State was fairly launched, amidst the cheers of the people; all hearts were centered in the gallant craft, and every eye was strained to see her safely steered into harbor, where the angry waves and adverse winds could not effect her. Five long years we have watched the Confederation Ship, and she is now no nearer harbour than ever. Ontario expected that Confederation would, at least, enable her to get rid of French domination, and how, after five years of trial, has her hopes been realized? Cartier is still the ruling power in the Government. John A., has lost the confidence of Ontario, and keeps himself in power by truckling to the Minister of Militia, who wields the largest influence in Quebec,

No Statesman pretending to represent Ontario, dare to receive the Red River delegation, after the almost unanimous verdict of the people to the contrary, unless he relied for support from some other quarter. This support John A. gets from the hierarchy of Quebec, of which Cartier is the mouth piece; and the great Protestant province of Ontario has to abide the consequences. In addition to this, Cartier has the complete control of the Militia Department, which enables him to insult our Volunteers, and if possible, weaken their attachment to their Queen and Country. Few, if any, can admire the manner in which the Minister of Militia manages the delicate question of keeping up a sound Volunteer spirit amongst us; and of the many blunders which he has committed, none, I think, had as bad an effect, as the last, of calling a few men from each battalion, to serve under strange officers. The result of such a policy was, that men would not volunteer, while if a different system had been adopted, thousands could have been obtained in this County alone. Again, he calls for six officers from each district, and one would expect that out of so many, those only would be chosen, who were the best qualified; such, however, is not the case, as those only are chosen, who have political influence. One would have thought that the Surgeons of the various battalions would have escaped insult, but such is not the case, as assistant Surgeons of the regular army have been sent to the different points of rendezvous, to examine their men, a duty they are well able to perform themselves. Thus we find, that while the head of one department is flooding our Country with greenbacks, a proceeding which has already weakened the confidence of the people in the stability of the Country, the head of another is trying to destroy the Volunteer force of Ontario, of which we feel justly proud.

As a proof of the miserable management of the Militia Department, we have only to refer to the number of men who were dragged from their homes with the supposition that they were going to Red River, who were rejected at Toronto. True, a silly order had been issued to the Lieut-Colonel of each battalion, stating, that unless they sent the right kind of men, they (the men) would be returned at the expense of said Colonel. And how, we ask, were the Colonels of battalions to know what kind of men would suit the whims of Dr. so and so at Toronto and Kingston, unless by a medical examination—which they were not ordered to submit their men to. The men from the 57th battalion were examined here before they left, by the Surgeon of the battalion, and not one of them was rejected.

If the whole expedition is managed in this manner, and there is no guarantee that it will not be, the shoddy Minister of Finance will have to issue a few more greenbacks.

Confederation, then in such hands, has certainly not made us more dignified, as can be seen by a perusal of the recent debates in parliament, neither has it made us more moral, as our representatives do not hesitate to legislate upon the Sabbath day, and all this is owing to the fact, that Cartier rules John A., the hierarchy rule Cartier, and John A. rules the Dominion. As a proof of this, we have only to look at the North West negotiations, the most important subject ever brought before the House.

Notwithstanding so many drawbacks, however, the look confidently to the future of the Dominion, and feel that in the hands of more reliable and honest politicians the case would be different. The remedy is in the hands of the people themselves, and they will come short of their duty, if they do not at the next general election, send men to parliament, who, instead of "grinding their own axes," will legislate for the good of all.

The North West.

Manitobe, is to be the name of the North-West. The word means, the Speaking God. How did John A. think of the name.

The region which is to form the new Province, commences at a point on the frontier of the United States, ninety degrees West of Greenwich, and extends to a point 96 degrees, 15 minutes West of Greenwich, being bounded on the South by the 49th parallel of latitude, and on the North by latitude 50 degrees 30 minutes. It will contain 11,000 square miles. It is to be erected into a Province. Sir John A. McDonald, says: Such portions of the North West, as is not included in Manitoba, will be governed as Territory, by the Lieut-Governor of that Province.

They are to have a representative Government. Two members to represent the Province in the Dominion Senate, until the population reaches 50,000. After that, three members until the population reaches 75,000. After that, four members.

In the House of Commons it is to have four members.

There will be a Lieut-Govarnor as in the other provinces.

The Provincial Legislature to meet at Fort Garry, or within a mile of it.

There are to be two Chambers in the Provincial Parliament. The Legislative Council to consist of seven members, but after the expiration of four years, it may be increased to twelve members.

The Legislature body is to consist of 24 members.

The qualification for voters to be the same as in the district of Algoma. The clause is:

Every British subject who has attained the age of 21 years, and who is and has been a householder for one year, shall have a right to vote. The duration of the Parliament to be 4 years. The Parliament will have power to alter their constitution after 4 years.

The Bill provides for paying 80 cents a head, to commence with a population of 15,000. A further sum of $30,000 shall be paid for the support of the Government. The Bill also provides that either the English or French languages, shall be used in the proceedings of the Legislature, but both of them in the records, and journals. About 1,200,000 acres of the land shall be retained, for the purpose, of extinguishing the Indian titles.

The force to be sent will consist of one fourth of Her Majesty's Troops, and three fourths of Canadian Militia, and the expenditure, Sir John says, will be borne in the same proportions. There is also to be a body of mounted rifles, under the command of Capt. Cameron. These are to remain in the country, till peace shall be restored. The great object of these rifles is to prevent Indian troubles.

These are the details of the Bill, as given to the House, but they may be greatly modified before finally adopted.

This little province of 15,000 souls, equal to about the East Riding of this County, will receive about $42,000 a year from the Dominion: their Governor, Collectors of Customs, Postmasters, &c. will also be paid from Dominion funds. The Province too will be purely French, a Lower Canada in the North-West, Riel the murderer Prime Minister, and his associates in blood, in the cabinet, will Ontario members vote for such measures.?

Will Messrs. Perry and Grover vote for them, and then come and look their constituents in the face? If they do, will the people of this County permit them to degrade the position to which they have been elected? We advise our representatives not to outrage the feelings of the people of Ontario, by thus being the creatures of Cartier, in establishing a French Colony at Red River.

Surely John A. was drunk when he agreed to such a Bill as is before the House.

DROWNED.—At Lakefied, on Sunday last, a man from the locks, named, Donald McQuaeg, was drowned in a culvert of the railroad, a little south of the village. He got whiskey it is believed, in some house on the Douro side, and wandering along the railroad while drunk, fell into the culvert and was drowned. An inquest was held by coroner Bell, but no verdict could be agreed upon at first, and in consequence the inquisition was adjourned till Tuesday. Whether the jurors agree or not, poor Donald is believed to have lost his life through the effects of Intoxication.

Since writing the above, we have received the whole proceedings and evidence in full, from a correspondent. It is the old, old story, whiskey, drunk, drowned! The Jury cannot agree to a verdict. Why they could not, must be a mystery to every one but themselves. Seven of the jurors were for including the names of the parties from whom the liquor was obtained; the other seven were against this of course.

On Tuesday, there was no agreement, and consequently no verdict. The Jury are bound over to the Assizes.

There was almost an agreement to allow the publication of the evidence, but we are informed that the Coroner, threatened proceedings, if anything should be published. By witholding his evidence, the Coroner does more to establish guilt on the parties blamed, than by publishing it. No evidence is ever witheld, unless where by publishing, the ends of justice would be endangered. The Coroner's refusal, therefore attaches guilt to some party or parties, perhaps those who gave the unfortunate man the whiskey. He got some in a bottle, and the bottle was found in the boat, where deceased left it, during the afternoon. Poor McQueg has lost his life, at any rate.

We hope that some of Her Majesty's Coroners will be carried away, by fear of giving publicity to the supposed cause of the death of one of Her Subjects.

Our informant says, "The inquest has caused great excitement" at Lakefield. We are glad to hear that the blood of the men of Lakefield has not quarrelful of their duties as citizens, to drown down the traffic that destroys so many fellow-beings, and we trust that they will fathom down any attempt to keep the facts of the case secret, when the ends of Justice do not demand privacy.

Red River.

The report of Mr. Smith, who was sent West as Commissioner, has, at the 11th hour, been received.

He met Riel on the 27th of December, and was almost immediately demanded to take an oath not to take steps to upset Riel's government. This Mr. Smith refused to do, and declares he did not then or since take such oath. He says the state of matters then at Fort Garry was truly humiliating; upwards of sixty British subjects in prison as political offenders. The stores ammunition, &c., in possession of the half breeds, and they asserting that they would use all their influence for annexation to the United States. On the 6th of January he saw Mr. Riel and came to the conclusion that no good could arise from entering into any negotiations with his council—even did he admit their authority, which he says he was not prepared to do. He learned on the 13th that Grand Vicar Thibault and Col. De Salaberry appeared before the President and Council of the people, when some explanations and compliments were exchanged, after which the very reverend gentleman and his associates were politely bowed out and lost sight of.

He found the influential portion of the people in favor of the Canadian Government. This made Riel change his tactics. He tried to get hold of Mr. Smith's commission, but failed; and shortly after he ordered the arrest of the Commissioner. Mr. Smith adds: I protested, saying—"Am I to consider myself a prisoner?" He replied, "Certainly not, I have the utmost confidence in your honor, but circumstances demand this." It was now about ten o'clock, and my messenger having been marched out, I retired to bed, but only to be awakened between two and three o'clock in the morning by Mr. Riel, who, with a guard, stood by the bedside, and again demanded a written order for the delivery of my official papers, which I again peremptorily refused to give.

FATHER RICHOT'S FIRST APPEARANCE.

The report adds:—"The well disposed French party became aware of what had happened, and not believing in Riel's good faith, determined to prevent the papers from falling into his hands. They got together some sixty or eighty men, who met my friend on his way back, and were escorting him, when, on the 18th, about ten miles from the Fort, they were accosted by Riel and some of his party, and by the Rev. Mr. Richot. An altercation took place. Riel attempted to use his pistol, saying he would not be taken alive in his own country, on which a revolver was levelled at his head, and Rev. Mr. Richot having interposed he was unceremoniously told to stand aside, and not to interfere any further with matters unconnected with his spiritual duties. It may be well to note that all who took part in this affair were Catholics, and with one or two exceptions were French half-breeds. Nothing more serious happened at this time, and the party proceeded together to Fort Garry, where they arrived in the forenoon. A few minutes before they entered the house, the very Rev. Mr. Thibault, Pere Lestance, and Colonel De Salberry called upon me, and with the exception of my guard they were the first individuals with whom I was permitted to converse since the 14th. They appeared to be much concerned, and said it was currently reported that I had been endeavoring to incite the different parties to a hostile collision. I repudiated any such charge and explained that I had acted only in the cause of peace and order and with the desire of making the people, both French and English, fully acquainted with the liberal views of the Canadian Government, so that a peaceful transfer of the Territory might be affected, adding that I was pleased to think there was now every likelihood this would speedily be accomplished. In the meantime the party in possession of my papers entered the adjoining room, in which Pere Lestance joined them, while Messrs. Thibault and De Salaberry went outside. Immediately after they retired Mr. Riel came to me saying, "Your Commission is here, but in the hands of men who had no right to have it." I expressed satisfaction that it had been brought in, and said, being now in possession of it, I must be relieved from all restraint and be permitted freely to communicate with the people. He at once removed the guard and we went up to the party who had just arrived. Messrs Riel and O'Donohue, with a few of their friends, were present, and when in turn protested against the act, it now being taken, while the ex councillors accused them of treason to the Imperial Crown and of using every effort to bring about the annexation of the country to the United States. Riel replied that was only supposing the people desired it, but that he was willing the question should be submitted to them. Pere Lestance spoke warmly in favor of the President, who, he said, had acted so as to merit the gratitude of his countrymen, and begged them still to place confidence in him. This, evidently, had no effect and ultimately, after a good deal of recrimination, it was arranged that a meeting of the inhabitants from all parts of the settlement should be called for to-morrow, the 19th, at which the papers bearing on the subject should be read, a guard of 40 men remaining in the house to ensure the safe-keeping of the documents. Riel's men were now falling away from him, while the loyal party expressed their determination no longer to be guided in the matter, either by him or by Pere Lestance and his associates. They were full of hope and confident that the following day would bring with it complete success to the cause of Canada. Late that night Pere Lestance paid them another visit, which was prolonged for several hours beyond midnight, and the next morning it was found that a majority of those who had seceded from Riel were again on friendly terms with him.

A meeting was held on the 19th of January. The commission was read, and the Queens letter, and contested obstinately, but carried. They had flags, the Fleur de Lest, and Shamrock, they would not take down. Forty delegates were appointed who met on the 25th of January, when all the English and many of the French declared their entire satisfaction with the explanation of the commission.

At the convention on the 25th, Mr. Smith said: I was received with much cordiality by all the delegates; explained to them the views of the Canadian Government, and give assurance that on entering the Confederation they would be secured in the possession of all the rights, priviledges and immunities enjoyed by British subjects in other ports of the Dominion; but on being requested by Mr. Riel to give an opinion regarding a certain list of rights prepared by his party in December last, I declined so do so, thinking it better that the present Convention should place in my hands a paper stating their wishes, to which I should be happy to give such answers as I believed would be in accordance with the views of the Canadian Government. The Convention then set about the task of preparing a list of rights, embodying the conditions on which they would be willing to enter into the Confederation. While the discussion regarding this list was going on, Riel called on me and asked if the Canadian Government would consent to receive them as a province. My reply was that I could not speak with any degree of certainty on the subject, as it had not been referred to when I was at Ottawa, the intention then being that the North-West should, in the first instance be incorporated under the dominion as a territory; but I added no doubt it would become a province within two or three years. On this Riel, with much emphasis, exclaimed: "Then the Hudson Bay Company is not safe," to which I answered, Riel, "That cannot influence in the slightest degree, and I am quite prepared to act as may be required of me in my capicity as a Canadian Commissioner." This was on the evening of the third of Feb. On the following day the proposition to enter as a province was negatived by the Convention, and on the 5th, their motion directed against the Hudson Bay Company also failed, the language used by Riel on the latter occasion having been violent in the extreme.

Riel acted in the most haughty manner, arresting all whom he considered in any way opposed to his authority.

On the 5th of Feb'y, the Bill of Rights was placed in his hands, and two hours given to frame answers. In drawing up these, he was not allowed reference to any document, either written or printed, except the list of rights, and a guard stood over him to see that he should write nothing else than that to be presented to the Convention. He had just finished writing when Mr. Riel and his Adjutant-General—Lepine—who was also a member of the Convention, came in, and Riel, looking at the matter in a significant manner, said "The answer to the Bill of Rights must be simply, Yes or No." On this Mr. Smith remarked, that he thought otherwise, and would act as circumstances might appear to require. During the greater portion of the time, Col. DeSalaberry was also prisoner. A large majority of the delegates expressed entire satisfaction with the answers to their list of rights, and professed confidence in the Canadian Government, to which Mr. Smith invited them to send delegates, with a view of effecting a speedy transfer of the territory to the Dominion, an invitation received with acclamation, and unanimously accepted. The delegates named were; John Black, Esq., Recorder; Rev. Mr. Richot, and Alfred H. Scott, a good deal of opposition having been offered to the election of the last named of the three. The proceedings of the Convention came to a close on the 10th February, by the nomination of a Provisional Government, in the formation of, which several delegates declined to take any part. Governor McTavish, Dr. Cowan, and two or three other persons were then released, and the Hudson Bay Company's officers again allowed to come and go at pleasure; but Mr. Smith was still confined at the Fort, Riel, as he expressly stated to Judge Black, being apprehensive of his influence with the people in the approaching election.

Cavan Spring Show.

We have been kindly favored with the following list of horses that obtained prizes at the above show, by George Johnston, Esq., who was at Millbrook on the day of the Exhibition:

DRAUGHT HORSES.

1st prize,—Lowden Tom, owned by G. Shaw, of Bowmanville.

2nd prize,—Sir Robert Bruce, owned by Isaac Gardiner, of Cavan.

The other entries in this class were;—Young Robert Clyde, owned by Jas. Harper, of Darlington; Young Lion, owned by T. Goggin, of Cavan; Prince of Wales, owned by T. Chapman, of Hamilton Township: and Robin Hood, owned by T. Williamson, of Cavan.

CARRIAGE HORSES.

The other entries in this class were;—Argyle Saxon, owned by Samuel Staples, of Manvers; Shield's Rattler, owned by Benjamin Heaslip, Baillieboro; Southern Prince, owned by Arch'd. Lattimer, Baillieboro; Young Tom Kimball, owned by S. Crawford, Hope.

Adjutant W. N. Kennedy, left here on Monday, for Toronto, en route for Manitoba. We understand that he has received a Lieutenancy. He was accompanied to the train by Lieut. Col. Poole, and several others, prominent amongst the volunteers of the ballalion. There was also a large crowd of citizens. Mr. Rackett's Band accompanied, playing appropriate tunes. Three rousing cheers were given as the train started. At Port Hope, Mr. Philp's Band serenaded Mr. Kennedy, at the hotel where he stopped for a while.—In the evening he proceeded to Toronto, where he is awaiting further orders.

Since his departure a telegram has been received here for some more men, but only a few are wanted.

The names of those who have left Peterboro for the west are: Adjutant W. Kennedy, D. English, W. Anthony, T. Coates, W. McGregor, G. Green, W. Waddell, White, Champion, Driesdale and Cotton.

The Globe of Thursday boldly declares that John A. has been missing in the House on account of his besetting sin of drunkenness. We clip the following from the Globe of the 30th ult.:

"It is really an outrage to the country. The spectacle of the Prime Minister staggering into the refreshment room of the House, and taken out thence, first by one colleague and then by another; or babbling in mandlin intoxication in a hotel bar room is a thing to which no other country would submit for an hour."

If these charges are true, and there is reason to believe that they are, is it to be wondered at that he is goverened by Cartier & Co., of Quebec. Surely the Canadians will come to their senses ere another election and leave Sir John to enjoy himself at home.

The Monaghan Gravel Road has been abandoned.

The Hamilton volunteers for the Red River were entertained at a dinner by the members of the battalion, on Friday evening last.

ELECTRO BIOLOGY.—Professor Stone, is amusing all those who visit him in the Music Hall. Several unbelievers in his power to lead captive at his will, have become converts. During their conversion some amusing scenes have been witnessed.

Editorial Items

Wheat is firmer abroad, but there is none coming in here.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has issued 57,200,000 volumes.

An association has been formed in Port Hope for the purpose of planting shade trees.

CORRECTION.—In the notice for Court of Revision, for the Village of Ashburnham, "15th day of May" should read; Monday, 16th of May, 1870.

There is another candidate for the Spanish throne—Prince Augustus, of Saxe Coburg Gotha—son-in-law of the Emperor of Brazil. He is very wealthy and a Catholic, strong recommendations in his favor.

PENITENTIARY WARDENSHIP.—It is rumored, says the Port Hope Times, that F. H. Burton, Esq., is to be appointed to the Wardenship of the Penitentiary, rendered vacant by the death of the Hon. Mr. Ferris.

The Rev'd James Douglass, of Cavan, died on Saturday last, at his residence near Millbrook. He had been almost 40 years Minister of the Presbyterian Church at Centreville and Millbrook.

PRESENTATION.—The friends of J. S. Johnston, Esq., late of the Port Hope Guide, presented him with a Gold Watch and a flattering address on the occasion of his leaving Port Hope for some more southerly clime.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, Conservative, has been elected for Frontenac in the place of his father, deceased. Kingston and Frontenac are ready to support John A. Macdonald at any loss to the country.

McFarlane's trial at New York for the shooting of Ritchardson, forseducing his (McF's) wife, has lasted nearly two weeks. The verdict has not yet reached us, if given.

The infant son of Mr. W. Dumble, of Minden, was drowned last week in the yard adjacent to Mr. Dumble's dwelling. The late floods had raised the water till it entered Mr. D's. yard; and the child, about one year and seven months old, fell in, and before seen, was drowned.

Sir John A Macdonald has made himself the friend (?) of Catholics, by suspending the Habeas Corpus Act, in reference to their co-religionists coming to Canada from the United States. They are in every way liable to be taken up on the accusation of being dangerous to the equanimity of his government.

BOOTS AND SHOES.—Messrs McWilliams & Larmour, have opened out a new stock of Boots and Shoes, at Morris's old stand, George Street. They are determined to do business on satisactory terms, and will have suitable work always on hand. Give Messrs. McWilliams & Larmour a call.

The water in the river is receding, and very soon will again occupy its usual bed. The damage done to the mill property and to stuff in the under parts of buildings near the River is very great. The water has not been known to be as high before in 45 years, and may not again in a generation. sufferers are trying to console themselves with this hope.

MARBLE WORKS.—We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. Barnecott, in another column. He has commenced business in Peterboro, and is prepared to execute all work in his line, in a superior style. He has some work now on hand, that would do credit to any establishment. We advise those requiring such work to give Mr. Barnecott a call.

DUMMER.—We have received a communication from Dummer, on the late vexed question, opening it up again. It is too late for this issue, but we advise a "Subscriber" to let the matter drop. The principals are at peace, and as a Subscriber says, "Whiskey" &c. will be more careful in future. We do not however see what good could come out of a second discussion.

We are requested to announce, that the next meeting of the Teachers' Class, will be held in the Union School, on the third Saturday of this month, commencing at 10. 30 A. M. Subjects:—Reading, from 152nd to the end of 165th page; Grammar, 3rd chap. of Fowler; Arithmetic, from 354th to the end of 357th page; Algebra, 44th and 45th Ex.; Euclid, from 32nd prop. to the end of B.1.

RAILROAD MEETING AT KEENE.—According to written instructions we have advertized the Railway Meeting, to be held in Keene, on the FIRST Wednesday of June. We see that our cotemporary, the Review, advertizes it to be held on the Eight of June. Will some one who knows the correct day for the meeting be kind enough to inform us which date is correct.

Since the above, Mr. Miller informs us that it is the first Wednesday, Consequently the first day of June, as stated by us.

The way Sir. Francis Hincks calculates revenue Sums. Due by the Great Western Railway, and also the money borrowed for the construction of the Intercolonial, are added in as revenue. The Trade Review says:

"The items referred to are the sum repaid by the Great Western railway Company, and the premium obtained on the International Railway Loan. The former can in no sense be considered as derived from revenue, being merely the repayment of a loan previously made. The debt was an asset to the old Province of Canada, and has since been realized. No business men would for a moment think of treating money so obtained as revenue. If he could only balance his loss account in this way he would be pretty certain to come to the conclusion that he would have to economize somewhere.

An old pensioner cut his throat the other day in Toronto because he could not obtain admission to the hospital. (They wanted 40 cents a day for his treatment.) After the deed he remarked grimly, "They'll have to let me in now!" So they had, and he died there, and all for the want of a free institution.

Lemay's Poem.

The blasphemous and treasonable piece of poetry published by this half-crazy French man has been vindicated by him in a pure letter that breathes even a worse spirit, if possible, than the poem itself. The mildness of our Government is seen from the fact that this vile calumniator is not summarily punished. Even the New York Tribune, with all its Anglophobia, expresses itself thus:

"A young poet of much ability, Mr. L. P. Lemay, who has translated Longfellow's Evangeline, and who fills the post of Librarian to the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, has come out with a poem to which the speech of Mr Charles S. Spencer, the most daring blasphemy of Brick Pomeroy and the bigoted intensity of a Southern paper writing on Stanton, are mild, pious and endurable."

—A very disgraceful affair has come to light recently, in connection with the Newfoundland House of Assembly. It seems that an illegal adjournment of the House had taken place to serve some petty purpose of the ministry, and to destroy all record of this, a falsification of the journals was made by order of the Speaker. The whole affair came up before the Supreme Court in Newfoundland at the beginning of this month, in connection with an election trial, and the results of the inquiry were scandalous in the extreme. The Newfoundlander thus speaks of it:—"The Attorney-General, foreseeing the fatal effect of the evidence of these officers (the Clerk and the Solicitor of the House) anticipated it by admiting himself the fact of adjournment which Mr. Speaker Bennet had concealed. The Solicitor and Clerk of the House then deposed on this point to the same effect, and by their cumulative testimony produced in the Court a demonstration of unspeakable disgust and abhorrence, which a nefarious scandal could alone have excited in presence of the judical bench. Here at last was the dawning guilt of falsification wrenched from their own mouths through the very duplicity of their Speaker, the clear averments of their officers, as if a just but relentless fate would have it that none but themselves should fill up their cup of infamy, and excite retribution in the face of an outraged public.

It is understood that Col. Feilden, of the 60th Rifles, will go to the North-West as a Brigadier-General commanding the force, and Colonel Wolseley as Commander in Chief. A small force of eighty Engineers, and a battery of Steel Guns will accompany the expedition, as well as a portion of the 60th Rifles.

Dr. Oliver, of the 60th Rifles, inspects the volunteers at London. Dr. Woodfall, of the Artillery, performs the same duty in Toronto. Lieutenant Lake, of the Royal Artillery, goes to Collingwood to survey the millitary stores. The boats have been completed.

It is said that Messrs. Allan have been induced by Mr. Foy, Emigrant Agent to the North of Ireland, to put on the new clipper ship Strathbane, on the route between Liverpool and Quebec, at the following low rates of passage:

Adults, 12 years and over.....	£4 0 0
Children between 1 and 12 years.	2 5 0
Infants under 1 year.....	0 18 0

No second cabin accommodation. A liberal bill of fare.

The Strathbane is built of iron, and has only made one voyage.

NEW PROBLEM.—To find a rectangular field such, if one chain be added to its length and one chain to its width the area is a perfect square number; or if one be taken from its length and one from its width the area is a perfect square.—JOHN IRELAND.

ACCIDENT.—There was an explosion in Dr Ayer's Laboratory, yesterday, which caused some excitement in the vicinity. Ayer's Pills are manufactured under an enormous pressure in cylinders, like cannon, which proves too weak for the compressed force, and burst with terrific violence. Fortunately, the pieces do not fly far, so that no one was ever hurt by them. The action is more like ice than powder but it makes pills which all the world acknowledge are PILLS. [Daily Journal Lowell.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF is a household medicine, which no prudent family, that understands its value, will ever be without. It instantly arrests pain, and its effects, as a diffusive stimulant, anodyne, nervine in cholera cholera morbus, bilious colic, spasms, fits, malarious diseases, &c., transcend those of any other preparation known. As an external application for burns, wounds, scalds, bruises, &c., it has no equal. Pass on.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R. R. R. Sold by Druggists.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia: in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevator according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

PILES are a very common affection, three being but few persons who are not troubled with them at some period of their life. The disease exists in small tumors in the rectum or about the anus, which are divided into, first, those which are owing to a distended state of the veins of the veins of the part, and, second those which present the character of a solid tumor. When the tumors are within the rectum, they are called internal piles; when without and around the anus, external. When they discharge blood they are termed bleeding piles, and when no blood appears, blind piles. Dr. J. Briggs' Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction; All who have tried it, do not hesitate to say it is superior to anything they have ever used for this disease. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, No. 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that the great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C W Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kemp, Coulter, Osmond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

I Dinna Ken.

Twas just about the gloamin' hour
When Jessie gaed down
Across the fields to meet wi'ane o'the lo'ed the best of a'

The trysting tree soon cam' in view,
And there stood Willie Glen,
Who asked if "he might prov her now?"
Said she "I dinna ken."

Now, Willie he had lo'ed her long
Wi'heart baith leal and true;
He kissed her lips sae saft and sweet,
And praised her een o'blue;

Then speir'd when she would mak' o'him
The happiest o'men?
Young Jessie, blushing, hung her head,
And said "I dinna ken."

"Ye ken my father's auld and frail;
His mother's died and gane;
I couldna hae the heart to lea'
The puir auld man alane.

"But, Jessie, lass, he'll aye find room
Within our "but and ben,"
"Then here's my hea'-my heart's your ain,
And mak' me Jessie Glen."

Mourn.

Mourn for the thousands slain,
The youthful and the strong,
Mourn for the wine cup's fearful reign,
And the deluded throng.

Mourn for the tarnish,d gem;
For reason's light divine,
Quenched from the soul's bright diadem,
Where God had bid it shine.

Mourn for the ruined soul—
Eternal life and light,
Lost by the fiery maddening bowl,
And turned to hopeless night.

Mourn for the lost—but call.
Call to the strong, the free;
Rouse them to shun that dreadful fall,
And to the refuge flee.

Mourn for the lost—but pray,
Pray to our God above,
To break the fell destroyer's sway,
And show his saving love.

I Worked and Earned It.

A few weeks ago, a gentleman living in an Eastern town was called out of his bed one morning by several vigorous raps upon his front door. Hastily dressing himself, he responded to the call, and found standing as uncouth, roughly clad boy, with an axe upon his shoulder, who, bashly thrusting his head into his pantaloons pocket, drew out a small roll, and handing it to Judge H—said:

"There's seventy-five dollars, which I want you to put in the savings bank," and bashly turned on his heels and started away.

The Judge, slightly disconcerted at the curious proceedings, scarcely knew what to say, till at length recovering his wits, he cried after the boy: "Stop! come back here. How did you come by this money?"

"I worked and earned it," sir. My time was out last night and I got my money. I've got a job chopping, which I began on this morning, and I thought I'd leave the money here as I went to work, and then it would not take up my time this evening when I went to study."

"What is your name, my boy?" asked the Judge.

"I wrote it on the paper that I wraped the money up in," shouted the little woodchopper as he passed on to his work.

That boy's note for a thousand dollars due ten years hence would be as good as gold. If he has his health, he will be worth double that then.

He is begining the right way. The very day his time was out for the summer he entered upon another job, and immediately placed the money he had worked for where that would work for him; and with no encroomy of time which is to be praised more than his wise forethought with regard to money, he could not endure to have a moment devoted to anything but his book when the long evenings came.

Five years from to day, with a few hundred dollars which he has earned by work his chances for place in the business and political world will be far greater than those of the speedthrift boy who, born with fortune, begins with fortune, begins without knowing the worth of money, and instead of going up goes down.

A Hardshell Baptist preached in Washington City lately, and took for his text, "God made man his own image." He then commenced, "An honest man is the noblest work of God." Then he made a long pause, and looked searchingly about the audience, and then exclaimed. "But I opine God Almighty hasn't had a job in this city for nigh on fifteen years."

Not long since, an elderly lady entered a railroad carriage at one of the Ohio stations, and disturbed the passengers a good deal with complaints about a 'most dreadful rheumatis' that she was troubled with. A gentleman present, who had himself been a severe sufferer with the same complaint, said to her, 'Did you ever try electricity, madam?' 'I tried it, and, in the course of a short time it cured me.' 'Electricty!' exclaimed the old lady; 'yes, I've tried it to my satisfaction. I was struck by lightning about a year ago, but it didn't do me a single morsel o' good.'

A Paris paper tells this story—Prince Napoleon is the person alluded to:—"A mighty prince was very fond of travelling by land and by water. He was continually absent from home, which did not not prevent him from loving his delightful family circle—an adorable wife and charming children—when he returned from his distant excursions. Of course he could not travel alone. So he had a traveling companion in petticoats. One day as he disembarked in a small town, Duke of [let's call him a duke] asked the mayor to send to his wife inParis a telegram announcing his safe arrival. The excellent mayor, who was innocence itself, sent this telegram: 'Duke de—, accompanied by his maid of honor, reached — to-day in excellent health.' Luckily the telegram stopped in time; did not get to the Duchess—"

Mixture for preserving leather—The "Shoe and Leather Reporter" gives the following preparation for insuring the durability of leather, and making it pliable. It consists of four articles, tallow, soap, rosin and water. These ingredients are prepared as follows:—Twenty-one parts of tallow are melted in a vessel, three parts of rosin added, and the two, when melted mixed well together. In another vessel seven parts of good washing soap are dissolved in seventy parts of pure rain water; after it is dissolved and the mass heated to the boiling point, we add the parts prepared before, let it boil once more gently, and the preparation is ready for use. It is especially adapted to boots, harness, leather and belting.

Bubbles.

Oh, when I was a little lad—
He care my moments to absorb—
It was the greatest joy I had
To launch the rapousaceous orb,
But now the load of manhood's troubles
Makes me heave sighs and not blow bubbles!

Yet manhood has its hollow gauds,
And blows and puffs to make them bigger;
While each observant friend applauds,
Although he cuts an antic figure—
His chin's adorned by manly stubble,
Yet, like a child, he blows his bubble.

Then, ah, my friend, be warned by me—
Abjure a a pipe—or only smoke one!
Let speculative scapeouds be,
For Fortune's joy is to provoke one;
And she for that tricks redoubles
If she can catch one blowing bubbles.

To purse your lips up ne'er begin,
To swell the fine prismatic globe;
For when 'tis with inflation thin,
A breath will pierce it like a probe,
And you, as smarting eyes you rub, 'll
Exclaim, "Confound that bursted bubble."

A. D. Richardson tells this incident of his Pacific railroad experience on the descending grade:

At Elcho, the other evening, three freight trains stood upon the main track, when word come flashing over the telegraph from the Superintendent: "A locomotive and tender, without steam up and with nobody on board, have broken from a freight train, and started down the grade." Ah, then and there was hurrying to and fro! In a few minutes came a second message: "She has just passed Castle Rock Station." Never were three trains got off upon a siding with less delay. Then the workmen piled sleepers high upon the track. Lest even that should not stop "her," and she should do murder further down the road, they tore up the rails below. Just as this was accomplished, she came in sight. She shot through the sleepers like a bullet through a pine board, sending them flying in all directions, and darkening the air with splinters. But at the broken track she jumped up and down with vexation, and finally plunged angrily, head foremost, into a hill-side. She ran twenty-six miles in twenty-nine minutes—the best time yet made upon the road!

A Country youth, who desired to know how to become rich, sent a quarter, in answer to an advertisement, and received the the following valuable receipe: "Increase your receipts and decrease your expenditures. Work eighteen hours a day, and live on hash and oat-meal gruel."

A case tried in Quebec before the Recorder on Friday last is of great importance at the present time. Two apprentices being volunteers were called out for service, when their master hauled them up for absence from work without permission. His Honor held that articled apprentices have no power to volunteer their time and services, and he fined the two boys, and ordered them to return to their work.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this extensive remedy has acquired in almost every section of this country, from its many cures of scrofulous complaints, is unparalleled by that of any other medicine. Its virtues are known to every one, and its cures are too numerous to require publication here. Many of these are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. However these the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterous affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for enfeebling these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where this disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Blamuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is nowise injurious to any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

He then confidently related their mutual love, and the physician being a good-hearted man, and besides finding his advice in vain, consented to use his interest in behalf of the anxious lover. Behold Antonio as the attendant of the physician, waiting on the invalid with basket in hand. The new medicines had a wonderful effect; the physician received a rich present from the father; and in taking leave of the attendant, the fair Fineta slipped a third ring on his hand. So tenderly grateful was the attendant, that he did not perceive the entrance of the father. Antonio was thrust out of the room rather quicker than he expected, and the fair Fineta was commanded, with a stern rebuke, to her chamber. The old lady, thereupon, asking her husband the cause of this sudden change in affairs, he replied:

"Wife, I fear much we shall have some troubles with our only child, if we do not marry her forthwith. Here I found the doctor's man on his knees, feeling her pulse, I presume, that he may steal away her hand."

"Husband," replied the lady, "thank Heaven he was no lover in rank. I heard that she bestowed a ring on that gardener, who was feeder of flowers."

THE TRUE
THEORY OF PURGATION APPLIED TO THE Liver, Kidneys, Skin,
STOMACH & BOWELS.

DR. RADWAY'S
PERFECT
PURGATIVE PILLS,
Perfectly Tasteless,
ELEGANTLY COATED.

Dr. Radway has completed one of the most extraordinary discoveries in medical chemistry—in the combination of vegetable substances for the purposes of PURGATIVE, APERIENT, COUNTER-IRRITANT, ALTERATIVE PILL that can be [illegible] ALL the Elements of the [illegible] to take in the most [illegible] mucous membranes of the stomach, bowels, rectum, kidneys, bladder, uterus or parts adjacent, in cases where the mucous membranes of the internal viscera are suffering from Ulceration, Inflammation, or from

LIVER,
Gastric, Biliary, Pancreatic Complaints,
DR. RADWAY'S PILLS

supply the only Vegetable substitute for

CALOMEL or MERCURY.

In RADWAY'S PILLS you have one medicine that will secure quicker, more thorough and better results than will be given in from three or more different prescriptions in the medical practitioner. As a proof of this You are seized with a Bilious attack! Doctor prescribes blue Pills or Calomel and, some Drastic Aperient Pill or Powder to work off the effects of the blue Pill: this prostrates you, and a tonic is next given, or a gentle aperient, whereas ONE DOSE OF RADWAY'S PILLS will do all the work that the above mentioned prescriptions are given for, without running any such town-constructing or salivating the patient.

RADWAY'S PILLS.

In RADWAY'S PILLS the [illegible] of purgatives is purified—not alone to the effect of lessening the fæces and excrementa from the bowels, but those humors that are absorbed or stopped in their passage through the Nose, Ankles, Lungs, and all sporadic and secreting functions; for all these excrementious secretions belonging to the skin, liver, lungs, kidneys, are interrupted in their passage they become poisons of every and most pernicious and must be purged from the living body through their proper channels: hence the purgative quality of RADWAY'S PILLS extend to the removing of the skin, KIDNEYS, LIVER, &c. Whereas not one of the advertised Pills claim to act beyond the bowels.

How to Take Radway's Pills.
THEIR DAILY USE.

In doses of one or two pills by all persons of a full habit of body, subject to grief most rapid blood to the head, palpitation of the heart, and all the nervous [illegible] they keep the blood from becoming congested or clogged up in the blood vessels, they will equalize its circulation, and prevent sudden attacks of apoplexy, disease of the heart, consumptions. Persons who will take one of these pills every day will not suffer from Hæmorrhoids, Dizziness, Hysterics, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Piles, Pains around the Heart, and a hundred other dangerous symptoms.

DYSPEPSIA.

One of RADWAY'S PILLS, two or three hours before dinner, taken daily, will keep the system free from DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION CONSTIPATION, COSTIVENESS, &c.

Bear in Mind,

RADWAY'S PILLS are the only purgative that will secure an alterative, diuretic, sudorific, aperient and tonic influence.

They are the only vegetable substitutes for Calomel or Mercury.

They are elegantly Coated with Gum, perfectly Tasteless, and free from Smell.

SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

POISONED BLOOD.

When the blood becomes poisoned by the presence of an excess of BILE, UREA, CARBONIC ACID, and the excrementious excretions of the SKIN—SORES, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, SPOTS, ULCERS, and HUMORS of all kinds break out on the surface.

Dr. Radway's
Sarsaparillian
Resolvent,

When the blood is in this condition, should be taken alternately with RADWAY'S PILLS. The influence of Cure is to free the blood from the presence of these poisons, and restore the functions of the Liver, Skin, Lungs, Kidneys, Bowels to their healthy duties. This desired, which RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, aided with Radway's Pills, will soon secure—a Cure will be the result.

A BAD SKIN.—Spots, Blotches, Sores, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules, Tetters, are caused by impurities of the Blood. Checked Perspiration, Sluggish Circulation of the Blood in the capillary vessels of the Skin. One or two doses of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT will rid the skin from these irritants, and insure all a beautiful, clear complexion

UTERINE TROUBLES—Prolapsus Uteri, Falling of the Womb, Ulcers, Tumors, Cancers, cured by the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

Ladies suffering from Chronic Leucorrhœa, Weakness or Irritation of the Bladder and Urinary Passage, Difficulty of Passing Urine, &c., will be relieved by a few doses of RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, and cured by a few bottles.

PARALYSIS CURED.

DUNDALK, Harrison Co., Ohio.
May 12th, 1865.

Messrs. RADWAY & Co.

Gentlemen.—The RESOLVENT has effected a cure in a very severe case, that of a Mrs. Lemuel Johnston in this neighborhood. She was confined to her bed and had lost the use of her legs:—four bottles of the RESOLVENT has restored her, and last Sunday she was able to attend church. The demand for the RESOLVENT has increased, and we deem it advisable to order in time.

Yours truly, R. PITTIS & SON.

SARSAPARILLIAN.

So quick is RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN or RENOVATING RESOLVENT in entering into the circulation, that it may be detected in the urine, sweat, and blood in ten minutes after it has been taken.

A Remedy so quick in entering into the circulation and communicating its curative properties to RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN supplies a want that has ever existed.

RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian or Renovating Resolvent furnishes positive evidence of its Purifying and Fruitful efficacy in curing persons considered Impotent and Barren, who have since married and had children.

STOP THE WASTE OF LIFE!

RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent will stop the waste of the life-fluid that is so many persons follows a discharge of water through the urine. It is a positive cure for Spermatorrhœa, Nightly Emissions, &c.

SYPHILOID ULCERS.

Sores of all kinds. Tumors, Cancers, Sore Heads, Sores on the Tongue, in the Mouth, in the Glands of the Throat, cured by Radway's Sarsaparillian.

IMPOTENCY.

The best evidence we have of the powerful Purifying, Tonic, and Fruitful properties of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent is that it has cured persons who were verging on Imbecility and Insanity through self-Abuse, with continued drains of the seminal fluid, and are now cured by the Resolvent, when prepared under the old process in 1850, who have married and have children now living. A few bottles will restore the vigor of life.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Sills, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Madoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1846 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

The Country Cousin, or I Saw Esau Kissing Kate.

'Twas just about a year ago,
When I was down at Gleister,
I found a kiss, but now, alas!
I find that I have lost her.
I'm sure I never can forget,
The happy days that we saw
Before the day on which we met
Her Country Cousin Esau.

Spoken,—For it was on that unlucky day that—

Chorus—I saw Esau kissing Kate
And the fact is we all three saw,
For I saw Esau, he saw me,
And she saw, I saw Esau.

I'd rather go without my beer.
Or even get my sconce hurt.
Than ever go again to hear
A Crystal Palace Concert,
For I took Kitty there and then,
Unfortunately she saw
The horridest of country-men,
Her Country Cousin Esau,

Spoken—But even then I never thought I should have to say—

Chorus—I saw Esau, &c.

She introduced this man to me,
And soon behind a statute,
I saw what made me audibly
Sing out, "I'm looking at you."
'Tis sad indeed to have to state,
What poor unlucky me saw,
For there was Esau kissing Kate,
And Kate was kissing Esau.

Spoken—Yes! they had commenced the business arithmetically, they began with simple Addition, went right through Subtraction, and would have gone on to Multiplication, had it not been that—

Chorus—I saw Esau, &c.

Is this why you both quitted me?
Said I you little tartar!
Oh yes! said she the rule of Three
Is not so good as Barter,
I went to school with him, she said,
And used to play at see-saw,
So if you please I think I'll wed
My Country Cousin Esau.

Spoken—Well, said I, I came to the concert, but this is a concerted piece I didn't expect to see. I scarcely knew what to say, for it was enough to disconcert me altogether when—

Chorus—I saw Esau, &c.

I went away in quite a pet,
And toddled home to tea, oh!
For I could see that their Duet
Had put me up a tree Oh!
But still my sorrow wasn't great,
When in the papers we saw,
That Mr. Esau'd married Kate,
And Kate had married Esau.

Spoken—Oh! yes! I've quite recovered now, and am courting a prettier girl, but still it is not pleasant to reflect upon the day when—

Chorus—I saw Esau, &c.

Literature.

The Three Lovers.

A very handsome youth, with more charms in his appearance than money in his pocket, became most desperately in love with the daughter of a rich neighbor. The father of Antonio was dead, and the young man had speedily dissipated the little fortune that then became his only portion; however, his worst enemies never urged anything against Antonio, excepting a few extravagances and follies, which, perhaps, were mere failings to an otherwise amiable character. Finetta, the object of his affections, was the only daughter of a rich noble, who perceiving in Antonio poverty alone, forbade his daughter, under severe penalties, to think of Antonio, when, in fact, she could think of nothing else. Love is the parent of more inventions than necessity: Antonio put on the humble attire of a gardener, and so got employed in the pleasure-grounds of the rich father. Never were the flowers known to flourish so luxuriantly, for were they not to form boquets for Finetta, who was never seen without a fresh one in her bosom. She took lessons besides of the gentle craft. How happy they were in such employment! The mother of Finetta complained that the embroidery frame had been deserted!

"When," exclaimed her daughter, 'could I hope to equal the beauty of natures lovely tints? Embroidery is an unhealthy employment! Whereas this balmy air, with the odour of the flowers and shrubs, inspirits my very heart!"

The mother looked at her daughter's blooming face, and was satisfied; but the father was not so easily duped, for it happened that while there was a nosegay in every room there was seldom a salad for the table. The master noticing the neglect, Antonio, only replied by pointing to a beautiful bower he was then constructing. He was abruptly dismissed on the spot, and driven out like Adam, from his paradise of flowers. "In truth," said the mother "when my daughter thinks proper to give rings to a gardener, it is high time he should go elsewhere to wear them."

Finetta took to embroidery very dilligently, and became as pale as the Lily she worked.—The father proposed falconry. Love transforme Antonio into the master falconer; he rides by her side; what are the charms of horticulture to that of galloping in the breezy air? The roses bloomed with fresh vigour, and the chaste falconer, in gazing on them, forgot to recal his birds from their flight. The falcon was taken from his finger, on which Finetta contrived to place another jewel as a consolation for his disgrace. After this, there being neither gardening nor fowling to amuse her, the languid girl fell into a state of melancholy, that quite disconcerted her parents. They sent for a noted physician, in spite of the fair one's opposition, who understood her ailment well enough to know that he could offer no remedy. His visits raised the anxiety of the watchful Antonio, who contrived to waylay the physician, and learned that he could do nothing for her.

"Be of good cheer," replied Antonio, "I know well her complaint, and if you will let me have the opportunity, she shall soon eat, drink, and sleep, and be merry and glad, instead of the poor, moping, pining patient, you prescribe for in vain.

He then confidently related their mutual love, and the physician being a good-hearted man, and besides finding his advice in vain, consented to use his interest in behalf of the anxious lover. Behold Antonio as the attendant of the physician, waiting on the invalid with basket in hand. The new medicines had a wonderful effect; the physician received a rich present from the father; and in taking leave of the attendant, the fair Finetta slipped a third ring on his hand. So tenderly grateful was the attendant, that he did not perceive the entrance of the father. Antonio was thrust out of the room rather quicker than he expected, and the fair Finetta was commanded, with a stern rebuke, to her chamber. The old lady, the cause, asking her husband the cause of this sudden change in affairs, he replied:

"Wife, I fear much we shall have some troubles with our only child, if we do not marry her forthwith. Here I found the doctor's man on his knees, feeling her pulse, I presume, that he may steal away her hand."

"Husband," replied the lady, "thank Heaven he was no lower in rank. I heard that she bestowed a ring on that gardener, who was fonder of flowers than vegetables; and it is much to me if she has not bestowed some sweet looks, at least, upon our last falconer; he would never have dared, otherwise, to look first, as I saw him look at her one morning. 'Ah!' quoth she in grief, 'would we had let her have Antonio; my heart misgives me that we shall be brought to disgrace on her account. If he is poor, he is nobly born, and have we not money enough for both?"

Her husband wisely agreed in these sentiments; but would Antonio be recalled? The old lady promised to undertake this, and after a proper lecture to her daughter on her indiscretions, she expressed her sorrow, and dutifully wrote a letter to her lover, who came joyfully in his own character as a gentleman, and was most graciously received. When the wedding day arrived, and the company assembled, the mother perceived, with surprise, three handsome rings, belonging to her daughter, on the hand of the intended bridegroom; before she could ask any questions, Antonio took Finetta by the hand—

"I think, madam," said he to the lynx-eyed mother, "that I can guess what is passing in your mind. The three rings which have caught your eye, were really bestowed by your daughter on a gardener, a falconer, and the attendant of a physician; but least any one should impeach the honour and constancy of the donor, know that I am ready to maintain it, in token of which I have put on these several jewels."

The hearts of the parents were so greatly lightened by this confession, that the marriage was made doubly a time of rejoicing, and the fair Finetta had never cause to regret the triple wooing of the gardener, the falconer, and the physician's attendant.

Life Race.

If the reader ever witnessed a horse race he knows what importance the jockeys attach to a good start. None of the drivers want to be over a neck behind in going over the scratch. And if the the horses are not well together in coming up to the scratch, the judges call the drivers back and oblige them to try again, till they all get off together, without any one, having the advantage. Now, human life, as far as the great worldly aim is concerned, is nothing but a race. As fast as we get old enough to "go it alone," we enter the race for the great prize of wealth—that is, the means of securing comfort, hapiness, enjoyment and freedom from the treadmill of toil! In that case success depends as much upon a good start, as in the case of a horse race. If a young man begins his career by a course of industry, frugality, and correct habits generally he is sure to win an independence. By following this course from the first, he soon accumulates a little money, and this accumulation helps him along. Money that he puts into the savings bank draws interest and swells his fund After a while his accounts become large enough to allow his starting a business for his son, or else to to buy a home in the suburbs where filthy tenement houses and exortionate landlords are unknown. Thus he goes to independence, surrounds himself with luxuries, and passes his after years in ease and contentment.

But how small a proportion of young men start right in the race of life. Walk out in the evening and you will find knots of young men on every corner of the business avenues. Go into the rum shops, beer saloons, and places of ill-repute, and you will find them there. Their money goes more foolishly than it would if they threw it into the river. They contract bad habits; they get into bad company; and, in making this mistake they get a bad start in the life race. Young men who start thus, are not likely to ever reach an independent position.—Habits formed in the period when plastic youth is changing into the solid iron of manhood, are but rarely altered. Bear in mind young man, that your status in life depends upon your conduct now. You cannot win the race without a good start.

STATISTICS OF HUMAN LIFE.—According to a French statistician taking the mean of of many accounts, a man 50 years of age has slept 6000 days, worked 6500 days, walked 800 days, amused himself 4000 days was eating 1500 days, was sick 500 days, etc. He ate 17,000 pounds of bread, 16000 pounds of meat, 4400 pounds of vegetables, egg and fish, and drank 7000 gallons of liquid, namely, water, coffee, tea, beer, wine, etc., all together. This would make a respectable lake of 300 square feet surface and 3 feet deep, on which a small steamboat could navigate. And all this solid and liquid material passing through a human being in 50 years! Verily, there is after all some truth in the story of the ogre who drank a lake dry, to catch the fugitives that were sailing over it. Any man can do the same—only give him time!

This estimate is, however, made for a Frenchman; for an American we have to modify it, by lessening the number of days he devotes to amusements, and in place of this substitute 1000 days for quietly speculating how to get more of the almighty dollar 1500 days for travelling by steam and horse power, and 200 days in waiting for means of transportation. The latter number is by no means over estimated for the inhabitants of New York, Philadelphia, or other large cities of the Union.

CHEAP AND FINE VARNISH FOR WOOD.—That beautiful varnish applied to Connecticut clock-cases, wooden picture-frames, and other cheap objects, is in appearance equal to the elaborate finish of the finest furniture, such as pianos, etc. It is made by mixing two pounds of copal varnish with half an ounce of linseed-oil varnish. The mixture is shaken often to mix it well, and is then placed on a warm spot. The wood to be varnished is prepared with a thin coat of glue-water, dried slowly, and rubbed down with fine pumice-stone or something equivalent. In light-colored wood, a light pigment, such as chalk, is added to the glue-water; in dark wood, as equally dark pigment is added. When ready, the articles are varnished with the above mixture, and, after drying, rubbed with a solution of wax in ether, thereby acquiring a high polish.

Human Bones as Fertilizers.

THE manufacturers of phosphate of lime for artificial manure generally employ for the purpose the bones of animals. In this country, the battle-fields of the late war have furnished large quantities of horses bones. Sometimes human bones are accidentally collected among the rest; but the care and reverence with which the dead on both sides have been buried prevents such unpleasant occurrences almost entirely. Not long ago, much indignation was caused in England by the report that cargoes of human as well as animal bones were shipped from the Crimea to the British manufacturers. How much foundation there was to the story we do not know. Certainly the objection of civilised people to seeing the remains of their fellow-citizens or ancestors brought into commerce is most natural.

The English manufacturers appear not to be satisfied with the supply of the bones of animals, either because it is not adequate to the demand or because its scattered sources and the consequent expense of collection leave too little margin of profit. They have at last found a country rich in bones, and possessed of a population not too scrupulous to sell them. The mummy-pits of Egypt, containing thousands of tons of the bones of the ancient Egyptians, are now "worked" on a large scale. The bones are dug out, cleaned and sifted, packed in bags or bundles of two hundred pounds each, slung to the side of the camels, and transported to Alexandria, where they are shipped to England. The business affords a brisk trade to the modern Egyptians, and employs a large number of the population; in justice to whom we should add, that they are probably not descendants of the venerable worthies whose relics they put to such a base use.

It is serious to reflect that the phosphate of lime which once formed the frame of a member of the Egyptain aristocracy should after a quiet repose of some thousand years, enter upon a new career of usefulness in a distant land as an excellent manure for turnips and other vegetables, which may in turn furnish the necessary phosphate of lime to give backbone to the British aristocracy. Great Cæsar stopping a hole to keep the wind away is nothing in comparison!

What future tradesman will grow rich, and what future turnips thrive, we wonder, on the tombs of Westminister and St. Paul's or the vaults of Cologne Cathedral, or the ghastly sepulchre of the Capuchins at Rome? The more carefully the bones of the great or the sainted are preserved, the less likely, it would appear, are they to "rest in peace."

How Port Wine is Made.

The friends of temperance have commenced the prosecution of liquor-dealers in Stonington, Ct., under the law against the sale of adulterated wines. Professor Silliman, of Yale College, the State chemist, was called in to analyze the "stuff." We give the following as the result of his investagation: The liquor was turbid, heavily laden with sugar or molasses and some coloring matter; contained 21 per cent of alcohol; over 10 per cent of sugar or molasses; about 100 grains of sulphuric acid to the gallon, part of it free, as oil of vitroil, and part combined in alum; oxide of lead, or litharge, in poisonous quantities, or about 45 grains to the gallon. The alcohol had an acid taste, and the coloring matter an offensive odor. The liquor was stronger of lead than most waters that are poisioned by it. Such are the liquors and adulterations drank by Connecticut tiplers. Death by slow poison. "Good creature of God." Is such wine suitable either for man's table or the "Lords Table"?

Man's Life.

Some modern philosopher has in given in these eleven lines, the summary. In this the young mother may see the destiny of her little son, that she thinks is to be the noblest man of the age. The foundation of his character is laid in the first seven years, remember, and these are the mother's special term of power. Be sure that your teachings will lead him in the right way; and make him in the last seven years turn to your teachings as the best wisdom of his life:—

7 years in childhood's sport and play... 7
7 years in school from day to day.....14
7 years at trade or college life.....21
7 years to find a place and wife 28
7 years to pleasure's follies given.....35
7 years to business hardly driven.....42
7 years for some wild goose chase.....49
7 years for wealth a bootless race.....56
7 years for hoarding for your heir.....63
7 years in weakness spent and care.....70
Then die and go—you should know where.

TO PROMOTE THE SPROUTING OF SEEDS.—According to the English Repertory of Patent Inventions, oxalic acid promotes the sprouting of seeds, so that seeds thirty to forty years old will germinate by its application. The method is to soak the seeds for one to two days in a solution of oxalic acid till they commence to sprout, when they are taken out and planted in the ground. Another means was found by the Count von Sternberg, who exhibited in 1834, before the meeting of German savants in Stuttgart, perfect grown ears of wheat raised from seeds taken from Egyptian tombs, and therefore at least two thousand five hundred years old. All attempts to make them sprout failed till he placed them in fatty oils before burying them in the earth. They sprouted very slowly, it is true; but finally produced ears pendectly identical with the Talavera wheat.—Coffee-beans, in which, as is well known, it is very difficult to cause germination, may be made to sprout in twelve hours, if placed in a tumbler with water, to which an equal part of spirits of ammonia has been added, the glass being covered with a piece of wood, and exposed to a moderate heat. In twelve hours the roots are seen to project to a distance of several lines, and even the commencement of leaf formation may be seen by careful observation.

LITTLE THINGS.—Spring are little things but they are sources of large streams; a helm is a little thing, but it governs the course of a ship; a bridle bit is a little thing, but see its use and power; nails and pegs are little things, but they hold the parts of a large building together; a word, a look, a smile, a frown, are all littlethings, but see powerful for good or evil. Think of this and mind little things. Pay that little debt; if it is a promise, redeem it—if it is a shilling, hand it over. You know not what important events hang upon it. Keep your word sacred—keep it to children; they will mark it sooner than any one else, and the effect will probably be as lasting as life. Mind all the little things.

HEALING OF SMALL WOUNDS.—Do not use plasters, salves, or washes; bring the edges together, keep out dust but permit free access of air, and trust to the healing powers of nature.

Hamilton, Ontario,

MANUFACTURERS OF THE CELEBRATED

LOCKMAN SEWING MACHINE,

Take pleasure in announcing that the popularity of the Sewing Machine manufactured by them is still on the increase. They are now turning them out at the rate of 600 per month, and yet have been compelled within the last two weeks to increase their facilities to a capacity of one thousand per month.

The Lockman Machine, from its capacity to sew the heaviest fabrics with linen thread, as well as the finest cambrics with No. 150 Cotton, is pre-eminently the Farmer's Favorite Family Friend.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

The manufacturers challenge the world to produce its equal, and yet its price is from Forty to Fifty per cent. Lower than that of any other first-class Shuttle Lock-stitch Sewing Machine.

EVERY MACHINE IS WARRANTED.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1870.

SIR GEORGE CARTIER is hopeful that the business of the session will be so far advanced as to permit members to return home in a day or two.

We have, in vain, looked through all the Reports for a motion, or a word, or a nod, or a cough, or a hem, from Peterboro members. Where are they? where have they been? what did they say? are they among the volunteers for Red River, or have they returned home quietly and unheard of? We once heard of a Legislator who rose in the House once and said—"I conceive, gentlemen, I conceive," and then sat down and said no more, when an honorable member remarked that said honorable gentleman had conceived three times and brought forth nothing, not even a mouse. Have our honorable members from Peterboro not even conceived a single idea in four years.

We have been requested to state that neither the Mills nor Woolen Factories on the Dixon property are likely to be idle for even a day.

Messrs. Munroe and Dawson are still prepared to do gristing as usual, and:

Mr. D. Brook is working away in his Woolen Factory, in his usual line. The report of the Review, that these works were likely to be idle for a period, was not well founded.

Mr. Mowry, we are glad to say, is also preparing to commence work in his Machine shop, and in a few days will be ready for his customers again. He has suffered considerable damages from the floods, no doubt, but a good season's sales will, we trust, refund him. It is a public loss when men, who spend their means in building up any branch of industry suffer.

Mr. Roger's Mill will also be at work in a few days, as the water is going down rapidly.

Mr. G. Brook's Carding and Woolen Factory, Ashburnham, will, we believe, commence in time for the wool season, so that in all probability another week will witness all the machinery on the River near the town in full blast again, when all will go on in the usual way. The world is not so bad as some would have us believe, and is never so bad but that it could be worse.

The following section of a statute of Canada has been brought to our notice, and as it may be of use to some parties to prevent their getting into trouble, we give it in full:

"Whosoever sends, delivers, or utters, or directly or indirectly causes to be received, knowing the contents thereof, any letter or writing, demanding of any person, with menaces, and without any reasonable or probable cause, any property, chattel money, valuable security, or other valuable thing, is guilty of felony, and shall be liable to be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for life, or for any term not less than two years, or to be imprisoned in any other gaol or place of confinement for any term not less than two years, with or without hard labor, and with or without solitary confinement."

We understand that some of the Warsaw people are not satisfied with a war of words, but threaten litigation. We have concluded therefore, not to permit the appearance of any more communications from that place, till all return to a more amicable state of mind.

Mr. Fitzpatrick threatens litigation for over charge of costs, and there are rumors that Mr. Wason was brought before the Magistrates, because he refused to make an abatement of an account.

Suppose the former charge proven, which can hardly be done, as the whole costs did not exceed lawful charges, all that could follow would be a trifling fine. But if it should be proved that menaces, or threats of prosecution were used to Mr. Wason, Penitentiary may be the result, as may be seen by the 43 section of the Act of 1869—respecting larceny and similar offences.

Personal.—We learn with regret, that Mr. R. Rutherford is about to leave us to take up his residence in Kingston, at least for a time, and perhaps permanently. Mr. Rutherford will undoubtedly be missed by us. He is a very active Sabbath School worker, and by his faithful and energetic labours as Superintendent of the Wesleyan Sabbath School, has raised it to be the most successful Sabbath School in town. In the cause of Temperance, Mr. R is an unwearied and uncompromising member—using his time, money and labour, to aid this good work a'so. As a member of the Mechanic's Institute, he was also active, and has done a great deal to encourage it. It is true that others have worked with him, but we only speak of him at present, and of his usefulness as a member of Society, as we are satisfied that Mr. Rutherford will still be the same wherever he goes.

At a meeting of his fellow-teachers in the Wesleyan Sabbath School, the following resolution was unanimously carried:—

RESOLVED,—That the teachers of the Peterboro Wesleyan Sabbath School, cannot allow Mr. Rutherford, their Superintendent, to sever his connection with their School, without expressing their deep sense of regard and esteem which they entertain towards him, founded not only on the eighteen years of faithful service which he has rendered to the Church by his efforts as Superintendent of the School, but on his urbanity and uniform courtesy of deportment towards them, and his tact and ability in the discharge of his official duties. The teachers, while they regret his departure, tender to him their heart felt wishes for his future happiness and prosperity, and trust that the rare talent which he possesses, may be utilized for the benefit of those among whom he may hereafter dwell, and above all, for the honour and glory of God.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

The following resolution was unanimously carried at a meeting of the Peterboro' Mechanics' Institute, on Friday evening last, the 6th instant:

Moved by Mr. J. Bertram, seconded by Mr. J. Erskine,—That the Directors of the Mechanics' Institute hear, with regret, that their Secretary, Mr. R. Rutherford, is leaving town. We take this opportunity of tendering to him our hearty thanks for the time he has devoted to the furtherance of the objects of the Institute, and sincerely wish him every success in his new sphere of life."

As a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. Rutherford was an earnest co-worker with others who take a lively interest in the progress of christian principles among our young men.

Mr. Rutherford, we believe, is about to open an office in Kingston in connexion with the Canada Life Assurance Company, and we are sure that he will make a good citizen, a reliable agent, and efficient worker. He has our best wishes for his success in his new sphere.

Another Old Pioneer Gone.

One after another the men who first settled and cleared up this now prosperous fertile country, are passing away. It is only one week or so since we had to notice the decease of Mr. Dickson. This week we are called upon to chronicle the decease of Robert Laing, Esq., of North Monaghan, at the advanced age of 96 years.

Mr. Laing was born in Berwickshire, Scotland, almost a century ago, as will be seen by his advanced age at his death.—When only a youth, the troubles of '98 agitated Ireland, and the uneasiness of continental Europe led to fears, and eventually to war and to all its consequence, Mr. Laing entered the army, serving in the 18th Huzzars. He was not more than eighteen at the time. His first services to his country were rendered in the sister isle, but not long after he accompanied Moore to Spain, and was with him in his retreat; took part in his last and famous victory at Corunna, and was present when his commander's remains were confided to the soil of the Peninsula. He was also at Badajos, Salamanca and Toulouse, and in nearly every skirmish up to the time of Napoleon's abdication. In these engagements he received a severe hurt, and in consequence was discharged with a pension. He then returned to his native place, and settled down on a farm left him by his father. In 1830 he came to Canada, and settled on the farm in N. Monaghan, on which he resided till his decease—on Monday morning last. He has therefore been in Monaghan 40 years, and must have seen some of the ups and downs consequent on the clearing, fencing, &c., of his farm, and the inconvenience of early entering the bush, without roads or bridges, or means of conveyance other than oxen, sleds, &c.—for he must have been some time in Monaghan before he thought it advisable to purchase horses for farming purposes. He lived long enough, however, to see the wilderness blossom like the rose; the once unbroken forest a well cultivated country, and to see instead of the "blaze", cattle track, or crossway, macadamized roads and railroads pass his very door.

Mr. Laing was a man of an iron constitution, very intelligent and communicative upon all subjects, but less so on the scenes in which he so early engaged. He was highly respected as a neighbour, and was a useful member of society; lived to a good old age, and saw his sons and sons' sons and daughters grow up around him.

He has left three sons, Robert and William, both respected by their neighbours, the former being councillor in his township,—and one son in Western Canada. One of his daughters removed with her husband to New Zealand several years ago; the other surviving one is married to Mr. Robert Goodfellow.

His remains were followed to their last resting place on Tuesday by a large number of relatives and friends.

Ottawa.

Matters Are more lively at the Capital. John A. is an invalid, and Sir George Cartier has matters all his own way.

Messrs. McDougall and Howe have had some lively times, and some strong hits.

Mr. McDougall accused Mr. Howe of being traitor to the British Government, and Howe retorts. Here is the little episode:

Sir J. A. Macdonald said the Bill had been hurried. Every source of information had been availed of by the Government, including the delegates appointed by the people.

Mr. Mackenzie—No!

Sir J. A. Macdonald said they were!

Hon. Mr. McDougall—They were appointed by Riel and his gang.

Sir J. A. Macdonald—Of course, if the hon. gentleman wishes to lose that country he will pursue this course.

Hon. Mr. McDougall—We shall not lose it, if you do your duty.

Sir J. A. Macdonald—I do mine as well as you do yours where you were.

Hon. Mr. McDougall—You have not up to the present time, according to public opinion.

Hon. Mr. Howe asked if it was dishonourable to treat with those people, when his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, when at Pembina, had written a sneaking, cowardly, and infamous letter, asking Riel to meet him on the sly. (Great excitement.)

Hon. Mr. McDougall said he would give to the hon. gentleman the answer that he deserved. His answer was that he knew that in Government of Canada there was a traitor to the British Crown. (Great excitement.) A man with whom he was obliged to hold official correspondence, who had done all that he could to destroy the character and authority of the Canadian Government in that country; and in order to guard against the attacks of the hon. gentleman, he thought it his duty to give an invitation to the leader of the rebels to hold a conferrence with him as to the cause of disturbance, so that it might be in his power to say that he had exhausted every expedient within his reach. (Hear, hear.) He knew the reception he would meet from the hon. gentleman, and he called the attention of the House and country to the fact that the hon. gentleman had sneered at every loyal representative of Canada in that country. (Hear, hear.) By doing so he had shown where his sympathies were to the extent of his small power. He encouraged treason and was now ready, it would seem, to maintain and to sustain rebel authority in that country. (Cheers.)

How dignified and decorous Mr. Howe must be, and Mr. McDougall must now feel convinced of the friendship that existed between the leaders of the colation and himself. They bought him by tempting him office, and tell him he is a sneaking coward, and an infamous letter writer. The lion and the lamb do not yet herd together peacefully.

GRACE EGERTON had a crowded house on Monday night in the Music Hall.

PROFESSOR STONE is still in town, and holding meetings in the Music Hall. He promises presents on Friday evening.

A delegation from British Columbia, is expected at Ottawa, in a few days, to negotiate for a Union with the Dominion. They are expected about the 24th instant.

We understand there is difficulty in getting a working committee, to make arrangements for any emigrants who come amongst us, who is to blame.

John A McDonald has been seriously ill during the week, so much so, that fears for his recovery were entertained. He is convalescent, and in a fair way of being again restored to his usual health.

57TH BATTALION.—Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 companies of the 57th Battalion will assemble at the Drill Shed this Thursday evening, at 7 o'clock, for Battalion drill and march out, accompanied by the band.

KEENE.—The Railroad meeting will be held on the 8th of June, at Keene. We first received instructions to advertise it for the first day of June; This week we have been instructed to say it will take place on the eighth day of June, at the same hour and place.

The great difficulty of making small change is now being felt here, as every where in the country. Surely Sir. Francis Hincks can supply small silver enough, to meet the wants of the mercantile community. Not even shinplasters, as they are called, can be obtained, both silver and paper must be scarce at Ottawa.

LITERARY CLUB.—A meeting of the members of the Peterboro' Literary Club, will be held in Mr. O'Donnell office, on Monday Evening, next, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose or electing officers for the current year, and the transaction of other important business. A full attendance is requested.

DUMMER.—A Subscriber insists that his communication shall appear, what good it will do remains to be seen; evidently now, as the matter has been dropped, and this will only revive recriminations and counter recriminations, we do not feel under any obligations to re-open this vexed question. We hope if anything more comes that we will be saved the trouble of cutting it down. Communications to be read at all, must be short.

COUNTY COUNCIL.—The June Session of the County Council will be opened this year on the Seventh of June, in order to make early provision for the roads and bridges damaged by the late floods. The idea is a good one, as by making appropriation work can be proceeded with at once, and that is much needed, as just now there is no communication with the east but by Keene.

HONORARY DEGREE.—We observe by the Montreal correspondent's dispatch to the Leader on Friday last, that the honorary degree of L. D. S. was conferred at a recent meeting of the Dental Board for the Province of Quebec, held in Montreal on the following gentlemen from this Province, Drs. B. W. Day, of Kingston, and J. O'Donnell, of Peterborough, President and Secretary of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, of Ontario. Dr. C. S. Chittenden, of Hamilton, also had a similar honor conferred on him.

A NIGHT WITH THE BARDS OF AULD SCOTIA. We have much pleasure in announcing that Mr. Galletly, of Port Hope, will favour the inhabitants of this Town, with a grand Concert, on Friday the 20th. inst., in the Music Hall. Mr. G. requires no recommendation from us, as he lately was amongst us, and delighted, all who heard him sing the songs of his native land, we have not yet received full particulars, as we only heard of his coming two were going to press. In next we shall refer to the matter, in the mean time all may hold themselves in readiness for a treat.

A young woman in Woodstock, lately committed suicide. The old, old story, love—seduction—suicide. When will public opinion assert itself in righteous indignation, and cause the perpetrators of shame or disgrace to become the objects of loathing and scorn. When will women rise in their might and reject with scorn and contempt the seducers of their sisters? Should they not form associations for punishing every sneaking coward, who through false promises takes advantages of woman's love, and then leaves her to become her own murderer, or the prey of other scoundrels like the seducer.

We have received a communication from Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, who acted as Coroner at the inquest of McQueg. In it he denies having refused publication of the evidence. As we are anxious that the whole truth should appear, we have written for full information, and next week will give the Doctor's letter and whatever remarks may, in our opinion, appear necessary. We believe several parties were summoned to appear before some of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace yesterday, on the charge of selling liquor without license, and perhaps all the suppressed evidence may yet appear,—when no one will try to prevent it.

The murder of several English Gentlemen, travellers in Greece, by Greek Brigands, is likely to have grave political consequences, at least, so far as the future of Greece is concerned.

Town Statistics.

We give below a few items of the value of property on the assessment roll of the town for 1870. By comparison it will be seen that real estate is on the increase, about $38,763; Personal property has decreased $13,470; and taxeable Income $89,506. The population of 1870 is considerably larger than in 1869, the figures being in 1870 5251, and in the previous year 4960.

There are great preparations being made for building this year. A new building is in course of erection on George Street, where Messrs. McKellar and Cameron kept before the fire. Sheriff Hall is also excavating, so as to erect a large building on Hunter Street; and there are other buildings in other parts of the town. The Board of School Trustees are preparing to erect a new building for a Primary School, on the ground, west of the present Union School buildings.

There is hardly a house in town without an occupant, and rents are in consequence high. This should cause owners of property to build a few comfortable dwellings, as if they do so, they will very soon be occupied, and be a good investment for surplus capital.

There are no signs of decay in town, and with a prosperous season for farmers, mechanics and merchants will be likely to do as well as in former years.

Miscellaneous Items

The latest number of the New Nation contains a report of Riel's Parliament. They were busy making a Constution. Not one word was said in the debates about the worthy delegates to Canada. President Riel and Chief Justice Ross took certain formulated oaths of office. Every male 23 years is to vote. Mr. W. Coldwell, like Ross, an ex Canadian reporter, has been appointed Clerk of the Assembly.

A London telegram of the 22nd, intimates that Gen Lindsay is to command the expedition to Red River, and that he will remain as Governor till order is restored. We understand that Col. Woolsely was to command and to assume the Governorship, but both officrs are well known and can be relied upon to do their duty, and what is more they both have a just appreciation of the metal of our volunteers, and the men have confidence in them.

PARSONAGE BURNED. The Belleville papers say that a disastrous fire occured in that town on the morning of the 3rd inst., by which the Episcopal Methodist parsonage, occupied by the Rev. Joseph Wild, was entirely consumed. The flames spread to the house occupied by Mr. Wm. Templeton causing great damages to the building and furniture. The Rev. Mr. Wild's loss is estimated at $4,000. A satchel containing $198 of church funds was also lost. The house was insured for $600 in the Imperial; books $250, clothing $250, and furniture $500, in the Western.

THE GUIBORD CASE.—It will be remembered that one Guibord, a printer, and a member of the Institute Canadienne Montreal died in that city in November last, and for being a member of the above institution, was refused the burial rites of his (Catholic) church. Guibord's wife petitioned the Civil Court in order to have her husband receive the rites of burial and Judge Mondelet has at length decided in her favor, condemning the church to administer the usual rites. It is stated that the judgement is to be appealed from.

There is a communication from President Reil to the H. B. Company, which demands, as conditions of carrying on their business in the North-West, that they acknowledge the Provisional Government and lend to it £3,000 sag.; with the guarantee of a further sum of £2,000 stg.; if the arrangements with Canada fall through; that they furnish £4,000 worth of provisions and goods at current prices for the military; that they immediately put their bills in circulation, and that they consent to the retention of a portion of goods by the Government in the meantime, as also the buildings now occupied by Provisional Government.

ON THE WAR PATH. Some sixty of the Indian braves of Caughnawaga, who were recently engaged by the Government for civil service corps work, in the expeditionary force for Red River, left the Bonaventure Railway station this morning by the 8.30 train for Toronto. They are to be sent on to Fort William and will be employed in managing the boats and in the transport service of the expedition. We understand that early next week 100 men more will be engaged, and follow those who left this morning. The Government require over 200 of these Indians, and those selected are all young men, a few of them being from the Lake of Two Mountains.

MANITOBA is an extraordinary name, and unintelligible until after explanation. That explanation tells us that the word means in the Indian vernacular "Speaking God." The majority of Christains, so far as we know, consider gods of this description as idols. So it remains a question as to why we should go out of our own way to perpetuate their idolatrous fame. And, even supposing the ethical question decided, what about the etymological? Manitoba—the Speaking God! What god and where speaking! Why should the North-West become a god among the Confederation any more than the North-East or elsewhere? And what language is this god to speak? Is it Gaelic, or Hindoo, or Latin, or Spanish, or French, or Sir George Cartier? A recent discussion in the Commons has given dignified occasion for all and every one of these questions, pending an answer to all of which we are inclined to maintain the happy belief that about as ridiculous a name as was available has been chosen for a province which we don't want to make ridiculous. "Sense sacrificed to sound" makes a poor epitome of the policy of British North America Spectator.

THE HUDSON'S BAY CO.—The Ottawa Free Press learns from an authentic source that for four years past the Hudson's Bay Company have refrained from hoisting the British flag at Fort Garry; that on the Queen's Birthday, last year, a number of the British residents proposed to get up a loyal demonstration, and suggested to the officers of the Company to hoist the British flag, and were answered with a shrug of the shoulders. The same day the Company's steamer was on the Red River, on its way to the Fort, and the officers were asked to hoist the British flag; the reply was a scornful laugh. The company's officers refused the loan of one of Her Majesty's guns to fire a salute; but on the 4th of July a gun was furnished to a number of American residents to celebrate that day, when thirteen rounds were fired in honor of the thirteen original States, and thirty-seven rounds in honor of the existing States. To the honor of Dr. Schultz it is stated that he erected a flag-staff on the corner of his property, from which the British flag floated on the 24th of May, although early in the morning Alfred Scott, the present delegate of Riel to the Dominion Government, hoisted a Fenian flag on the staff in the absence of Dr. Schultz; which some of the loyal inhabitants tore down and substituted the Union Jack. These facts, the Free Press states, are notorious. They place our Government in a very humiliating position, in view of the treatment which Riel's delegates have met with.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr RADWAY Pills (made from Vegetable extracts prepared in vacuo) taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite promote digestion and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidney etc.

These pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating druggs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purges from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humors. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subjected to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowels, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks: and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become as healthy and vig rous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, had suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation: six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago; Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R. R. R. Sold by Druggists.

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The memory of Dr. Wister is embalmed in the hearts of thousands whom his Balsam of Wild Cherry has cured o coughs, colds, consumption, or some other form of Pulmonary disease. It is now over forty years since this preparation was brough before the public, and yet the demand for it s constantly increasing.

THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN CHANGED by the use of the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of Iron) from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women, and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial. For Dyspepsia and Debility it is a specific.

PILES may be caused by anything that will irritate the lower bowels, producing a determination of blood to the rectum,—as drastic cathartics, from the extensive use of which in the disease has become very common, habitual constipation, straining at stool, diseases of the liver, much riding on horseback, tight stays, sedentary habits, high living, heating, irritating food, &c. Dr. J Briggs' unrivalled Pile Remedy, remarkable for its tuperior excellence should be used for this painful affliction. All who have tride it do not hesitate to recommend it in the highest terms. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr J Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N Y. and, No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

INVERTED TOE-NAIL is a very painful disease generally the result of wearing tight shoes, and is usually accompanied with more or less inflamation, and, at times; ulceration. The great toe is the one usually attacked. At first there is only a little uneasiness, which ceases when the shoe or boot is removed from the foot after a time the part becomes tender or inflamed, and the corner or edge of the nail is found pressing deeply into the flesh, while the whole nail is narrow, and much arched across. Ulceration evedutually ensues, proud flech appears, and the pain becomes very severe. For the sloughing off of the proud flesh, healing the ulceration, and eventually curing the toe, use Dr. J. Briggs' Modern Curative, according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J Briggs & Co., Proprietors 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

MONEY MAKER THE MARE CO.—This is an old and true saying, and it is equally true that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" will make all pains go from the body and cures Bowel complaints, Tooth Ache, Head Ache, Sprains, Bruises, &c., sooner than anything else discovered. Price 25 cents a bottle.

For Colds, Cough Bronchitis, Consumption and all Diseases of the Throat Chest and Lungs Dr. J. Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer is a certain and reliable Remedy. Sold by Druggists.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.—We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and readily that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Dooley's Condition Powders and Arabian Horse Remedy. Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

BUCHAN'S WAFERS, (The great public Remedy) have now been in use over twenty years, hence cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been throughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all bronchial affections One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "inquisitorial archer," consumption is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is DR WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of it is great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Select Poetry.

Little Ella Redmond.

Little Ella softly slumbers,
In her quiet, lonely bed,
While the breeze, in gentle numbers
Waves a requiem o'er her head.

Oft the drops of weeping sorrow
Shall be shed upon her tomb;
She on earth has no to-morrow,
Her's is but a silent room.

Those bright eyes are closed forever
On earth's sorrows, on its fears;
Grief shall dim their brightness never,
They shall never know sad tears.

Mother, when thy days are saddest,
When thy home is all too hushed,—
For a footstep when thou longest,
And thy heart is sadly crushed,—

When you think, with anguish weeping,
Of a little clasping hand,—
Of a little form now mouldering,
Ella in a spirit-land.

Oh! then kneel with adoration
Unto Him who spared your child
Through the skies of three sweet summers,—
Let that soothe your sorrow wild.

Jesus said of little children,
That they passed to heaven's own land;
Mother, there's a little angel
Waits to clasp her parents' hands.

Look out for the Colorado Potato Beetle.

The potato growers in the extreme western part of Canada must not be surprised if they find a new and most destructive insect appearing upon their plants this year. The hosts of the terrible Colorado Potato Beetle are steadily marching on in their journey from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic Ocean; they have already made their way into the neighboring State of Michigan, and either this summer or next we may expect to hear of them invading our shores along the River St. Clair. Should this insect obtain a footing in our country, we can assure our readers in all earnestness that they will find it a far more grievious nuisance than any horde of Fenians with which we have ever yet been threatened, or are likely to be troubled with; the ravages of this small foe would undoubtedly prove a far greater source of pecuniary loss and inconvenience to the whole country than any raid of these barbarous ruffians. To be "forewarned" is, to a great extent, to be "forearmed;" let us then be on the lookout for these creatures, and be prepared to repel their attacks whenever they begin to advance upon our land. Kill every one that comes, and show them no mercy, is our advice to our readers; do not wait till they get a foothold in the country, but destroy them immediately upon their arrival; and let those who live along the St. Clair, keep a good lookout for their appearance.

The history of this insect is rather a curious one. For many years it was known to feed upon a wild species of potato, peculiar to the Rocky Mountain region; but when civilization, and the consequent culture of the tuber, advanced so far westward it soon acquired a taste for the cultivated varieties, until in 1859, by advancing eastward, from one potato patch to another, it reached a point one hundred miles west of Omaha, in Nebraska. In 1861 it began to appear in Iowa; in 1863 and '64 it crossed the Mississippi River, and invaded the State of Illinois. At that time the late Mr. Walsh predicted ("Practical Entomologist, vol. 1") that it would in all probability "travel onward to the Atlantic, establishing a permanent colony wherever it goes, and pushing eastward at the rate of about fifty miles a year." This prediction has so far been filled in a remarkable manner; in 1866 it invaded Southern Illinois; in 1867 it passed into Western Indiana and the south-west corner of Michigan; in 1868 it had reached Ohio, and the south shore of Lake Superior; in the north-western corner of Michigan last year it went over a great portion of that State, and therefore this year we may expect it in Canada.

This insect when seen in a cabinet, is a very beautiful creature; its body is cream-colored, its wings of a bright rose color, and its wing-covers are adorned with five deep black stripes. Farmers and gardeners, however, whose potato crops are blasted by it, do not usually discern its beauties, but consign it to a speedy and unhesitating destruction. It feeds upon the plants in both its larval and perfect states, driving everything before it. Should any of our readers have the ill fortune to find it in their fields this year, we beg that they will send us some specimens, in order that we may give a further and illustrated description of them.—"Canada Farmer."

Always went Double-charged.—A good story is told of one George Snaffer, who many years ago lived in Portsmouth. Once he had been to Newcastle, gunning, and was coming home with his game-bag empty, and weary, when he stopped at the toll-ho se for a moment's rest. Says he to the toll-keeper:

'There's a fine flock of ducks back here in the pond; what will you take and let me fire into them?'

'Can't do it,' replied the toll man. 'I don't want to have my ducks killed.'

George put his gun in the toll-house and walked back to take another look at the ducks. When he was gone, the toll-man who was a wag, drew the shot from the barrel, and then replaced the gun. George returned, and then renewed the question.

'Well, said the toll-man, 'though you are a good shot, I don't believe you could hurt them much. Give me a dollar, and you may fire.'

The dollar was paid, and quite a party, who had gathered around, went back to witness George's discomfiture. He raised his gun, fired, and killed nine of them.

'The deuce!' cried the toll-man. 'I took the charge out of the gun.'

'Yes,' said George, 'I supposed you would. I always go double charged.'

Curious Event.—A diffident Hertford bachelor went to the sea-shore, in August, to seek refuge from the loneliness of his celibacy, and one dark evening, enjoying the breeze on the piazza of his hotel, happened to take a seat that had just been vacated by the husband of a loving wife, with whom the happy man had been chatting. In a few minutes the lady returned, and mistaking the stranger for her husband, lovingly encircled his neck and gave him an affectionate kiss, with the remark, 'Come darling, is it not about time to retire?' He did not faint, but the shock was very severe.

'Oh, Jacob!' said a master to his apprentice boy, 'it is wonderful to see what a quantity you can eat.' 'Yes, master,' replied the boy. 'I have been practising ever since I was a child.'

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

My Old Home,

BY GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

And I have come yet once again to stray
Where erst I strayed in childhood. O'tis sweet
To gaze upon the dear old landscape! Here
My thoughts first revelled in the wild delight
Of new existence! Here my infant eye
First dwelt on Nature in her loveliness,
The golden flash of waters, the bright flowers
That seemed to spring in very wantonness,
From every hill and stream, the earth's green leaves,
The moonlight mountains, the bright crimson gush,
That deep'ning streamed along the skies of morn
And the rich heavens of sunset! Here I loved
To gaze upon the holy arch of eve
In breathless longing till I almost dreamed
That I was mingling with its glorious depths,
A portion to their purity; to muse
Upon the stars through many a lonely night
Till their deep tones of mystic minstrelsy
Were borne into my heart; to list at morn
The gentle voice of song-birds in their joy
Lifting on high their matins, till my soul
Like theirs, gushed forth its music; and to look
Upon the clouds in beauty wandering up
The deep blue zenith till my heart like them
Went far away through yon high paths to seek
The home of thought and spirit in the heavens.

What Common Dust Consists of.

Mr. Dancer, by washing out with distilled water 25 cubic feet of air from the city of Manchester, England, obtained about 150 drops of a liquid in which the microscope discovered 250 organic beings in the one-thousandth part of a drop, or some 40 millions in the 150 drops. These bad, of course, been taken up by the water from the 25 cubic feet of air, which is only the small quantity inhaled by one man in ten hours. Besides these beings, there were also many other solid dust-particles. The scientific officers of the Board of Health in New York have lately done the same thing with air obtained from our streets, from our theatres, etc. They took simply the particles of dust settling on glass, and this showed by microscopic examination that the street dust is the finer the higher it is collected, and consists of sand from quartz and feld-spar, carbon from coal or lampblack, fibres of wool, cotton, etc., of different colors, epidermic scales, granules of starch, wheat, tissues of plants, hairs or down, and different kinds of pollen. Fungi were very abundant; and when water was added, and the contents exposed to heat and light for half a day, thousands of animalculae made their appearance, while the fungi sprouted and multiplied, and formed a perfect microscopic aquarium, full of vegetable and animal life.

Curious Incident.—A curious incident occurred at Potsdam, at the time of the visit of the members of the Statistical Congress. Among the persons who were walking in the gardens of the Palace of Sans-Souci, was a Prussian Officer, who entered into conversation with an English savant. The latter, after a time, could not avoid expressing his surprize at finding a Prussian officer speak English so well. The officer replied that there was nothing astonishing in that fact, as his wife and his mother-in-law were both English. 'Might I venture to enquire the name of your mother-in-law?' said the English savant.—'Queen Victoria!' replied the officer, who was the Crown Prince of Prussia.

Affecting Instance of Reverse of Fortune.—At a London police court, lately, a man was charged with stealing lead from an empty house. He admitted to the constable who apprehended him that he had taken the lead, and added, mournfully, 'It certainly is a very paltry act, for in my time I have broken into and robbed jewelers' shops. See what it is to be reduced.

Coleridge, the poet and philosopher, once arriving at an inn, called out, 'Waiter, do you dine here collectively or individually?' 'Sir,' replied the knight of the napkin, 'we dines here at six.'

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 8, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R.R.R. Sold by Druggists.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally accepted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative PILL. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know this it cured them: those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that when it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitations of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Ayer's Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those woo have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HUNT'S EXPIRE HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong, Pure and Rich Blood — Increase of Flesh and Weight — Clear Skin and Beautiful Complexion, Secured to ALL.

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT

has made the most astonishing cures. So quick, so rapid are the changes the body undergoes under the influence of this truly WONDERFUL MEDICINE, that

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, uncured and badly treated Venereal, in its many forms, Glandular Affection, Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Nodes in the Glands and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Face, Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Erysipelas, Pever Sores, Scald Head, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Black Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all Weakening and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease, its potent power to cure them.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent excel all known remedial agents in the cure of Chronic Scrofulous, Constitutional Skin and Syphilitic diseases, but it is the only positive remedy for Kidney, Bladder, Urinary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Stoppage of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's disease, Albuminuria, and in all cases where there are Brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the white of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid dark, bilious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and where there is a pricking, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the Small of the Back, and along the Loins. In all these conditions Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, aided by the application of Radway's Ready Relief to the Spine and Small of the Back, and the Bowels regulated with one or two of Radway's Regulating Pills per day, will soon make a complete cure. In a few days, the patient will be enabled to heal and discharge his water naturally without pain, and the Urine will be restored to its natural clear, and amber or sherry colors.

THE WASTES OF THE BODY

are supplied with new, healthy and vigorous blood, that furnishes sound structure. Hence all suffering from WEAKENING DISCHARGES, either MALE or FEMALE, of the Womb, Uterus, or other organs, whether Leucorrhœa, Spasms, or Krupties discharges of every kind, or from violence of "Self-abuse," from the Genital Glands, or Venereal discharges, or Ulcers, or Sores, through the reparative process of Radway's Sarsaparillian, are arrested, and the ruptured organs healed.

THE TRUE THEORY OF CURE.

Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies the system, through the blood, nerve, sweat, and structure-making constituents, with Tissue-making, Flesh-making, Heat or Calori, and Fat-making elements. All of its constituents are sanative, purifying, and strengthening. A Repairs, Heals, Restores, and draws out of the body the products of Decay and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, WHITE SWELLING, DROPSY, SYPHILIS, CANCERS, TUMORS, &c., are all of a scrofulous diathesis, and as such are within the curative range of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent!

1. That Scrofula, by whatever name designated, is the result of deposits from the blood, induced or caused by Chronic inflammation. That those deposits take place when the blood is poor, weak, watery, and incapable of holding in solution its proper constituents, or from the presence of some virus or poison in the blood, as Mercury, Calomel, Corrosive Sublimate, which is the Corrosive Chloride of Mercury, or other agents given in medicine and which enter largely in the common advertised Sarsaparillas, NOT ABSORBED OR CHANGED FROM THEIR NATURAL CONDITION.

2. That unless the repairs or nutriments are greater than the waste, that decomposition and decay will supervene, and the powers of life become exhausted.

3. That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medication that exhausts the system, or fails to nourish the blood, the only medium through which the vital forces are preserved, and on which the growth of the body depends.

4. That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before possessed or known to exist in medicine; that this new found principle in Chemical science, which has been brought to such a perfect system of cure, is exhibited as follows:

1. Its great power in assimilating the food in its first stage of distillation in the process of digest

MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Select Poetry.

The following is a copy of a petition of the Ladies attending a Singing-School in a neighbouring parish about ten years ago, and which was addressed and presented to their Minister, who was the Superintendent of the School:—

'Observe us ladies! innocently sweet,—
We're fair white paper—an unsullied sheet
On which the happy men whom fate ordains,
May write their names, and take us for their pains.

FRANKLIN.

WE, Reverend Sir, the ladies of K————d,
To this petition fully have agreed;
And now to thee with due respect we send
Our humble wishes, which we here have penn'd;
We trust, kind sir, that we will ne'er neglect
To pay to thee our homage and respect,
But still remember, and still keep in mind
Thy gratitude, likewise thy friendship kind
Evinc'd to us by thy paternal care,
Thy anxious wish and ever fervent prayer,
That in virtue's paths we always may abide,
And ever seek Jehovah for our guide;
In order, too, that we may sing the praise
Or Sion's King in more melodious lays
Thou hast brought one skill'd in the music art,
That he to us instructions may impart,
For which we all in concert did agree,
Our grateful thanks to tender unto thee.

But we, kind sir, now hasten to declare
To thee, the sum and substance of our prayer,
And fondly hope that you will kindly grant
To us the favour which we so much want;
Know then that we, by experience have found,
That too large buildings very much injure sound,
For we observe our voices scarcely ring,
When we attempt the gamut notes to sing;
And the small pews you know will but admit
A few of us together close to sit,
So that straggling voices everywhere you'll hear,
Which much annoy our worthy teacher's ear.

We therefore trust, this matter you'll arrange,
And that e're long the singing-school you'll change
Into another and a smaller place,
Where we condens'd may occupy the space,
And there male and female mixed will combine
Their dulcet tones, in singing lays divine.

Another motive we would now submit,
And stronger too, we freely do admit:
'Twas it alone that first did us incite,
This our petition to compose and write;
'Tis matrimony,—O most endearing word!
By us long sighed for, and by us ador'd,
The thoughts of which run strangely through our heads
In waking hours, and night-dreams in our beds:
And which, indeed, we candidly confess,
Do sometimes give us trouble and distress,
For 'twas with sorrow we of late did hear,
How few you married during the last year,
And if a moment you would deign to look,
Just o'er the pages of your marriage book,
They would at once with accuracy define
How few you join'd in eighteen-thirty-nine.

In order then this grievance to remove,
To foster wedlock and encourage love,
If you, kind sir, our suit will not deny,
We'll strain each nerve and ——— could
So at the altar we may shortly stand,—
Be join'd by thee in Hymen's plastic band,

But, sir, remember, all our art is vain,
If where it is the singing still remain,
For not alone the beauty of the skin,
Can charm the hearts of those we fain would win,
Nor the bright sparkling of the dazzling eye,
Though the gazel's in lustre it may vie:
Nor the rich tresses of the glossy hair,
In dangling ringlets, black, or brown, or fair,
But also manners mild and dispositions kind,
For these adicate a cultivated mind.
But how can they know, unless by a guess,
That we such intrinsic virtues do possess?
Or that instinct would teach them by some distant views,
As we and they are plac'd in separate pews.

O then! we pray, let not thine anger burn
Against us, sir, nor this petition spurn;
Weigh well the motives that did first induce
Us to convene, and this petition to produce.
Call to thy mind the joys of the nuptial state,
Which you in your dinner speeches did relate,
Think on the pleasure that will still ensue,
Not alone to us, but also, sir, to you,
When each of us for better or for worse
Is join'd to one 'of splendid home and heavy purse.'
Then annual visits if you'll kindly please,
Perform a rite and eat some bread and cheese,
Will strengthen more our fellowship with thee,
So that good attendees on thy word we'll be.

We therefore hope the grievances express'd,
By thee will soon be remedied and redress'd,
But thou'lt continue to direct and rule
The affairs and actions of the singing-school;
That in this parish, long you may abide,
Still be our shepherd, and still be our guide,
And that thy people still may thee obey,
We sir, the ladies, evermore will pray.

Edith's Trial.

BY ELIZABETH YOCATT.

Where are those fair dreams, that made
Life so beautiful at first?
Where the many fantasies
That young hope so fondly nurst?

L. E. L.

'So Edith Graham is going to be married at last!' observed a young lady of a certain, or rather, an uncertain age.

'At last!' repeated the person addressed, 'why she is only two and twenty.'

'Three and twenty, next month. I ought to know, for we were at school together.'—She forgot to add that she left that school a full-grown woman only a week after the young lady in que-tion arrived, a happy, careless child. 'Somehow I never thought Edith would have married. What a complexion she has!'

'But what beautiful eyes and teeth!' interrupted her companion.

'That accounts for her laughing so much'

'Edith has a merry heart.'

'I hear it is an excellent match.'

'Yes he seems very much attached to her.'

'But he is rich.'

'I believe so.' The last speaker moved impatiently on; but Hester Browning stood still. The lamp light fell upon her pale features with their cold classical outline, still beautiful but for the scornful lip and furrowed brow. A history was written there and those who hated would have pitied her, perhaps, could they have read it. Disappointment and sorrow had chilled the warm current of her womanly sympathies, and made her what she was. In those schooldays to which she had alluded, Hester Browning was a different being. Then she had fancied the world better, now she thought it far worse than it really was—a common error. No one loved her; she froze them by her harsh repelling manners. Flowers not unfrequently have been found buried beneath the snow; but it is cold work digging for them, and few care to take the trouble.

Hester browning had fallen into a reverie, and no one carred to interrupt it. The music and dancing seemed a long way off, and so were her thoughts. Groups passed and repassed like a dream. She was aroused at length by a laugh full of music, and with that wakening came the vague consciousness that that musical laugh was directed against herself. But the mischievous eyes which met hers were immediately cast down, and nothing could be more demure than Edith Graham's little curtsey, and timidly expressed hope that Miss Hester was enjoying herself.

'I suppose you are quiet tired with dancing so much?' observed the mirth-loving girl.

'On the contrary, I have not danced at all!'

'Why, how is that, Miss Hester?' asked Edith, with a well-affected air of surprise.

'For the best reason in the world—because no one has asked me.'

Edith coloured; she was not ill-natured, only thoughtless—only thoughtless—alas, alas! half the evils of life arise from thoughtlessness.

Edith Graham was the eldest of three sisters. They were all sitting together, and a pleasant group to look upon: none could be called strictly beautiful, but all were radiant with the sunshine of youth and light-heartedness.

'So I hear that you are going to be married, Edith,' said Hester Browning.

'Yes, it is all settled, and I am so happy. Hester sneered.

'I wonder Charles is not here. I hope nothing has happened.'

'Silly Edith!' said her sister Letty; 'what should happen!'

'I don't know; but I am never easy when he is away. It seems as if may happiness were too great to last. Did you ever feel that, Miss Hester?

Letty Graham smiled involuntary; and Hester, perceiving her, smiled also—a cold, mocking smile; but she answered not a word. At that moment Edith's sisters were led away to join the dance, but no one ventured to ask the young betrothed, and no one dreamt of asking Hester Browning. As they sat together in that quiet nook, Edith, in the intervals of peeping out from between the folds of the crimson curtain every time a fresh arrival was announced, began to open her heart to her old friend.

'Oh, Miss Hester, it is such a pleasant thing to be loved. You cannot think how pleasant!'

'Is it?'

'I seem to have lived quite a new life since I knew Charles.'

'Pshaw!' interrupted Hester, and her look and tone fell coldly on the bounding heart of her companion. 'We shall see how it will be this time twelvemonth. Everything looks bright when it is first new.'

'Oh, Hester! But here comes Charles, just in time to scold you.'

Mr. Seymour had immediately perceived that beaming and now blushing little face; but he paused, nevertheless, to exchange greetings with one or two of his acquaintances before he approached her. Edith introduced him to her friend, and they shook hands; after which Hester moved away, and left the lovers together.

'Miss Browning is very rich, is she not?' asked Mr. Seymour, as he leant on the back of Edith's chair.

'Yes very.' ——— could love her, if she would let me—but I oftener find myself laughing at her.'

'But you should not laugh at her, Edith. It is not right.'

I know it is not,' replied Edith, penitently, 'and I will try not to do so any more.'

'We must ask her to come and stay with us sometimes, when we are married, as she is such an old friend.'

'I should like it very much,' replied Edith, shyly, and not exactly knowing what she said. The words 'when we are married' filled her mind with happy images.

That night the wedding was finally arranged, and the day fixed. Mr. Seymour declaring that he would not be put off any longer.

Hester Browning watched them from her remote corner. She did not like the countenance of the Bridegroom-elect; but then she was always finding fault. She told some one that he looked as if he were acting a part; 'but after all,' she added, 'he may not be worse than other men.'

Three weeks after the scenes above recorded there was a grand wedding at St George's Church, and Edith Graham became Mrs. Seymour. Before the honeymoon had waned she was weeping in her husband's arms the sudden death of her father. It was Edith's first sorrow; but when she looked up into the beloved face which bent over her so kindly and pityingly, she did not feel it as deeply as she would otherwise have done. That first sorrow was the beginning of sorrows—the cloud before the storm.

Ever since Edith could remember, she had never thought of, nor wanted for money. Mr. Graham lived in what is called 'good style,' give dinner parties, and kept a carrige. Every one imagined that his daughters would be heiresses. Charles Seymour had taken it for granted, and the old gentleman certainly encouraged the idea by smiles and significant gestures, if not in actual words. It was discovered, however, upon his death, that he had lived up to his income, and left his haughters portionless. Edith was grieved when she heard it, but only for the sake of her sisters. She never thought of herself. She had a comfortable home, and a kind husband, she said; but what would they do? What would become of them? She expected that Mr. Seymour would have suggested something—that he would have anticipated her heart's wish; for surely he must have guessed it; but his face was buried in his hands, and he spoke not a word.

'Charles,' said his young wife, after a pause, and more timidly than she had ever yet addressed him, 'would you mind, dear, my asking Letty and Julia here for a few weeks, until we can think of something.

'Am I expected to keep all the family?'

'Only a little while' dearest, until we can arrange what is to be done. But you will have to keep me, you know, 'as long as we do live!' and she laughed as she tried to catch a glimpse of his averted countenance.

'I would rath-r that they did not come,' said Mr. Seymour, gravely. Edith acquiesced with a sigh. She had not been married long enough to venture to question her husband's will.

'But what do you advise them to do, Charles, when the house and furniture are sold off?'

'They must go on as governess, I suppose.

Edith had thought of this, but the announcement nevertheless appeared harsh and abrupt.

'Poor, poor Julia!' said she, 'what will she do, with her weak health. I have no fear about my merry little Letty.

'Julia will have no time to be ill. It will do her good.'

Again Edith bent down to try and catch glimpse of her husband's countenance; and then, as if angry with herself for the momentary feeling that had come over her like a shadow, she kissed the hands which still obscured it from her view.

About this time a great change came over Mr. Seymovr. Edith fancied he was sad; she would not admit that he was sullen, nay, almost harsh. She feared to ask him why he was so altered; but the knowledge came all too soon, and in the most harrowing and painful manner. Disappointed of the handsome fortune which Mr. Graham had, tacitly at least, led him to expect would be Edith's on his death, and on which he had speculated somewhat prematurely, Mr. Seymour's long smothered, wrath found vent at last in bitter and passionate invectives against the father in-law, which fell like burning coals on the head of his innocent and unhappy wife. She was slow at first to understand them—to each the meaning of his covert sneers, and fierce upbraiding. When she did understand what could she do? Could she exculpate—could she plead for him who had done this wrong? her father, nevertheless, and dead! No; she could but sorrow, and weep, and pray, to die.

'And so you thought I married you for love?' said Mr. Seymour, in the first madness of his disappointment; for he must have been beside himself to utter what he did.

'Yes, I thought so.'

'Poor dreamer!'

'But you did love me—you did love me a little, Charles?'

'Dream on,' replied the husband, bitterly, 'and turning away from those pleading eyes.

Edith dreamed on as long as she could, but that was not long. A severe illness followed, and her sister Letty was permitted to come and nurse her. No one thought that she would recover, and she seemed very willing, and even glad to die. But it pleased God to order it otherwise. No one could be more attentive than Mr. Seymour during his wife's illness. He came in softly the day she was pronounced out of danger, and, bending over the pillow, kissed her on the forehead.

'I am glad you are better,' said he.

Edith's first impulse was to throw her wasted arms round his neck; but sudden remembrances succeeded, and she only moved her pale lips and thanked him, almost coldly.

Edith recovered; and Letty went back again with a shadow on her young and trusting spirit. Her sister had taken pains to keep the sad knowledge from her. She could not bear that any one should think ill of her husband. Oftentimes she would say, 'You see how attentive he is to me. I have nothing to wish for, save that our little house were large enough for you and Julia.'

'God forgive you, my poor sister, for saaying what is not true,' thought Letty, at such times; but she kissed her, and said nothing.

A few months after her departure, Edith had the satisfaction of hearing that she had recieved an offer of marriage from a young clergyman, and that Julia, whose health was fast declining, was to reside with them.

'Thank God!' exclaimed Edith. 'He knew that she had nothing; that she was only a poor governess. Thank God, for her! This news has done me good. I thought all the world were alike.'

Change of air being recommended for Edith. Mr Seymour hired a ——— had made this proposition, and Edith knew his motive just as well as if he had said to her in plain words—'Hester Browning is very rich, and all alone in the world. Who knows but what she may take it into her head to make you her heiress?

The invitation was given and accepted but the bitter knowledge which Edith possessed, or fancied she did, gave a coldness and restraint to her manners which made the visit far from pleasant so either party. No one could be more agreeable than Mr. Seymour; but Hester, to use her own language, 'saw through him as if he had been made of glass.' To Edith she was strangely kind; but the poor girl, self-accused, shrank from her like a guilty thing.

'Do you remember how you used to laugh at me, Edith?' said Hester, one evening, as they sat together. 'I never hear you laugh now.'

'No, I am sadly altered since my illness; every one says so.'

'Or since your marriage—which? Are you quite as happy as you expected to be, Edith?' And Hester bent forward, and looked keenly into her pale averted face. 'Edith, dear, I wish you would open your heart to me.'

'Do you!' exclaimed Edith, bitterly; what should you know of love or marriage? When I want a confidante; I will seek some one who can understand me!'

Hester did not reply; those cruel and passionate words, wounded her to the very soul. Edith was sorry for what she had said, and longed to tell her so with tears and kisses; but the entrance of her husband restrained her.

The very day on which the period fixed for her visit expired, Hester Browning prepared to depart, and Edith did not press her to stay. They separated almost coldly, Mr. Seymour was present: and, as he handed Hester to her carriage, he expressed his deep regret that she should leave them so soon.

'Oh, dear!' interrupted Hester, 'I have forgotten something. Will you hold my cloak and look after Fanceon, a moment!' She hastened back, as she spoke, to the sittingroom, where she had left Edith, who was still there, and weeping bitterly.

'Hester!' exclaimed the startled girl, looking up as she advanced.

'Edith—dear Edith! For a moment they were clapsed in each other's arms,

'Forgive me,' murmured Edith.

'I have nothing to forgive. God bless you, my poor child!' said Hester; and she kissed her, and was gone.

They never met again. Six months afterwards Hester Browning died, and left all her property to Edith.

How Letty rejoiced in her far-off home when the news came. 'Charles will be kind to her now,' thought she, 'and she will be happy at last.' But though her husband was kind to her, Edith could never be quite happy again. The glory had passed away from her life for ever.

The first thing Edith did, when she became rich, was to send for her sister Julia, who remained with her until her early but happy death. Whatever Julia might have known or guessed, she never alluded to the past, but spoke only of the future.—She seldom touched on earthly topics; and when she conversed of heavenly things, Edith listened eagerly, longingly, hopefully: and the peace which passeth all understanding gradually entered in and filled her world-wearied heart. Nothing could be kinder than Mr. Seymour was when Julia died, Edith thought of her poor father's death, and how she had wept upon her husband's bosom, and clung to him as her all-in-all. She tried to do the same now, but the old feeling would not come back at her bidding. She thanked him, nevertheless, tacitly and gratefully; and he was touched by her manner.

Everything prospered now with Mr. Seymour. His wife's fortune had enabled him to carry out his favourite speculations, and in a short time it was more than doubled by these means; while the beneficial effects of success soon became visible in his daily life and conduct. He never alluded to the past, but it sometimes appeared as if he were trying to atone for it. Edith was quiet, gentle, and ob

To the Reeve and Township Council of the Township of North Monaghan:

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned, beg to hand in an Abstract and Detailed Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of the Township of North Monaghan, for the year 1869, and beg to report as follows:—In the items of Receipts there appears, by the Treasurer's book, two entries for 1867 and 1868 for $144 and $140 respectively, as Government Grants for Schools, intimating an omission of entering these sums in the proper time. Under the head of expenditure is a sum of $1.74 as remission of taxes for Drain, for which there are six orders payable to as many persons, and dated April 1868. Your Auditors recommend examination into the matter, as it would appear the parties named in the orders have not all been paid. The other items of expenditure appear to be correct. We find many entries in the Treasurer's book without dates, and would recommend that a regular cash account be kept, in which the entries will show when received or paid. There seems to us a want of proper attention to the settlement between the Treasurer and the Collector; no proper account seems to have been rendered by the latter, showing the sums remaining unpaid and due, and the reason why not collected.—Till which is done we decline going into the Collector's Roll for 1869.

All of which is respectfully solicited.

IMMIGRATION.

To Farmers, Manufacturers and Others in quest of Ordinary or Skilled Labour.

The Immigration Society of Peterborough, desirous of securing Immigration to this portion of the Province, and supplying whatever demands there may be for the various descriptions of labour, hereby give notice to all who may be desirous of procuring labour—male or female—and to the various municipalities in the County, that James Edwards, Esq., Clerk of the Town of Peterborough, has been appointed the Registrar of the Society, and that as such Registrar Mr. Edwards will preserve a record of the different descriptions of labour that may be applyed for to him. From the information thus supplied the Society hopes to induce an Immigration that will at least equal the demand for labour, if not assist very materially in settling much of the at present unproductive land in the County.

A registrar of lands for sale or to lease will also be preserved by the Registrar; and those giving information of lands for sale or to lease will have the advantage of having their lands placed prominently in the market, and brought under the especial notice of those who may desire to settle upon improved or partially improved lands.

Emigrants are now on their way from the Old Country, and many have already arrived. In order, therefore, that the efforts of the Society may be productive of benefit to the community, it is essential that information be at once given to Mr. Edwards, verbally or by letter, of the labour required, lands for sale or to lease, &c.

Those making application to the Registrar will be supplied with labourers at the earliest opportunity, and will be promptly notified of their arrival.

The County Council meets on Tuesday, the 7th day of June.

TO CONTRACTORS.—Read the advertisement of the County for tenders for the erection of a bridge at Lakefield.

The latest information respecting Sir John A. Macdonald does not announce any improvement, though he is no worse.

J. F. Dennistoun, Esq., and J. J. Lundy, Esq., are being brought out as Councillors for the East Ward.

Three young men in Port Hope, are said to have sent threatening letters to Col. Williams and others. Surely they were foolish.

The Railway Meeting will be held in Keene on Wednesday, the 8th day of June next. The people of Otonabee will vote no money for railways this year we are pretty certain.

PLANS FOR LAKEFIELD BRIDGE.—We understand that the Building Committee have awarded to W. R. Strickland, Esq., C. E., Peterborough, $40 for the best plans for a bridge at Lakefield.

The Americans have prevented the Chicora from going through the Sault St. Marie canal on her way with Red River supplies. This will compel our government to make a road in their own territory.

The English people of Red River are indignant at the Canadian Government for settling with the rebels, while Riel is still unpunished. O'Donohue wears Mrs. Dr. Schultz's gold watch. The Provincial Government is very unpopular.

A dreadful Railway Collision occurred on the 12th instant, on the Missouri Pacific Railway. Both trains were smashed to pieces, and about 40 human beings killed by or on a freight train.

The hotel keepers of Lakefield were fined, on Wednesday last, the sums of $50 and $20 and costs for selling intoxicating liquors without License. It is not as bad to sell it with License in a moral point of view, why fine in the one case and not in the other? The law makes all the difference, and the people are satisfied with the law, of course.

Dummer.

A Subscriber feels agrieved because we did not give his communication on the Warsaw correspondence, and the action of the magistrates. We withheld it solely because we were made aware of several lawsuits pending on account of the trouble, and we feared it would only increase the ill feeling already engendered. We also refused a communication on the other side because of its severity, and as calculated only to arouse animosity, and perhaps lead to lawsuits. There is no doubt but there is often cause to believe that whiskey is sold contrary to law. To our mind it is just as bad to sell with license as without license. Law may enable a man to do an act that tends only to evil, without fear of penalty, but license to do evil cannot make the evil good, or right; and here we are as much opposed to the license to sell, as to sell without license. Yet we would not willingly continue a war on one man or one set of men to suit the caprice of one, who only gave information to extort the payment or abatement of some liability, as is set forth to us.

A "Subscriber" or "Dummeronian" or any man who will try, by reason, and argument to induce men to give up the traffic in ardent spirits, can have the opportunity to persuade them, inside of reasonable space. But those who are opposed to selling without license, show that really not the "traffic" but some "individual" is the target. Is this opposing ruin? This is enough to lead to consideration, and to lead to oppose evil, rather than some individual whom, perhaps fancied wrong, goads another to oppose.

It does appear that there was more than whiskey at the bottom of all the late newspaper war.

Songs of Scotland.

To-morrow evening, Mr. David Galletly formerly of Greenshield Scotland, gives a Concert in the Music Hall, which will be principally devoted to Scottish Song. The Concert is given under the patronage of the St. Andrew's Society, the members of which, will all no doubt avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing a number of the beautiful Songs of Scotland rendered by a really talented singer. Mr. Galletly is to be assisted by others from a distance; the entertainment cannot fail to be a most delightful one. The Ayr Observer, in reporting a Concert at that place, said:—"The Scotch Songs of Mr. Galletly were well received; the manner in which they were rendered, showed plainly, that as a Singer of Scotch Sentimental Songs he has few equals." The Dumfries Reformer said of Mr. Galletly. "He has shown himself to be a singer of a very superior order, and the manner in which he rendered some of the gems of Scottish Song, as "Within a mile o' Edinboro Town", "The flowers of the forest," and "O Mary weep no more for me," was such as to entrench him as a permanent favourite in such a community as ours." The Galt Reporter, says, "Mr. Galletly has a sweet voice, capable of much modulation and compass, and he manages it with great taste, invariably suiting the accent and force of his voice, to the sentiment of his text." We might if we chose, add many other flattering testimonies from the Press, both in Canada, and in that part of Scotland from which Mr. Galletly comes.

The St. Andrew's Society appointed the following Committee to co-operate with Mr. Galletly, and take such steps as they may think desirable for the success of his Concert, viz:—The President and 1st Vice President, with Messrs. A. H. Campbell, J. Carnegie, Jr., Chas. Cameron, R. Innes and Jas. Miller.

We bespeak for Mr. Galletly a full house.

Queen's birth Day.

We understand that the following will be the order of the 24th, as nearly as possible.

The Lindsay fire company will come by boat to Bridgenorth. Capt. Crandall was in town yesterday to make arrangements for their conveyance from Bridgenorth. It will require about 20 teams to bring the firemen and party accompanying them.

The company in Peterboro will meet their Lindsay brethren on the outskirts of the town, accompanied by the band, and will proceed to the Firemen's Hall, where a luncheon will be provided.

At 3.30 p. m. there will be a general turn-out through the principal streets.

At 8 p. m. a torch-light procession will leave the engine house and proceed thro' the principal streets and Ashburnham.

The Firemen will give their Annual Dinner in the Hall, after the procession is over, at which, the Lindsay Firemen and guests will be entertained.

There will be no fire works, unless got up by others than the Firemen.

We believe fifty dollars could be obtained for the purpose, easily.

The Volunteers will assemble at the Drill Shed, at 9.30. a. m., and proceed to the Cricket ground for drill, and at 12 o'clock, noon, on the Market Square, where they will fire a Feu De Joie.

Police Court.

On Tuesday David Fitzpatrick, of Dummer, was brought before James Edwards Esq., J. P., on the charge of sending a threatening letter to John Wason, of the Village of Warsaw. Said letter demanded a clear receipt for an accont due by Mr. F. to Wason, or the said Wason would be fined $50.

Sidney Smith appeared for complainant and F. Burnham for Fitzpatrick.

T. G. Choate, Esq., was sworn and said he was present at a trial in Mr. Rose's house, when the letter was produced. Fitzpatrick there acknowledge that he sent Fizpatrick was in witnesses' house and acknowledged having sent the letter. Fitzpatrick had gone to his house to demand back costs that he thought were overcharged.

John Wason sworn, testified to receiving the letter, which was produced. Received about the 5th of Jany, the evening on which he had presented his account to Fitzpatrick. He (F) had asked a reduction, but witness refused to make any. Witness also heard Fitzpatrick at Mr. Rose's House acknowledge sending the letter. This was before the Magistrates. A boy named Bell brought the letter to witness. Did not hear the Magistrates say that Fitzpatrick would be commited if he refused to answer the question. The Magistrate said he could be commited.

The evidence of Fitzpatrick at the trial in Dummer was then put, in which Fitzpatrick swears he sent the letter.

The Magistrate asked him had he anything to say before passing sentence. He said he denied the charges.

Fitzpatrick was then sent up for trial, the magistrate remarking that two magistrates could accept bail. He choose to go Jail, and accordingly was sent up.

The above case has arisen out of attempting to fine John Wason, of Warsaw, a shopkeeper, for selling intoxicating liquors by the glass, but who ever heard tell of a shopkeeper refusing a glass, when he had it, to a customer. The information would not have been laid against Wason if he had granted the receipt for $6. Not good to the community, nor punishment for violation of law, therefore, induced the person to bring Wason up. Why don't the people of Dummer pass the "Dunkin Bill," and prevent even granting a license. If the traffic is bad, stop it immediately, but let it be on principle, not for spleen.

Inquest At Lakefield.

MR. EDITOR,—

In your last issue is an editorial on an Inquest held by me in this place, which containing several accusations I cannot allow to pass uncontradicted. You state that the coroner threatening legal proceedings if the evidence was published. No such threat was made. Your correspondent called at my house and asked me to allow him to take a copy of the evidence; I refused, and as a reason for it read the following extract from "Jarvis' office of coroner":—

"Strictly speaking it is unlawful to publish a statement of the evidence before coroner's jury as long as the proceedings are pending, and one who is aggrieved by the publication may obtain redress by civil action for the injury sustained, &c."

I also cautioned him as a friend not to publish the notes he had until at least a verdict was returned, as it might bring him into trouble, and I also offered to give him a full copy in time for last week's paper if a verdict was returned on Tuesday evening not otherwise.

Next you state that an arrangement was almost arrived at to return a verdict,—No such thing was done. One juror proposed a verdict on condition I should publish the evidence in full, but as a conditional verdict summounted to nothing, I would not listen to it.

The court was open to the public to hear the evidence taken, and if you consider it worth while to publish the full evidence the County Attorney may perhaps get you a copy as it is in his hands.

Yours, &c.,
DR. BELL,
Coroner.

Lakefield, May 7th, 1870.

After receiving the above communication from Dr Bell, we wrote to our correspondent, in whose veracity we have every confidence, and from his reply we quote;—

"DEAR SIR,—Yours of the 10th instant did not come to hand till wednesday morning, which accounts for the delay.

"I called on him (Dr. Bell), and requested to take a copy of the proceedings; his answer was,—'No, not for a paper'. I informed him that I was careless, as I had all that was necessary, that I only wanted to compare, and make corrections, if required. He then said: 'Take care what you are about,' and in a very forcible manner read the extract to which he refers.

"To further impress with his inquisitional power, he said he could have excluded spectators, from the jury room. He also stated that 'any way he did not want to give the Examiner the satisfaction of publishing in full before the Review'."

Again, "I positively assert that he did threaten, and has since boasted what he could do." He would show things in their true light.

Upon the best information possible we have received copies of the proposed verdict.

No. 1 That the deceased came to his death by drowning, while under the influence of liquor procured at Lakefield, and we censure the Inspector for dereliction of duty. To this nearly all the jury objected.

No. 2 After the word "liquor" in the first, read "obtained at Wm. Blakely's and Pratt's." On this they were equally divided: 7 against 7.

No. 3 After the word, liquor in No. 1, and that the evidence be published with the verdict, to which the Coroner objected, when a number of the jury remarked that they considered the evidence should not be withheld.

The jury, however, did not return a verdict. They were bound over to the assizes.

These are the facts of the case, we have every reason to believe. We have not heard of any foul play being used towards the unfortunate deceased. He was found in the water, dead; how he came to be there few if any know. And we suppose there was no valid reason why the evidence should not be published, except the reason given by the Coroner, to our correspondent. We kindly forbear to give the reasons for Coroner Bell's good wishes towards the——Examiner, to which he applied some epithets which we do not care to mention, our only object in again referring to the matter is merely to show the animus that prevented the publication of the evidence, simply, He did not want the Examiner to get it first. In his letter he says, we may get the evidence at the office of the Clerk of the Peace. So he has granted the liberty of publication.

We would be sorry to disturb the repose of the Coroner, and assuredly it would not always do to publish the facts made known at Inquests northward. But we hope that when the ends of justice are not likely to be endangered, our Coroners will not put obstacles in the way of our Reporters, and they should remember that petty personal accounts should not prevent us giving the power, and within reach of our reporters.

Mechanics' Institute.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting was held in the rooms of the Institute, on Monday, 16th May, 1870.

The President, Mr. Wm. Helm, in the chair.

The Secretary read the Annual Report of the Directors, and the Financial Statement, which were on motion adopted.

The meeting proceeded to the election of office-bearers for the ensuing year, they are as follows:—

President, Wm. Helm.
1st Vice President, Wm. J. Mason.
2nd " " Alexr. Smith.
Treasurer, Wm. Johnston.
Directors, Walter Read, Wm. Hamilton, John Doherty, F. Henback, Robert Robertson, Wm. English, John Carnegie, Thos. Donnelly, Geo. A. Cox, John Erskine, John Bertram, Anson Sperry.

The Secretary then read the following Annual Report.

The Directors of the Peterboro Mechanic's Institute, in presenting their second Annual Report are pleased to be able to report, that a fair measure of success and encouragement has attended their efforts during the past year. This is the more gratifying, when it is remembered, that in consequence of the large outlay for furniture, &c., during the first year, they had to commence the present year, with a large balance against them; but thanks to the liberality of the Town Council, and many kind friends, they had sufficient funds to work the Institute, supplement the legislative grant, and make a large addition to the library and reading appliances of the Institute.

The rooms during the past year, has very largely increased, showing that the young men and others are beginning to appreciate the advantage thus placed within their reach upon such easy terms; and the Directors hope that this encouraging fact will stimulate the Town Council and the friends of the Institute to continue their liberal support to the Institution, so that it may be an effectual counterpoise to the many places to be found in the town that are calculated to destroy the body and mind of those who frequent them.

During the year the Directors made arrangements for evening classes and lectures, but regret that the classes were not successful; very few availed themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them; this was chiefly owing to the want of a suitable room, for although the Trustees of the Union School kindly placed a class room at the disposal of the Directors, the locality was a difficulty, during the dark stormy nights of winter. A room in connection with the reading rooms would make the evening classes much more popular, and will be a matter for our successors to consider.

The lectures were a great success. There seems to be a growing interest in the public mind and greatly encourages us, and gives indications that a better feeling is springing up for this excellent mode of instruction, that we hope will soon wipe away the reproach that has in this respect, rested upon the town in the past. The Directors feel it a duty in this connection, to acknowledge their indebtedness to J. B. Dixon, Esq., the Principal of the Union School, A. H. Campbell, Esq., Thos. White, Esq., of Hamilton, and Dr. Nelles, of Cobourg, for their kindness in responding to the invitation to lecture for the Institute, and the valuable instructive character of the lectures delivered.

In conclusion, the Directors would again claim the cordial support and co-operation of all those who desire the welfare of the rising generation, and the advancement of the moral and intellectual character of the people.

WM. HELM,
President.
R. RUTHERFORD,
Secretary.

The Treasurer in account with the Peterboro Mechanic's Institute.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MR. EDITOR,

Having a few spare moments, I thought, perhaps a few lines from this land of Oil, would not be out of place, as they might give the readers of your sheet a faint idea of that horrid, horrid place, to those who have never visited it, known as the Oil Regions of Pennsylvania. We will first start with Titusville, which, using the vulgar expression, is called a "Red Hot Place". Here is where you first strike the "Oil Regions," as no oil has been produced further up Oil Creek than this place. The depot of the Oil Creek and Allegheny River R. R., is about half a mile from the business portion of the city. Titusville is now an incorporated City, and has a population of about 15,000, where eight years ago, it was known as the "Four Corners." We now have 6 fine churches, a public school which averages 800 scholars, some 6 first class hotels, 4 banks, about 35 stores, first class, and a great many small ones.—The Herald, published here daily, is the leading paper of the Oil Regions, having a large circulation in the Eastern Cities, as well as places in Europe. It is considered authority on all matters pertaining to Oil. Then we have a Soldier's Orphan School, a State Institution containing 400 children of both sexes. About half a mile from the City we have a fine driving park, where those who enjoy driving, find fine roads and a pleasant drive. One mile from the City you find the "Drake Well," put down by Col. Drake, 1859, the first oil well ever drilled; and the discovery of Petroleum, by means of Artesian wells, dates from the success of this well. Back of the City, from 1 to 1½ miles, lies Church Run Oil district, where a considerable quantity of oil has been produced.

Extensive foundries, machine shops for making engines and all necessary tools for drilling wells, are driving a lucrative business. These shops employ some 600 men. There are several very large refineries here which run night and day, making Refined Oils for foreign markets. Our Spring Street, which is the business street, would put one in mind of Wall St. any time after six o'clock; and our banking business is nearly all done after that hour. Banks are kept open until 8.30 p. m. There are some magnificent dwellings being erected; there are some erected at the present time cost $30,000 apiece. A large Opera House is also being erected, which will cost $3,000, and which will cost when finished, $100,000. It is said that there is more wealth in this place, than any other of its size in the world, and its citizens are noted for their liberality. The next place below here is Miller's Farm; from this point there is a plank road running to Shamburg, Red Hot, White Heat, Pit Hole, &c.

We now come to the famous "Noble" Well, which commenced flowing in January, 1863, at the rate of 3000 barrels per day, and continued flowing until the 28th day of February, 1865. This well was one of the best ever struck. The value of its products has not been less than three millions of dollars. The first investment in sinking the well was $4,000. It was owned by Hon. Orange Noble, mayor of the city of Erie, Pa., and G. B. Delamater, Esq., of Meadville, Pa. Mr. D. was, at the time the well was struck, publishing a country newspaper in a very small town in Warren County, Pa.

The next well we come to of any note is the "Sherman well," which, when first struck, flowed at the rate of 2000 barrels per day; this was in 1862. It ceased flowing in [illegible].

Next we come to John Benninghoff's farm. Mr. B. was about a year ago robbed of a sum of money supposed to be $300,000 to $340,000, having hoarded his money away in his safes, and not knowing how many greenbacks he was possessed of.

The next well is the "Maple Shade," which commenced yielding oil August 5, 1865, and for some months flowed from 800 to 1000 barrels per day. It is estimated that this well has produced 200,000 bbls. of oil, selling at the mill for $1,000,000, in addition to a considerable quantity destroyed by fire in March, 1864. Farr farm is a place of considerable business, east of the railroad. It contains 198 acres, and has produced not less than 1,000,000 bbls. of oil since June, 1861, when oil was first struck on this farm. The celebrated Phillips and Woodford are on this farm, the former producing as high as 4000 and the latter 3000 bbls per day.

At Rouseville, we come to the "Burning well." It was here the terrible explosion and loss of life occurred in April, '61. Thirty-eight persons were buried, among the latter was Hon. H. A. Rouse.

The next place of interest is Oil City, situated at the junction of Oil creek and the Alleghanny river. It not unfrequently happens that a trade is made by the oil brokers with persons on the train while it is moving out from the station, the broker keeping within speaking distance along the track the word is given: the word, or even a nod, of these men being considered as good as a bond.

The Alleghanny river is navigable at this point for several months in the year, and large quantities of oil are transported by boats to Pittsburgh. Numerous iron tanks have been erected by the oil merchants, and it is estimated that not less than 500,000 bbls. can be safely stored at one time.

The entire business is now so clearly systematized that everything connected with the oil trade must be perfectly legitimate; hence extreme fluctuations in prices are not likely to occur again.

Oilopolis, the next town situated on the Alleghany River, with its deserted tenements, stands a monument of departed greatness. A few years ago, corner lots here would bring as much money as an equal amount of land on Broadway. At that time, Pit Hole City, 7 miles from here, by a branch railroad, was in full blast as a City, with its Mayor, a daily paper, theatres, innumerable hotels, and a population of 12,000. The glory of Pit Hole departed in a fire, which consumed nearly the whole town. The City of Oilopolis died by neglect, and now corner lots can be had cheap.

I think I have worried you quite long enough, and will beat a retreat.

I remain, yours,
UNKNOWN.

North Monaghan.

COURT OF REVISION.

May 6th, 1870

The members of the Council met at 10 o'clock as a Court of Revision on the Assessment Roll. A few verbal complaints were made, which were duly considered, but the Roll was passed without any amendment. The proper certificate was attached to the Roll, and the buisness of the Court closed.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met afterwards for the discharge of general Township buisness. All the members present. The Reeve in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Commissioner of Public works and Agriculture, Ontario, asking the probable number of Immigrants which might find homes and employment in the Township during the present season; also requiring a list of improved and unimproved lands for sale; and further, that in the event of an allotment being made towards it in the municipality, would the Council agree to provide by by-law for the re-payment of the outlay.

From J. W. Langmuir, Esq., Inspector of Asylums, Prisons, &c., Ontario, making enquiry respecting the number of blind, deaf and dumb in the municipality.

From W. T. Mason, Esq., Secretary of the Toronto Eye and Ear Dispensary, stating the terms and conditions on which patients would be admitted.

PETITIONS.

From S. J. Carver Esq. and four others, stating that they had, at great expense to themselves, made a Drain through their lands, but when they came as far as the Concession line, there being no outlet to carry off the water, it had filled up again, and was therefore useless.

Petitioners prayed that the Council would make a grant of money to open a drain to the creek, and also make the opening under the causeway wider, in order that the water of the creek crossing the Concession line might get away without overflowing and washing the covering off the causeway.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Birney, that Councillors Robson and Laing be appointed a committee to examine the drain &c., complained of in the petition of S. J. Carver and others, and also to examine the bridges near Mr. Crawford's and report at next meeting of Council. Carried.

A petition signed by Wm. Lockie and three others, that the sum of $25 would be expended on the concession line between the 8th and 9th concessions.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Robson. That the sum of $15 be expended as above, under the superintendence of Mr. Lockie, pathmaster.—Carried.

COUNCILLOR LAING'S REPORT.

Mr. Laing stated that, having been appointed at last meeting of the Council to confer with Mr. John Dobbin with respect to the purchase of a gravel pit from him, herewith enclosed his proposal, which, he thought, would satisfy them better than any report he could prepare on the matter.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Birney. That the offer of Mr. J. Dobbin to sell a gravel pit and right of way thereto for $15 for a quarter of an acre, be accepted. Carried.

APPLICATIONS FOR THE OFFICE OF COLLECTOR OF TAXES.

From Mr. Chas Brady, that he would collect the taxes for the present year for $57.

From Mr. John Heggart that he would collect the taxes for the Township of North Monaghan for the year 1870 for $32 and would furnish the Council with the security required if required.

Moved by Mr. Birney, seconded by Mr. Tully, That Mr. John Haggart be appointed Collector for the year 1870 in the room of Mr. John McIntosh, deceased, provided sufficient security be given.—Carried.

REPORT BOOT CAN OUT.

The Clerk informed the Council that he had, agreeable to their directions, written to the Municipal Council of Cavan respecting the Division of the [illegible] boundary line, and in reply received a communication from the Clerk of the Municipality covering the following resolution.

"That the Council of North Monaghan be requested to expend on the boundary line of road between that Township, an equivalent for the sum of eight thousand dollars, which is about two thirds of the amount expended in grading and gravel ing three and a half miles of said road."

On the motion of Mr. Tully the Council adjourned to the 27th day of August next at 10 o'clock a. m.—Com.

Douro.

At the Annual Meeting of the County of Peterboro Rifle Association held in the Town Council Room on Tuesday, May 17th, 1870, the President, Rev. V. Clementi in the chair, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—John Carnegie, Esq., M. P. P., President, Lieut. Col. Poole, 1st Vice President; George Edmison, Esq., 2nd Vice President; Lieut. John Burnham, Treasurer; Ensign Wm. Johnston, Secretary. Members of Council: Thos. Chambers, Esq., Robt. Romaine, Esq., W. H. Scott, Esq., Mayor, A. H. Campbell, Esq., John Gilmour, Esq., P. M. Grover, Esq., M. P.

The above with the Captains commanding the different companies of the 57th battalion, and the Field and Staff officers, constitute the council.

BRYAN'S WAFERS, (The great public Remedy) have now been in use over twenty years, hence cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been throughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a cure, harmless and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN CHANGED by the use of the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron) from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women, and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial. For Dyspepsia and Debillity it is a specific.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Rowsell & Co., Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of men's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is DR. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

The Parting.

We part on this green islet, love!
Thou for the Eastern main—
I for the setting sun, love—
Oh, when to meet again!

My heart is sad for thee, love,
For lone thy way will be;
And oft thy tears will fall, love,
For thy children and for me.

The music of thy daughter's voice
Thou'lt miss for many a year,
And the merry shout of thine elder Boys
Thou'lt list in vain to hear.

Where we knelt to see our Henry die,
And heard his last faint moan,
Each wiped the tear from other's eye—
Now, each must weep alone.

My tears fell fast for thee, love,
How can I say farewell!
But go: thy God be with thee, love,
Thy heart's deep grief to quell.

Yet my spirit clings to thine, love,
Thy soul remains with me,
And oft we'll hold communion sweet
O'er the dark and distant sea.

And who can paint our mutual joy,
When, all our wanderings o'er,
We both shall clasp our infants three
At home, on Burmah's shore,

But higher shall our raptures glow
On yon celestial plain,
Where the loved and parted here below
Meet, ne'er to part again!

Then gird thine armour on, love,
Nor faint thou by the way—
Till the Bloodh shall fall, and Burmah's sons
Shall own Messiah's sway!

Beauty of Nations.

The African admires thick lips, corpulence, oily skins; and deems black the perfection of color, if color it can be called. The Chinese, whose eyes are formed, in his Tartar state, into slits, by gazing on the alternate frosts and fires of the Tartarian sands, thinks the large European eye detestable. The Frenchman worships the drum-shaped forehead, a turned-up nose, and a pair of eyes the color of rappee. With every foreigner, brown, varying from the color of tobacco-water to coffeegrounds, is the original color of Ere in Paradise, and is indispensable to all living loveliness. With the Englishman the combination of the lily and the rose, the red and white, by nature's pure and cunning hand laid on, are essential to beauty. It is fortunate that diversity exists, and that each man most values the beauty of his own country because it is obvious that this diversity of and colour is the necessary result of time and climate.—The burning sun of Africa and India, by a natural process, blackens every complexion. Even the more temperate glare of Southern Europe necessarily embrowns the cheeks; the features too are the formation of circumstances: the bending of the African brow, the deep sunk eye, the projecting lip, and the high cheek bones, are the palpable result of the natural effort to escape the glare of a fierce sunshine. The eye, equally delicate perhaps in all countries, is in all the chief object of protection; the whole contraction of the features seem to exist solely for the protection of the eye. It is remarkable that the same effect is produced in cold countries in tempestuous countries, and in countries broiling under the tropical sun.

Practical Suggestions.

The rain that falls on the roof of a barn will water the cattle inside.

A smart woman with dry wood and soft water close at hand has her work half done.

Good house carpenters are very particular to have nice sharp tools. This is half the secret of their close work and popularity. Many farmers would accomplish more and easier by better tools.

Farms soon run down that sell all their hay. Mr. Mechi, the great English farmer, prefers that the produce of his farm should go to market on foot.

A hog weighing less than two hundred and fifty pounds may be more conveniently scalded in a forty gallon cask filled half full of water, than in a tub.

Those who house their carts and waggons in Robin Hood's barn—all out of doors—are often seen travelling to the blacksmith and wheelwright shops for repairs. The hubs of wheels are made of elm, which is poor timber to bear exposure.

Every farmer who has paths to make about his premises, or the school house and store, should own a good snow plough. it is but little work to make one that with a good horse before it, will do the work of twenty men.

Wooden-shod sleds are no longer economical. It will cost less to keep one shod with iron or steel, in the long run. They start easier with a load on, and move with less friction. Old elliptic spring leaves are used for light sled shoes.

A harness kept well oiled is easier for the animal, is stronger, and don't wear out half as fast as one allowed to go year in and year out without care. Clean the horness with a sponge and castile soap. Apply the oil with an old paint brush. A long tin pan saves the drip.

Every farmer should own for convenient pig killing, a set pulleys, and three pieces of spruce or pine scantling, about two by five, sixteen feet long, for shears. The scantling should be connected at the top by a bolt, put through a hole bored slanting in the out side pieces, and straight through the central one.

You had better not keep stock than allow their manure to de wasted. It must be followed to burn up and fire-fang it; great heaps great to be wasted away by water drenched in from the eaves. The liquid portions must be absorbed by something, and then sold kept from heating and exposure.—"New England Farmer."

Live for Something.—Thousands of men breathe, move, and live—pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not a particle of good in this world; none were blessed by them; none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, nor a word they spoke could be recalled; and so they perished, their light went out indarkness, and they were not remembered more than the insect of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O Man Immortal? Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love, and mercy, on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No! your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind, as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as brightly on the earth as the stars on on heaven.

NOTICE.—Learning that my name has been unwarrantably used in connection with Directories now being canvassed in the Provinces, and entirely distinct from my works, and that in other cases it has been stated that my Directories have been abandoned, I would request those desiring to give a preference to my works to see that persons representing themselves as acting for me are furnished with satisfactory credentials.

LOVELL'S DIRECTORIES.

IT is intended to make these DIRECTORIES the most complete and correct ever issued on this continent. They are not being prepared by correspondence, but by PERSONAL CANVASS from door to door, of my own Agents, for the requisite information. I have now engaged on the work in the several Provinces Forty men and Twenty horses. These are engaged mainly on the towns and villages on the Railway and Steamboat Routes, important places on the lines being held till the completion of the former, to admit of correction to latest date.

I anticipate issuing, in October next, the CANADIAN DOMINION DIRECTORY, and SIX PROVINCIAL DIRECTORIES, which will prove a correct and full index to the DOMINION OF CANADA, NEWFOUNDLAND, and PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, and a combined Gazetteer, Directory and Hand Book of the six Provinces.

This map supplies a desideratum long felt, and shews:—

I.—The whole of the Fertile Belt, and those parts of Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Dacota through which the waggon roads pass to Fort Garry.

II.—The actual survey of the Selkirk Settlement, with all the roads, churches, &c., including the New Government Road from Fort William to Fort Garry.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R. R. R. Sold by Druggists.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this extraordinary medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination, have been radically cured by it. Even those of the most destructive character, the unseen and subtle taints of hereditary disease, are driven from the system. Again, it counteracts tendencies to disease in the body, and wards off attacks of many complaints by which we are daily beset. Liver complaint, rapidly developed by these taints, often finds in the Sarsaparilla a remedy which cures it. Pimples, tetter, tumors, boils, erysipelas, blotches, sores or eruptions of the skin, are soon cleansed by it. Ulcers in the throat, tubercles in the lungs or other parts of the body, and internal cancers, are healed by it. Female weaknesses, suppressions, irregularities, and painful diseases of the uterine system, are regulated and restored to health by it. Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heart disease, Tic, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and Diseases of the Kidneys, are relieved by it.

DR. J. C. AYER'S Liver Pills for Biliousness, Jaundice, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Foul Breath, Piles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Worms, Suppression, Irregularity, Female Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, and other complaints arising from disorder of the digestive organs or deranged circulation. Also in the first stages of Consumption, Dropsy, Heart disease, Tic, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and Diseases of the Kidneys, are found a prompt and reliable remedy.

Scrofulous and Mercurial Diseases are combined in the Sarsaparilla, and require for their cure a long-continued and thorough alterative treatment. Hence we advise those afflicted with these forms of disease to persevere in the use of this medicine, and not be discouraged if they do not find immediate relief. Time is required to purify the blood, and to restore the sick to health. Those who have been long diseased must not expect to be cured in a few days. Let the medicine have a fair trial, and if it does not benefit, we will refund the money.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a preventive against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Manoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Select Poetry.

On the Death of an Infant.

Young mother, weep! To chide thy tears
I do not coldly come;
Although the shaft that pierces thee
Hath sent an angel home!

Home to its Father's shelt'ring breast—
Home to the tearless land,
Where thorns will never pierce its feet,
Nor 'Broken reeds' its hand!

Yet, oh young mother, well I feel
That thoughts like these were slow
To soothe the crash of human hopes—
The gush of human woe—

When thou, thy thankful heart all fill'd
With joy and painless tears,
Didst still believe that sweet weak cry
Fell faintly on thine ears!—

That cry which thrill'd through ev'ry vein,
And bade thy soul rejoice—
That cry which gave a mother words
To bless her infant's voice!—

When that dear cry was hush'd, and thou
With aching heart and brain
Didst pine for its return: but lo!
It never came again!

When thou upon love's tender breast
Didst lean thy throbbing head,
And heard those falter'd words—'Be calm,
Young Mother of the Dead!

My heart of hearts doth feel for thee,
Young mother! for I know
How sorrowful my soul should be
If I had felt that blow!

My heart of hearts could weep with thee—
Weep gushing tears and wild,
As, with a trembling love I clasp
Mo own fair first-born child!

Eugenio and Clara.

A TALE.

'Tho' a broad stream with golden sands,
Thro' all his meadows roll
He's but a wretch with all his lands,
Who wears a narrow soul.'

WATTS,

Among the many weak minds whom the desire of wealth persuades to wander beyond the paths of rectitude, was Mr. Belmont; he had riches, he had acres in abundance, but he wanted that true happiness which is never possessed by mean and narrow souls, and relished only by beings of a superior order.

His wife was a woman literally brought up; she brought him an ample fortune, but could never suit her temper to his narrow disposition. Hence originated a constant scene of matrimonial discord, which broke her heart. She died three years after marriage, leaving an infant daughter to his care; he was doatingly fond of the little Clara, and, as she grew up, she rewarded his fondness.

If a person on whom nature had lavished her choicest sweets, added to a resigned understanding, and the most delicate sensibility, are capable of making an impression on the human mind, Clara Belmont was deservedly the favourite of all who knew her. Her sentiments were in everything the reverse of her father's; yet she loved and revered him with true filial affection.—She saw the avaricious principles he had imbibed, with concern; but being sensible they would never alter, chose rather in silence to lament his want of generosity, than by even the look of discontent irritate the heart of a parent.

As Mr Belmont was returning home one evening from a friend's house, where he had been to receive some money, he was assaulted by two ruffians, who had, undoubtedly been the death of him, but for the providential form of a gentleman passing by, who hearing a noise, came to his assistance, and defended his cause with the zeal and intrepidity of a hero. Seconded by so valiant an arm, Mr. Belmont soon gained the victory, having wounded one adversary, the other fled. He now made his acknowledgements to his deliverer, begged to know his name, and gave him a warm invitation to his house.

'My name,' said the generous stranger, is Eugenio, I am lately come to settle in these parts on a small estate left me by a deceased uncle. On inquiring the name of his uncle, Mr. Belmont found he had been his particular friend; but leaving the country, their intimacy subsided. After engaging Eugenio to breakfast with him the ensuing morning, they parted.

Clara was waiting with anxiety for the return of her father, fearing some accident had befallen him as he never stayed out at so late an hour. When he came and related his providential rescue, she poured forth her ardent thanks to heaven, and felt something of a presentiment in favour of the amiable stranger, who had, at the hazard of his own, defended the life of a man to him totally unknown. If she was thus prepossessed in his favour, before she knew him, her prepossessions were confirmed at the first interview.

His person was noble and striking, his sentiments just, too just for poor Clara, she entered too readily into them.

The first dawning of a reciprocal passion might now with ease have been discerned. But Belmont was blind till it was too late. Eugenio was a constant visitor, and when the father was from home, the afternoon was spent more agreeably with the daughter.

One day as Mr. Belmont was rambling in his shrubbery, he heard the following words too plainly articulated from a summer house at the bottom. 'I have no personal objection, sir, but I have a father, sir—' He shall be applied to, my adorable Clara, on my knees will I solicite his consent, 'Your application will be useless, young man,' said Belmont, discovering himself, 'rather would I follow my daughter to the grave, than see her wedded to a beggar.

Eugenio was naturally warm, and the concluding words of Belmont's speech irritated him. He was going to make a spirited reply, but the sight of his beloved Clara, bathed in tears, and kneeling at the feet of her father, melted him at once, he joined with her in her supplications. Not all the entreaties of Eugenio, or the tears of his Clara, could move the inexorable parent; he ordered his daughter to her apartment, and banished Eugenio for ever from his presence. In vain did the innocent, unhappy pair one, remind him of the obligations he was under to her lover, it only augmented his passion. He swore never to forgive her, unless she would promise never to see Eugenio more. The lovely Clara, who was piety itself, fearing the weight of a parent's rage, consented. The constrained smile played upon her cheek, but the concealed worm of grief preyed incessantly on her heart.

Eugenio, on the other hand, gave himself up to despair; he knew Belmont's inflexible character too well, to hope for an alteration, and he valued his Clara too much, even to wish to obtain her at the hazard of her father's displeasure. The place served daily to remind of his loss; he resolved to go into the army. He left the land in his possession to a relation, and with his ready money bought an ensign's commission. But e'er he left C—, by the help of one of Belmont's servants, a letter was conveyed to his beloved Clara, which was in these words.

'Forgive, too amiable Clara, the unhappy wretch that now addresses you—it is for the last time. The obdurate heart of a parent will never alter, and without that, his distress can never admit an alleviation. Could he hope to be remembered with esteem by the lovely Clara, that thought alone would cheer him in the arms of death.'

Clara had not resolution enough to refuse the letter; he was still too dear to her heart. She opened it: she bathed it with her tears; she almost washed away the words; she resolved to send a line of comfort, and with a trembling hand and despoding heart dictated the following:

'If the esteem of the unfortunate can afford the least satisfaction to Eugenio, he possesses it in a high degree. Afflictions will attend the greatest of human beings, and our only way to obtain happiness in this world, is by raising ourselves above it.'

After she had wrote this billet she thought it too cold: she should have dissuaded him from the army; she sat down to write another, but the sound of her father's voice prevented her. She hastily gave it to the servant.

To describe the sensations of Eugenio, would be needless, suffice it to say he joined his regiment, and was called to the field of battle, from whence he lived not to return. His last prayers were for the welfare of his Clara. The fatal news too soon reached her ears; she had long been lingering; this was the final stroke. As she lay upon the bed of death, she desired to see her father; when he came, 'Forgive me, my ever dear father, forgive your expiring Clara, I have never seen Eugenio since—but indeed I never could forget him.'

A fainting fit interrupted her; the old man's emotions were now great indeed, and when her spotless spirit fled, he would have given his life, his all, to restore the unfortunate lovers. It was with difficulty he was withheld from laying violent hands upon himself; he only existed to feel more poignant sorrow, and to bewail to the hour of his death, the misery he had himself occasioned by his avarice and ingratitude.

Amelia in China.

The wife of the American Consul at Foo Chow, China, is writing some interesting letters to the Toledo Blade. Here is a portion of one of them:

It would be impossible to tell you of all the many strange things and stranger incidents we have seen and do witness every day here in China—I will take in a large field and tell but little. All the foreigners, except a few missionaries, live in a suburb called "Nantai." And it is three miles by one densely packed street from our home to the first gate opening into the city; and strange to say, aside from the spacious and elegant temples, and the houses of foreigners, there is not in all this great city one building which in our country would be called comfortable. They are rarely two stories high even, and built of timber and clay, the inside roughly plastered (if at all) and the roofs made or covered with tiles. The Chinese officials and men of wealth live in affluence—dress richly, and keep a host of servants and retainers. But the poor are very poor; they work for very low prices, from five to ten cents a day, and feed and clothe themselves from these wages. The wealthy are very indolent, and impose a system of servitude upon their employers which is many degrees worse than even American slavery in its worst stages could have been. The peasantry are quiet and industrious people, but seem to have no higher aims in life but to make a comfortable living on their farms, and propagate their species. They destroy a great many of the female children, hence the male population is greatly in the majority. The laboring class of China, both male and female, are literally beasts of burden; they carry everything that is used in building a great city, or in carrying on the commerce of a great commercial country, upon their shoulders, by means of poles and baskets, or buckets on each end of the poles. The peasant women of China have large and natural feet. Their costumes consist of wide pants reaching only to the knee; a loose sack reaching a little below the hips, belted around the waist, and a little white apron, half a yard square, pinned on plain. They do not wear shoes and stockings; from the knees the legs are bare. They have no fires in winter to warm by, but as the cold increases, they put on clothing until they are of immense size, and their bodies look like a barrel with a head sticking out of the top, walking with bare legs and feet. None but those who work in the rice fields, in the sun, ever wear any covering for the head. The rich and poor all dress their hair in the same style; neatly combed in a low knot on the top of the head, and those ornamented with flowers and long hair pins or bodkins, either silver or brass.—The women of China are not tall, but stout and squarely built, and the working women very muscular. They will carry, with apparent ease, two or three hundred pounds on their shoulders. The small-footed women are unable to do any heavy work, as they cannot walk without a cane, or some one to support them. No man is satisfied unless he has one wife with small feet, and unless betrothed to one when children by their parents. They will work years to gain means to buy one, and the smaller the feet the higher the price. To a foreigner these small feet are horrible, and the worst kind of deformity. There is another class of people here known as the "boat population"—about 50 000 of them live on "Tanka" boats on the river. Men and women are born and raised in these boats, raise large families and die, never knowing the luxury or convenience of any other habitation. How, or on what they subsist, I am unable to find out, but their boats are always there, and they seem to dress better and more comfortably than those on shore. Rice, fish, fruits, and vegetables are the chief articles of food with all the Chinese. Pork is the only animal meat they use much of, and poultry of all kinds, yet there is plenty of beef and mutton.—There are but foreigners in Foo Chow, and their intercourse with the Chinese is limited almost entirely to trade. It is true we have to employ them, but out of a large number in every foreign house, there is rarely more than one, a head man or butler, who can understand a word of English. Hence, all the servants are under the supervision of this head man; we see and know but little of them. I think them the best servants in the world. We keep eight, and we pay the eight $32 per month, and they board themselves. We give them four rooms in the basement of our house. I am entirely free from the labor and care of housekeeping, as I trust every thing to the butler. If we give a dinner party, I have only to tell him how many "piecie men" have been invited, and the hour, and every thing was in perfect order, and good taste, and great style. Dinners here are served with from eight to fifteen courses, and from four to six kinds of wine. Those given at the White House are not a "patching" to them; we have attended six or eight. The english ladies always go in low neck and short sleeves. All the foreign houses are very large and elegant, and elegantly furnished with furniture from England or France, as there is nothing nice made here. The climate at Foo Chow is most charming; in the summer there are three months very warm, two in winter cold and rainy, but never any snow, and very seldom any frost. The tenderest plants grow and bloom all winter in the gardens.

AMELIA

Where to Study.

The air of a cellar is close, damp, musty and vitiated; that of the house-top is clear, pure, and bracing. On the surface of the earth the atmosphere is cold, raw, and impure; on the mountains it is dry, rarified, and healthgiving. The purer the air is the more life does it impart to the blood, the more perfectly is the brain nourished, and the more vigorously does the mind work and the body move. Hence the "study" of the clergyman, the "office" of the physicians and the lawyer, and the "library" of the family; the "sitting-room" of the household, and the "chamber" of every sleeper, should always be in the upper stories, not merely for the greater purity of air, but for a reason seldom thought of, and yet of very great sanitary value. The higher we ascend the more rarified is the air, the greater bulk is required to impart a given amount of nourishment to the system; this greater rarity excites the instinct of our nature to deeper, fuller breathing without any effort on our part and this kind of breathing, as the reflecting must know, is antagonistic to consumption, that fellecourge of civilized society, which destroys fully one sixth of the adult population.

Hence the very suggestive remark of the distinguished naturalist, Buffon: "All animals inhabiting high altitudes have larger lungs and more capacious chest than those which live in the valleys." In the same direction is the suggestive statement that in the city of Mexico, situated nine thousand feet above the level of the sea, of one hundred dying annually only three are from consumption; while in our larger cities, but few feet above the level of the sea, eighteen out of every hundred dead, perish from that disease. It should, therefore, be the aim of every student, of every sedentary person, of every invalid, to have the room in which a very large portion of the inactive part of life is spent as far above the ground floor as practicable, and in such a situation as will allow the sun to shine into it for the longest portion of each day, for this rarefies the air still more, and still more aids in developing and expanding the lungs by the greater depth and fuller play of breathing which the rarefeased atmospheric rarity induces.

Retardation of the Earth's Rotation.

Captain Ericsson claims to demonstrate:

1. That the change of position of the enormous masses of matter detached by rain-water, and carried from higher to lower latitudes, had an important effect in retarding the earth's axial rotation; while a similar transportation of matter in the opposite direction clearly accelerates this rotation Such transportation implies removal from, or approach to, the axis of the earth for the distance of many millions of feet; augmenting or diminishing the circumferential velocity of such transported matter to the amount sometimes of two hundred feet per second equalling a fall of 626 feet.

"Unquestionably the Mississippi, Ganges, and Indus alone transfer a sufficient quantity of matter in the direction of the equator, and thereby continually extinguish so great an amount of the earth's vis viva that unless it can be proved that the loss thus sustained is counter-balanced by the operation of the general river system of the globe a retarding force must be admitted to exist, sufficient to diminish sensibly the rotary velocity of our planet in the course of ages. Astronomers might look in this direction for an explanation of some of the retardation which the lunar tables reveal."

II. The renewal of material in vast quantities by the hand of man, from low to high elevations, in architectural works is cited as another cause of retardation, yearly increasing in magnitude, and destined a few centuries hence to have a very marked effect. "Close reasoning compels us to admit that the removal of thousands of millions of pounds, to an increased distance from the axis of rotation, during the erection of the Egyptian pyramids, in some localities, caused some retardation, which after the lapse of ages, will be marked by a later rising of the sun than if these pyramids had not been erected.

As a modern first-class city outweighs ten "Great Pyramids," far greater disturbances of the earth's centre of gyration may be expected in the future.

An Exquisite Retort.

It is related of Banyan, that in the height of his usefulness as a preacher, in and about London, the bishop of the metropolis had a curiosity to see him. The coachman of the bishop was a frequent hearer of Banyan, and the bishop had told him that whenever, in riding out of town, he should chance to meet Mr. Banyan, he wished to see and speak with him. One day as John was driving his lordship in a portion of the suburbs, sufficiently retired for the bishop to gratify his curiosity, Banyan was seen plodding his way on foot, with his bundle under his arm, going to preach somewhere in the outskirts. "Your grace," says John, "here comes Mr. Bunyan." "Ah," said the bishop, "hold up the horses when you overtake him and let me speak to him." They were very soon at his side, the horses were checked, and the bishop bowed, saying, "Mr. Bunyan, I believe?" "Yes your grace," says Banyan, courteously responding. "Mr. Banyan," said the bishop, "I am told that you are very ingenious as an interpreter of scripture; and I have a difficult passage in my mind, about which the critics are in dispute, and of which I would be glad to have your view. It is St. Paul's message to Timothy; 'The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest bring with thee; and the books, especially the parchments.'" "Well, your grace," replied Banyan, it is allowed, I believe, by all, that Timothy was a bishop of the primitive church; and Paul, as all agree, was a traveling preacher. It occurs to me that this may have been designed in future days, to teach that in primitive times the bishops were accustomed to visit upon the travelling preachers; whereas in our day, the bishops ride in their coaches, and the traveling preachers, like Paul, are 'minded to go afoot.'"

Spring.

ORIGINAL.

Oh Spring, lovely Spring! I welcome thy dawn
My soul leaps at the thought of thy coming,
I hail the flowers which through thee art born,
The song of birds, the bees with their humming.

I love thee! for thou dost come with a smile,
Dress'd in garments of freshness and beauty,
My sorrows to hush, my gloom to beguile,
To soften my heart, to urge me to duty.

I love thee! for unto me thou dost give
New joys, new longings to stay on this earth
Something to hope for—for something to live,
Which nothing but thee, bright Spring, could give birth.

I welcome thy dawn, thy glory to see,
In the glad bursting forth of creation;
Winter has been long and gloomy to me,
Spring will make all life and animation.

Then come, gentle Spring, with thy merry feet,
And gladden the earth with refreshing showers;
In haste my soul goes forth thy reign to greet
With the opening of the first fair flowers.

Strong Characters.

Strength of character consists of two things—power of will and power of self-restraint. It requires two things, therefore for its existence—strong feelings and strong command over them. Now it is here we make a grand mistake; we mistake strong feeling for strong character. A man who bears all before him, and before whose frown domest

To the Reeve and Township Council of the Township of North Monaghan:

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned, beg to hand in an Abstract and Detailed Account of the Receipts and Expenditures of the Township of North Monaghan, for the year 1869, and beg to report as follows:—In the items of Receipts there appears, by the Treasurer's book, two entries for 1867 and 1868 for $144 and $140 respectively, as Government Grants for Schools, intimating an omission of entering these sums in the proper time. Under the head of expenditure is a sum of $1.74 as remission of taxes for Drain, for which these are six orders payable to as many persons, and dated April 1868. Your Auditors recommend examination into the matter, as it would appear the parties named in the orders have not all been paid. The other items of expenditure appear to be correct. We find many entries in the Treasurer's book without dates, and would recommend that a regular cash account be kept, in which the entries will show when received or paid. There seems to us a want of proper attention to the settlement between the Treasurer and the Collector; no proper account seems to have been rendered by the latter, showing the sums remaining unpaid and due, and the reason why not collected.—Till which is done we decline going into the Collector's Roll for 1869.

All of which is respectfully solicited.

IMMIGRATION.

To Farmers, Manufacturers and Others in quest of Ordinary or Skilled Labour.

The Immigration Society of Peterborough, desirous of securing immig ation to this portion of the Province, and supplying whatever demands there may be for the various descriptions of labour, hereby give notice to all who may be desirous of procuring labour—male or female—and to the various municipalities in the County, that James Edwards, Esq., Clerk of the Town of Peterborough, has been appointed the Registrar of the Society, and that as such Registrar Mr. Edwards will preserve a record of the different descriptions of labour that may be applyed for to him. From the information thus supplied the Society hopes to induce an immigration that will at least equal the demand for labour, if not assist very materially in settling much of the at present unproductive land in the County.

A registrar of lands for sale or to lease will also be preserved by the Registrar; and those giving information of lands for sale or to lease will have the advantage of having their lands placed prominently in the market, and brought under the especial notice of those who may desire to settle upon improved or partially improved lands.

Emigrants are now on their way from the Old Country, and many have already arrived. In order, therefore, that the efforts of the Society may be productive of benefit to the community, it is essential that information be at once given to Mr. Edwards, verbally or by letter, of the labour required, lands for sale or to lease, &c.

Those making application to the Registrar will be supplied with labourers at the earliest opportunity, and will be promptly notified of their arrival.

J. CARNEGIE, Secretary. W. H. SCOTT, Chairman.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1870.

LABOURERS.—The Globe says the Intercolonial Railway Contractors have agents at Quebec to employ emigrants on their arrival, and that the Toronto Grey and Bruce Railway Contractors would hire one thousand hands at $1.12½ to $1.25 per day. Here are opportunities for those coming to Canada that they should not be slow to embrace. Too many of them, however, prefer going to towns and cities where the labor market is already more than supplied, and in doing so are compelled to work at low wages and only partial time.

The Immigration Committee here have appointed a Registrar to enter the names of all who require labourers, and also of all who require employment, if they report to him. This will prevent delay to those who seek hands and also loss of time to those seeking employment, as Mr. Edwards will be but too willing to afford all information in his power to those who desire it.

The Committee have been to considerable expense already, and will be compelled to incur more, if any number of immigrants reach Peterboro, and it is only fair that the town and county combined should aid in supplying the means of defraying reasonable expenses. To this end it would be well if the two councils should act liberally in the matter. If the money is needed to supply the wants of those coming amongst us, we are satisfied that all the Townships would freely give; and if they do vote certain sums, and these sums are not all expended, we are confident that the sums so remainining will not be squandered foolishly, but be retained for the purpose intended another year, or refunded to the municipality granting the money. The County Council will soon meet, and we trust that they will come nobly forward. The Town Council will not be behind in the matter.

The American Government had consented to allow the vessels for the Red River expedition to pass through the Sault St. Marie Canal, but the officials refused, until they received orders from the government of the State of Michigan.

We must confess that our American neighbors are the most childish people under the sun, to imagine that such trifling hindrances or obstacles could impede our progress Westward. The West is ours, and it will be colonised, and remain Canadian too. These little pettish freaks only tend to throw us more on our own resources, by which means we are sure to gain more independence and more determination to overcome. They withdrew reciprocity to intimidate us; it only drove us further from them, and drew the provinces closer together, This last petty act will tend in the same direction, and is just one more trifle to be overcome. Our destiny is Westward, and nothing but the Pacific will arrest it.

The London Times considers the Canadian Government blameable for the Red River trouble. There is no doubt of it.—But for the hasty despatch of Howe to Fort Garry, and the premature appointment of Mr. McDougall, as well as the remissness of the Canadian authorities in paying over the money agreed, to the Hudson Bay Company, there would be no trouble in the North-West. No expedition, and consequently no expenses for forces, supplies, vessels, transport, &c., &c. The blundering of John A. McDonald and his colleagues, and the desire of the Lower Canadian powers behind the throne, have caused the whole embroglio, and the Country must foot the Bill. And what must we think of our Members who supported all the measures of such a Government, even to the reception of Richot and Scott?

COL. GREY, who was compelled to acknowledge that he had taken more mileage as M. P. than he was entitled to, has applied to the Court of Common Pleas for a criminal information against the publishers of the "Globe" for libel for a paragraph that appeared chaffing Mr. Chauveau, for believing that the Colonel was bought up as arbitrator in favor of Ontario. The "Leader" is taking the unkind course of trying to arrange public opinion against the Globe before the trial. Such a course ought to be beneath a respectable paper.

The Parliament of Great Britain have a Bill before them to legalize marriage with a deceased wife's sister. The clergy opposed it, and the House of Lords have refused it a second reading, but they will have to yield soon and they may as well do it now with good grace.

The Concert.

Mr. Galletly's Concert on Friday evening was very successful. The attendance was very fair and respectable, and the singing excellent.

The playing of Mr. Rackett's Brass Band, was equal to former performances, and that is maintaining its reputation, which, as all our readers understand, is very high.

Miss Gerrie fully sustained the favourable reports that preceded her. Her first appearance is perhaps, not so winning, but she has the good quality of gaining increased favour every time she appears before the audience. Her singing was well received, and she was repeatedly encored, winning applause every time.

Miss McFarlane, who is very young, sung very well. She has a good voice and fair control of it; by the time it is fully cultivated, she will favorably impress her audience.

Mr. Galletly, rendered the songs of his native country in a pleasant and Scottish dialect, and, notwithstanding his labouring under disease of the bronchiæ, he sung several pieces sweetly. "The Laird O'Cockpen," and "Grace under my Plaidie", were well received: But in Longfellow's "Excelsior," he showed the finest modulations of voice, and clear diction, rendering the piece in an excellent style. On the whole the Concert was a good one, and the audience appeared well pleased with the whole proceedings. We only hope that the expenses were not such as to render the Concert a labor, for little profit.—This is the third time Mr. Galletly has appeared before Peterboro audiences, and every time he has received a flattering reception.

Queen's Birthday.

THE VOLUNTEERS, FIREMEN, PROCESSION AND DINNER.

The Birthday of our beloved Queen was celebrated here with all honor and by all classes of our citizens.

It was ushered in with ringing of bells, firing of canon, guns, squibs, fire-crackers, and all the other marks of joy and respect for the day that are common on such occasions.

The volunteers assembled about 9 o'clock in the forenoon at the Drill Shed, Peterboro, for drill, and afterwards marched to the cricket ground, Ashburnham, for field exercise. At about 12.30 they marched to the Market Square and fired a feu de joie, then dispersed to take part in other amusements.

THE FIREMEN

Next appeared in their holiday attire and went to Smithtown Hill to meet their Lindsay brethren, but had to wait a considerable time for them, boats and stages not being able to keep to time, as is not unusual on such days. About 75 men, however, put in appearance, and as many ladies and others accompanied them as made the number over a hundred. They were conducted to the engine house where a neat evergreen arch had been erected with the motto on it, "Welcome our Brothers," and on the Firemen's Hall was another motto, "God save the Queen."

About this time the firemen partook of a luncheon, and during the afternoon both companies paraded the principal streets of the town and our sister village.

A TORCH LIGHT PROCESSION

was formed shortly after eight o'clock, and with transparencies, mottoes and small fire works, this was considered about as pleasant a part of the day's proceedings as any.

Ready, Aye, Ready, the motto of Protection Company, No. 1, was visible every where, as they proceeded, and a new one with "Manitoba" on one side, and "No Annexation" on the other, was added this year to the transparencies. They paraded all the principal streets of the town and Ashburnham, followed by crowds of boys, ladies and their lovers, and no small number of Her Majesty's subjects, who appeared pleased with things in general.

THE TOWN

was beautifully lit up. On Mr. Stevenson's Store there were gas lights, in the shape of a Crown erected. Mr. Turver had also a Crown of gas gets, and Mr. Faucher had his own name erected of gas gets. Dr. Taylor had his Drug Store beautifully lit up, and had some reflections of red light that were very pretty.

THE SUPPER

Was the next, and not least, attraction of the day, but as this was confined to firemen and their friends, the crowds betook themselves to their own abodes to enjoy themselves as best they could, and where, no doubt, they were just as happy as if parading the streets.

The dinner was prepared in the Music Hall, and was provided by mine host Turver of the Caisse House. It was got up in the best style. Ample justice was done it by about 150 firemen and guests.

Captain O'Donnell presided, and on his right were Capt. McNaughton and Lieut. Morrison, of the Lindsay Company, Sheriff Hall and Capt. J. Z. Rogers. On his left, the Mayor, Lieut.-Col. Poole, Mr. Carnegie, J. F. Dennistoun, Esq., and Dr. Kincaid.

The Secretary read letters of apology for absence from Judge Dennistoun, Jas. Edwards, Esq., and E. A. Morrow, Esq.

After the despatch of the important part of the business—eating—

Capt. O'Donnell, who discharged the duties of chairman ably, gave the standard toast, "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales," &c., "The Governor General and Lieut.-Governor of Ontario," "The Army and Navy," &c.

Mr. O'Donnell, in giving the last toast, remarked that the army and navy of Great Britain required no praise, as they had always spoken for themselves when called on, and he well knew that the volunteers who had gone to Red River would nobly acquit themselves if occasion offered or circumstances demanded it. They had gone and they would be successful, and his hope was that they might catch Riel, the individual who created the ado, and then he hoped they would hang him.

Lieut-Col. Poole, Major Kennedy, Capt. J. Z. Rogers, and Capt. H. Rogers, returned thanks on behalf of the volunteers, bestowing encomiums on the firemen for their appearance, their readiness for duty, and their liberality.

Major Kennedy very feelingly referred to the men who had gone to the west, and he could do so the more, as he had a son among the number. He had long been intimately connected with the volunteer movement. He knew the men, and he knew they would do their duty in the far west.

Capt. O'Donnell then gave the toast of the evening, "Our Guest," especially those from Lindsay, but also all those who favored them with their presence, He would couple Capt. McNaughton's name with it, as an old townsman, as the former Captain of the Peterboro Fire Company, and as the man who did much to organize and establish the Peterboro Company. And also as the Captain of the Lindsay Company, a fine body of men; and he believed the two Companies would compare favorably with an equal number from any place in the world.

Captain McNaughton was received with marked applause—and returned thanks on his own behalf, also on behalf of his Company. They were only two months old, and yet they numbered 75; had one engine, were advertising for another, and were organizing a Hook and Ladder Company in Lindsay, and the town was doing for them all that could be expected, so that in reality Lindsay was not behind any town of its size in the Country. He, (Mr. McN.,) always favoured low taxes, but he thought a tax to maintain an efficient fire Company was well laid out money He thanked them for the manner the toast had been given and received, and hoped they would always merit the approbation of their fellows.

Lieut. Morrison, (Lindsay Company,) said he was no speaker, in fact was not in the habit of making speeches, instead of a speech, therefore, he sung a song, in excellent style.

Sheriff Hall also returned thanks on behalf of the visitors, and in a few appropriate remarks, proposed the health of Capt. O'Donnell, remarked that he was highly pleased with what he saw in Peterboro. He was delighted with the appearance of the Peterboro Firemen. They were a fine body of men, and he could not go away without proposing the health of their Captain and themselves.

Capt. O'Donnell responded briefly, thanking them for their flattering opinion.—They had done what they could to make the day pleasant, and would be glad to receive their Lindsay brethren on some other day, and do better for them.

The Ladies, the Press and the health of Mr. Rackett were successively given, when the party broke up by singing the national anthem.

Mr. Rackett's Band was present during the whole day's proceedings and added very much to the pleasure of the whole by their delightful music; and the songs of Messrs. Johnston, Morrison, Helm and others during the evening added to the entertainment.

We can only add that all passed off in the most pleasant manner. Not a word was heard or an act seen to mar the harmony of the day, and the officers and members of Protection Fire Company have great reason to be proud of the way in which the day passed off.

The Lindsay Firemen left about 2 o'clock a. m., to return home. They appeared highly pleased with their visit and with everything they saw.

THE FENIANS.

Gen O'Neil Arrested

The Fenians were making demonstrations at St. Albans and Malone, yesterday, and there was a report of fighting at Pigeon Hill. General Lindsay is on the track, and will make short work of them we hope.—

Dummer.

D. Fitzpatrick was brought before Judge Dennistoun, on Monday last, on the charge of sending threatening letters to J. Wason of Warsaw, for which he was sent up for trial, as reported in last issue. Mr. Scott appeared for the prisoner, Mr. Weller acted on behalf of our Sovereign Lady the Queen.

John Wason, Sworn,—testified to having received the letter, on or about the 26th of Jan'y. It read as follows:—

Mr. Wason. I want you to give me a clear receipt for my account out of your store, I want it to-night.

Signed,
D. FITZPATRICK.

The remainder of the evidence was the same in effect as given before the Magistrates here.

Mr. Scott, on behalf of the prisoner, thought the conviction was not sustained because the letter was not in full in the indictment.

The Judge thought that in such cases, it was all left with the Court.

Mr. Scott's second objection was to the effect, that the letter did not contain a menace as understood in common law; as a menace must refer to something it was not in the power of the party threatened to resist, and also:

That it must be to obtain something that really exists, not that which does not exist. As much as to say that the receipt demanded had no existence.

The Judge took this last view of the case, and consequently the prisoner was released—because a free Nigger as he expressed it afterwards.

We understand, that it is not uncommon to receive threatening letters in Dummer.

A very respectable farmer, (the License Inspector) assures us that he received three threatening letters last year, and unfortunately, had his barn and other property consumed by fire—as he believes, by an Incendiary. It is really too bad that in the inoffensive discharge of his duty, he should have to suffer the loss of his property. And there is little reason to doubt, that the Incendiary would commit murder, to suit his purpose; and it is not much wonder that he should say, "Truth and Justice have been hung up in Dummer."

J. J. Landy and Jas. F. Dennistoun, Esquires, were elected Councillors for the East Ward by acclamation on Wednesday. Mr. Landy was proposed by Mr. George Johnston, and seconded by Mr. Thomas Rountree, and Mr. Dennistoun by Mr. Wm. Johnston and Mr. W. J. Gregg.—There being no other nominations inside of an hour, they were declared duly elected by the Returning officer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Burleigh.

A Frenchman named Ossino St. Petre was drowned in Eels Creek on Saturday week. The place of the accident was not far from the depot shanty. Petre was driving saw logs for Mr. John McDonald. In endeavoring to break a jam he fell in and was lost. His body was found on Sunday and interred on Monday at Young's Point. Our informant believes deceased came from near Quebec.

Minden.

GRIST MILL BURNT.—On Friday last, the Grist and Saw Mill at Minden, was entirely destroyed by fire. It was in imminent danger the whole of Friday, from the burning woods around, but across the river. Lumbermen and others did all they could to keep the fire at a safe distance, but towards evening, the wind blew a little keener, and all efforts were unavailing. The mill is burnt to the lowest sills. Some of the fixings were removed some days before, as the high waters had placed it in peril, but the loss is great. There is said to be a small insurance on the mill, yet nothing to help in rebuilding. The site was had, and should any enterprising person build again, it will probably be either on the opposite bank, or lower down the Gull River. The timbers and logs had made great havoc, owing the unusual height of water had taken away the race and saw pent, and otherwise damaging the premises.

Minden Village is very busy at the present, a great stir, general, business, lumbermen along the Gull River, being all busy of the day. About 44,000 logs are in transit, and for miles of the river's length it is full of logs. The Burnt River, too, is lively, though not to such an extent. Another field of logs will soon be down.

Court of Revision.

Smith, 16th May, 1870.

Pursuant to a notice of the Clerk the Court of Revision for the township of Smith, held its first sittings for the present year, on the 10th instant. No regular appeal was made, but a communication was received from Wm. Wood, school teacher, stating that it is contrary to general usage to assess a teacher's residence on school property. After taking the case under consideration, the Court was of the opinion that the property for which Mr. Wood was assessed was liable to taxation, consequently, the assessment was confirmed.

After making some alteration requested by certain parties interested, the Roll was passed, and the Clerk instructed to certify the same.

The members then went into Council, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A petition was received and read from Joseph Smith, and twenty others, praying the Council to cause a cut, or drain, at the swamp known as Stothart's Swamp, on the communication road, as the road and adjoining lands are flooded at certain seasons of the year.

The prayer was not granted, as the Council were of the opinion that they would not be justifiable in opening said cut at the expense of the municipality.

A petition from Samuel R. McKewen and twenty three others, was also read, praying that the road leading from Selwin Post Office, to Little Mud Lake, and that leading from McKee's corner to the bridge crossing Little Mud Lake be opened the proper width.

The Clerk was instructed to write to the parties whose fences are built on said roads and request them to remove the same.

Information was made to the Council that Joseph White only expended one dollar, of the fifteen dollars he received for the repairs of the road in Road Division No. 63, in the year 1869.

The Clerk was instructed to write to Mr. White, and inform him that if he did not refund the remainder or give some satisfactory explanation he would be prosecuted.

The receipts and disbursements of the Treasurer were examined and $1000,00 were appropriated to the general repairs of the Roads and Bridges, within the municipality.

The Council adjourned until the 3rd day of June next.

The Water Works.

OWEN SOUND, APRIL 27, 1870.

To the Mayor and Council of the Town of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with your advertisements, I beg herewith to submit plans, specifications and estimates for the construction of Water Works for the town of Peterborough.

As will be seen by the drawings and specifications, the system proposed consists in placing water power pumping machinery on one of the water privileges in the town or vicinity, and from thence pumping the supply directly into the distribution pipes in the streets, at high or low pressure, as may be required, either for fire or domestic purposes, the water being used for fire purposes direct from street hydrants without the use of fire engines.

The vicinity of Peterborough, as is well known, offers no point from which a sufficient water supply can be obtained without an expenditure for pi s which would put Water Works out of the question, and it therefore remains to procure water by pumping from the Otonabee River, which is the only sufficiently pure and plentiful source within reach,

Of the two methods of pumping, by water or by steam power, which present themselves, the water has been chosen; As being much cheaper than a eam in first cost for equal power and efficiency; as being less expensive in working and maintenance; and as allowing the machinery to be duplicated, or divided, so that only a part may be ordinarily us d, yet with the whole power continually and instantly available for fires, without continual working e pense of the whole. The difference in firs cost in outlay and maintenance of the two motive powers is apparent, and applies to water works machinery precisely as to any other, and a water wheel is cheaper and better for working pumps for the same reasons that it is usually considered cheaper and better for mill or a factory. The other item of constant availibility of the whole power applies with special force in favor of water power for pumping, in the present case. The water for the domestic wants of the Town is not, and is not likely for years to be but a fraction of that occasionally required for fire purposes, so that it is necessary to provide a reserve of power for fires, either in the shape of a strong reservoir at a high elevation, or in reserve pumps with steam or water power, ready to be turned on instantly when required.

The points within reach of the Town on which a reservoir might be built are: Hill in Ashburnham, 153 feet above the corner of George and Hunter streets; hill at Hillard's mill, 107 feet; hill at north end of Bethune Street, 88 feet, and hill at Court House, 70 feet above the same point. Only the first of these would afford a satisfactory site as regards elevation for fire pressure, but the cost of pipeage and crossing of river to reach it, together with the cost of construction of reservoir, would be so great as to render the outlay injudicious at present. The next point is the hill at Hillard's but its elevation is not sufficient, after deduction for friction in pipes, to make it really efficient as a reservoir supply of fires in any but the lower parts of the Town. If the pumps were located in Town the expense of a main to the site would also be a serious item, and if the pumps were at Hillard's a reservoir near the point could only be looked on as a good auxiliary to the direct pumping machinery, but not be looked on as a sufficient supply for fires, as both pumps and reservoir would necessarily pass through the same pipes. If either of the other two sites were used, they would only furnish a moderate fire pressure on the lower parts of the Town, if pumped through large distribution pipes and about the same if done; but nothing like a feeling of satisfaction or security in the power of the works could be had if these sites were depended upon. The capacity and efficiency of the pumping machinery would really have to be the same as if the reservoir were not in existence, and in that case it would be useless except as an inferior substitute during a failure of the pumps or main.

It has therefore appeared necessary to discard the use of a reservoir altogether, because no satisfactory site is to be obtained at a reasonable expense, and to rely wholly on the pumps to meet all emergencies.

The quality of water required for domestic and manufacturing purposes will be inconsiderable at first, and for some years, until the distribution pipes are much extended and the water generally used; but the whole amount is small in any case and easily provided for.

At a fire, with an efficient brigade promptly on the spot, not over two or three streams are usually requisite, but in extreme cases as many as 6 or 8 may be needed. The figures I have assumed for these items of consumption are:—40 imperial gallons per inhabitant per day for domestic and manufacturing use, with a population of 5,000, or 200,000 gallons; and five one inch jets, under an effective pressure at muzzle, making, with liberal allowance for waste and surplus, say at the rate of 1½ million imperial gallons per day,—total supply required and to be provided for in pumps.

The arrangements of machinery proposed is: Two separate sets of pumps, with turbine water wheel for each, and a united capacity of 1½ million imperial gallons per day, under a presure of about 250 feet, but capable of being worked safely in emergencies to about one half greater speed.

Each set of pumps is intended to consist of three single acting outing plunger pumps. 10 inches diameter and 2 feet stroke, of the simplest construction, and arranged in one shaft so as to deliver a uniform flood of water. The water wheels are to be Leffel Double Turbine, which are now well known as a perfectly reliable and satisfactory wheel. The gearing, pipes, &c., are arranged with special reference to strength and durability, and each set is capable of being stopped and taken down for repair without interruption of the other. Both sets are to be governed by a Pressure Regulator, which is self-acting and maintains a high or low pressure as may be required, and calls into action one or both sets of pumps to keep the same. The pumps are intended to be amply provided with air vessels, so as to neutralize any shock between pumps and mains, and relief valves are also provided at the pump-house and extremities of distribution to prevent over pressure or "water hammer." The water, before entering the pumps, will pass through very fine brass wire cloth strainers so as to arrest sawdust and floating particles.

I am aware that Rotary pumps and particularly the Holly patent have by some been advocated of late for water work purposes, but so far their continuous working as compared with good reciprocating pumps, has not been such as to recommend them, and their delicacy and difficulty of repair without special tools are very serious objections. I may mention that as late as a year ago the Holly manufacturing Company themselves recommend piston pumps for the regular supply of the City of Ottawa, with the Holly Rotary Pumps as fire reserves only, and at the same date the Co. were engaged making a set of piston pumps to replace their Rotary pump for domestic supply in Auburn. The price also of some of the Holly Company's works in the States and their tender for Ottawa, show that they have cost more than other machinery can be built for.

The Otonabee offers different water powers, which would answer perfectly well for pumping purposes, and the site of the pump-house may be mainly determined by the questions of cost of privilege, length of main, &c. It is only mainly important that the dam should be of substantial and permanent character, that the fall be not liable to be drowned by back water, and that the supply for the turbines be taken directly from the pond, or be otherwise free from interruptions by shutting water off races, &c., and in short that the water power may be perfectly reliable and available at any moment. At Ottawa and elsewhere, mill-owners have gone to heavy expense in constructing powerful private water works as protection from fire, and no doubt some of the mill-owners of your place will see it to their interest to offer inducements to have so valuable a friend as the pump-house in their mill yards.

I have shown two sites on the plans as available in an engineering point of view, both of which will furnish the supply equally well. The particular location of the house on either site may be a matter of negociation keeping in view the points above noted.

I have specified cast-iron pipes for the distribution as being cheaper in the end, less liable to bursting and more satisfactory on the whole than anything yet tried. If coated with Smith's coating, as specified, cast-iron pipes are perfectly protected from corrosion. Those laid in Montreal in 1855,6 are now as clean as when put down and in English towns the experience has been the same.

The hydrants are intended to supply two streams each, these with the stop cocks and other fittings are all intended to be of the best characters.

The position of the pipes and hydrants are arranged as far as possible to reach the greatest amount of p operty with least amount of pipe and hose, and it is also arranged that the pipes shall assist each other by feeding round at both ends into any street in which there may be an undue draft, thus maintaining a more efficient fire pressure in the smaller pipes.

The estimated cost of the works as shown and specified, with pump-house at Dickson's dam, exclusive of water privilege and land, sarange is as follows:—

Pump-house, Head and Tail races
Pumping machinery, and 18 ins. Pumping main	$10,300
Distribution pipes, Hydrants, Stop cocks, Valves, &c	17,000
	$27,300
Contingencies 10 per cent, say	2,700

If desirable, a considerable part of the distribution, say cast-iron for two feet, might of course be left out in the first construction of the works, and the pipeage and hydrants extended as the advantage and necessity is more felt.

I have the honor to be
Your obedient Servant,
JOHN KENNEDY, C. E.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiable archer" consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Poetry.

Nil Admirari.

OR, DON'T BE ASTONISHED.

BY JOHN G. SAXE.

When Horace in Venusian Groves
Was scribbling wit or sipping "Massic,"
Or singing those delicious loves
Which other ages reckon classic,
He wrote one day—'twas no vagary—
These famous words:—Nil admirari!

"Wonder at nothing!"—said the bard;
A kingdom's fall, a nation's rising,
A lucky or a losing card,
Are really not all surprising,
However men or measure vary,
Keep cool and calm; Nil admirari!

If kindness meet a cold return;
If friendship prove a dear delusion;
If love, neglected, cease to burn;
Or die untimely of profusion,
Such lessons well may make us wary,
But needn't shock; Nil admirari!

Does disappointment follow gain?
Or wealth elude the keen pursuer?
Does pleasure end in poignant pain?
Does fame disgust the lucky wooer,
Or haply prove perversely chary?
'Twas ever thus; Nil admirari!

Does January wed with May,
Or ugliness consort with beauty?
Does Piety forget to pray?
And, heedless of connubial duty,
Leave faithful Ann for Wanton Mary?
Tis the old tale; Nil admirari!

Ah! when the Last day we reach
When promissory note'er deceives;
When persons preach what they preach,
And morning calls are all believers,—
Then the old maxim you may vary,
And say no more, Nil admirari!

City Life And Farm Life.

The present age is the beginning of a mighty progress in agriculture, and we may therefore look forward with confidence to better cultivation, larger crops, improved stock, and more perfect implements of husbandry. The intelligence and skilled industry of the country are to be largely involved in this movement, and it is important for us to know and understand how best to promote this great object. The question naturally arises, then, what can be done to make farming more popular with our young men, so as to induce them to become farmers and to help forward this work. We must first make them feel that the pursuit of the farmer is a dignified and honorable one; that it is as honorable to be a farmer as a lawyer, doctor or merchant. We must create an enthusiasm among our boys, and teach them that the labor of the hand is not incompatible with the brain. With the mind to help the hand, labor becomes light. We must require an earnest love for the calling. How can one enjoy greater independence and freedom than as a tiller of the soil? Think of the folly of exchanging the independent life of a farmer to the narrow life of a clerk is one of our cities, doomed for a lifetime to measure tape and grow effeminate behind a counter earning hardly enough to pay for one's board and clothes. Boys, stick to the farm; educate yourselves for the work; cultivate the mind and so add intelligence to manual toil.—Make your home the centre of taste, refinement, beauty, honesty, frugality and industry, and out of these will spring the purest life and the loftiest example. There is no object that gives more pleasure and delight to the farmer's home, when surrounded by these adornments which are dictated by native simplicity and a natural love of beauty. It is the stuff out of which states and empire are built. It is the summit of civilization.—Address of Hon. Ethabel Stone.

Wearning Mourning.

Concerning the subject the 'Central Baptist' says:—

'We long for the day when the custom shall be obsolete. It is unbecoming the truly afflicted one. The wearer says, by the black garments, 'I have lost a dear friend. I am in deep sorrow.' But true grief does not wish to parade itself before the eye of the stranger; much less does it assert its extent. The stricken one naturally goes apart from the world to pour out its tears. Real affections seek privacy. It is no respect to the departed friend to say we are in sorrow. If we have real grief it will be discovered. When God has entered a household, to the awful chastisement of death, it is time for religious meditation and communion with God on the part of their survivors. How sadly out of place, are the milliner and the dressmaker—the trying on of dresses and the trimming of bonnets. There is something profane in exciting the vanity of a young girl of fitting a waist, or trying on a hat, when the corpse of a father or mother is lying in an adjoining room. It is a sacrilege to drag the widow forth from her grief to be fitted for a gown or to select a veil.

It is often terribly oppressive to the poor. The widow left desolate, with half a dozen little children, the family reduced by the long sickness of the father, must draw on her scanty purse to buy a new wardrobe throughout for herself and children, throwing away a goodly stock of garments already prepared, when she most likely knows not where she is to get bread for those little ones. Truly may fashion be called a tyrant when it robs a widow of her last dollar. Surely your sorrow will not be questioned, even if you should not call in the milliner to help to display it. Do not in your affliction be held to uphold a custom which will turn the affliction of your poorer neighbor to deeper poverty, as well as sorrow.

Rhubarb.—The best way of cooking this delicious supstitute for fruit is to bake it. Cut up the stalks into a pie dish of nice white or yellow earthenware sprinkle sugar over, cover with a plate set it the oven and bake fifteen or twenty minutes, just long enough to be tender and retain its fresh green colour, like green apples. It is an excellent super-dish to eat with bread or butter or cream.

A French priest, lauding the superior virtue of a religious over a civil ceremony of marriage, recently declared that every union he had blessed had prospered, and produced the following letter in proof: "Respected Sir,"—Since we received your blessing, we have been so completely happy that, after ten years of married life, we have welcomed our twelfth baby. Under these circumstances, my husband joins me in the prayer that you would kindly withdraw your benediction.

A Cautious Answer.—There once lived in a village not more than three hundred miles West of New York, a certain tradesman who had a large family and little "treasurers" where continually being added to his board. One day one of his little boys happened to go in a store, and was then interrogated by a young man present; "John, how many brothers and sisters have you got?—"I don't know," answered the boy, I ha'nt been home since morning."

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cobourg, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditive Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life!

An old gentleman in the city of New York, has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics. It contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which those Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continually taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

It is so exceedingly simple in its parts, and so strongly and durably made, that it does not require a mechanical genius for its management.

HEALTH! BEAUTY!!

Strong, Pure and Rich Blood — Increase of Flesh and Weight — Clear Skin and Beautiful Complexion, Secured to ALL.

RADWAY'S

has made the most astonishing cures. So quick, so rapid are the changes effected by it, that every sufferer at once realizes the truth that "CHEERFUL MEDICINE."

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofula, Consumption, Syphilis, cancered and badly treated Venereal, in its many forms, Glandular Disease, Ulcers in the Throat, Mucous Tumors, Rodes in the Glands, and other parts of the system, Sore Eyes, Strumous Discharges from the Ears, Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Running Sores and the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Erysipelas, Fever Sores, Scald Heads, Ring Worm, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Acne, Blotches, Spots, Worms in the Flesh, Tumors, Cancers in the Womb, and all Weakening and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all wastes of the life principle, are within the curative range of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of disease, its potent power to cure them.

Not only does the Sarsaparillian Resolvent expel all known remedial agents, in the cure of Chronic, Scrofulous, Constitutional Skin and Syphilitic diseases, but it is the only positive remedy for Kidney, Bladder, Urinary, and Womb diseases, Gravel, Diabetes, Dropsy, Retention of Water, Incontinence of Urine, Bright's disease, Albuminous, and in all cases where there are Brick dust deposits, or the water is thick, cloudy, mixed with substances like the whites of an egg, or threads like white silk, or there is a morbid dark, bilious appearance, and white bone dust deposits, and where there is a prickling, burning sensation when passing water, and pain in the small of the back, and along the loins: in all these conditions Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, aided by the application of Radway's Ready Relief to the Spine and Small of the Back, and the Sores who required but with one or two of Radway's Regulating Pills per day, will soon make a complete cure. In a few days, the patient will be enabled to hold and discharge his water naturally without pain, and the Urine will be restored to its natural clear, and amber or sherry colors.

THE WASTES OF THE BODY

are supplied with new, healthy and vigorous blood, that furishes sound structure. Hence all suffering from WEARING DISCHARGES, either MALE or FEMALE, of the Womb, Uterus, or other organs, whether Leucorrhœa, Sperm, or Eruptive discharges of every kind, or from violences of "Self-abuse," from the Genital Glands, or Venereal discharges, or Ulcers, or Sores, through the reparative process of Radway's Sarsaparillian, are arrested, and the ruptured organs healed.

THE TRUE THEORY OF CURE.

Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies the system, through the blood, urine, sweat, and structure-making constituents, with Tissue-making, Flesh-making, Heat or Calori, and Fat-making elements. All of its constituents are nourishing, purifying, and strengthening. It Renews, Heals, Restores, and drives out of the body the wasting diseases of Decay and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, WHITE SWELLING, DROPSY, SYPHILIS, CANCERS, TUMORS, &c., are all of a scrofulous diathesis, and as such are within the curative range of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent:

1. That Scrofula, by whatever name designated, is the result of deposits from the blood, induced or caused by Chronic inflammation. That these deposits take place when the blood is poor, weak, watery, and incapable of holding in solution its proper constituents, or from the presence of some vice or poison in the blood, as Mercury, Calomel, Corrosive Sublimate, which is the Corrosive Chloride of Mercury, or other agents given in medicine, and which enter largely in the common advertised Sarsaparillas, NOT ABSORBED OR CHANGED FROM THEIR NATURAL CONDITION.

2. That unless the repairs or nutriments are greater than the wastes, that decomposition and decay will supervene, and the powers of life become exhausted.

3. That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medication that exhausts the system, or fails to nourish the blood, the only medium through which the vital forces are preserved, and on which the growth of the body depends.

4. That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a want never before possessed or known to exist in medicine; that this new tonic principle in Chemical science, which has been brought to such a perfect system of cure, is exhibited as follows:

1. Its great power in assimilating the food in its first stage of distillation in the process of digestion, as chyme and chyle with the nourishing elements of blood, separating from these lymph and the inert qualities before they are taken up by the lacteals and are formed into blood. Here we see that by the wonderful power it charges the system with the very essence or principle that forms the vital powers of the body, and its chemical action on the blood in its primitive and complete condition, separates every atom of refuse material or element, out of which the virus of disease is formed.

2. That the blood thus prepared, and supplied with these nourishing properties, becomes strong, rich and healthy, and holds in solution its proper constituents, through the Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and repairs the waste of the body with sound and healthy structures. Such is the wonderful power the Sarsaparillian Resolvent exerts on the blood and juices of the system, that no virulent humors or poisons will exist by which deposits are made.

3. The rapidity which the Sarsaparillian enters the circulation, and communicates its curative powers through the Blood, Sweat, Urine, and other fluids, secures the constituent secretions of each respective organ, establishing functional harmony throughout the system; through its action and power over the Secretions, the Liver resumes its natural or proper allotment of bile; the Skin sweat; the Kidneys urea; and the Lungs carbon; so that this wonderful medicine not only establishes health in the sick body, but preserves the system in health.

As we have shown the principle on which disease is formed, as well as the only sensible theory of cure, we claim that the range of cure of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is unlimited, and that every disease that is of a Chronic, Scrofulous or Organ

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.
Madoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Select Poetry.

Perhaps so, but I doubt it.

Old Money Grub has piles of wealth,
Yet toils like any nigger—
Greed steels his heart and saps his health,
But larger grows the figure.
He says religion is a lie,
And men can do without it—
Will this pay when he comes to die?
Perhaps so, but I doubt it.

And while old Grub hoards up his gold,
Young Grub makes haste to spend it,
Resolved to sin till he is old—
Then change his life and mend it.
But when age bids him right the wrong,
Do you think he'll set about it?
Will long indulgence make him strong?
Perhaps so, but I doubt it.

And Mrs Grub, the miser's wife
Who prates of Mrs. Grundy,
And leads a very worldly life
On every day but Sunday,
Will riches her the power give
To conquer death or flout it?
Can she, by wishing, longer live?
Perhaps so, but I doubt it.

And young Miss Grub, so full of airs,
And so devoid of candor,
So fond of shirking household cares,
So very prone to slander.
Will Heaven her petition hear,
However loud she shouts it?
Will she rejoice when death draws near?
Perhaps so, but I doubt it,

Will strife and anger lead to peace?
Will riches bring contentment?
Will vice, by free indulgence, cease?
Will harsh words cure resentment?
When Heaven wills that we should bear
Misfortune, can we rout it?
And is it wisdom to dispair?
Perhaps so, but I doubt it.

Literature.

Judged and Condemned.

Juliet Darley leaned out of the stage-coach window, and breathed in the mountain atmosphere with a sensation of ineffable pleasure.

"This is better than Broadway," thought the young lady, as her eye roved over the wild expanse of wood and field that surrounded her.

Juliet Darley was a handsome girl of eighteen; and there was a something definite, yet impalpable, in her whole air and style, that bespoke her a young aristocrat.

Opposite a sedate English maid sat, who coaxingly said:

"You'll stop at the village over night, Miss Juliet? See, it's a-fter sundown now."

Juliet laughed.

"Stephens, for a woman who has crossed the Atlantic three times, you are the worst traveller I know. Yes, we'll stop at Heartsdale over night."

Stephens looked relieved; while Juliet smiled to herself through the very vitality of her youth and happiness.

Why should she not? Wealth and ease and conscious beauty had cradled her from her youth up. Orphaned before she was old enough to realize the loss she was sustaining, her guardians had never allowed her to miss a father's care or a mother's love, and the spoiled, charming child had grown into a spoiled charming woman. And now, at eighteen, she was on her way to the mountains, there to meet the sisters of the young man to whom she was betrothed, for a summer tour among the grand northern wilderness. Roger Wayne was to be of the party also; and to our enthusiastic Juliet it seemed like a coming glimpse of Arcadia.

"Thank goodness, we're there at last!" grumbled Stephens, as the stage stopped at the one little "way-side inn" of Heartsdale.

"A parlor and two bedrooms—yes'm certainly: and two cups of tea, right away? Yes'm Supper an't till six'r."

The little parlor, with its crimson ingrain carpet and neat chintz-covered furniture, was a very inviting resting-place, and Juliet drew the easy-chair close to the window, looping back the white muslin curtains, with a sigh of relief.

"There's nothin' like allowin' one's self plenty of rest," said the English maid. "I do believe Miss would travel all night, if she hadn't somebody older and wiser along to tell her when to stop. It's all very well for eighteen, but when a body gets to forty-eight, and has the flyin' rheumatis all in her bones, it gets to be a different thing—do indeed! And as for—My sakes alive! What's that?"

"Stephens, what is that?"

It was a cry, wild and piercing as that of some dumb animal in pain, yet unmistakably human in its accents. The next moment a figure, dressed in white, darted thro' the open door of their room, and caught hold of Juliet's arm.

"Save me! save me!"

Juliet Darley's nature was singularly deliberate and composed. After the first momentary thrill of terror, she took the slender little form into her arms.

"Save you? from what, my child? There, there: do not tremble so—no one shall harm you here."

A slight creature, worn and attenuated, with great blue eyes and tangled golden hair pushed carelessly back into a net, and crimson spots burning like torches on either cheek, there was yet an iron strength in the grasp of her thin hand.

"I am not a child," she said indignantly; "I am twenty-one, and I am engaged to be married. You must not call me a child!"

"Poor dear!" said Stephens, approaching with a bottle of eau-de-cologne, "She's sick. Smell to this, Miss, dear."

But the perfumed waters were repulsed with an impatient movement.

"Go away! you are a soft stepping cat!" cried the new-comer. "I like this girl with the soft eyes and the gentle touch She will not let them carry me off to a mad-house, when I am not mad! Why, I am to be married in a month; and what would he say?"

Juliet began to read the truth now, looking down into the troubled light of her blue eyes—the sad truth that this pretty creature's brain was turned and warped; and in the same instant a sober looking old lady, dressed in black, hurried in.

"Meta! Meta, come! You are startling this lady, my love! And see your hair, all tangled! Come now, and brush it out before tea!"

"My hair!" The poor bewildered creature mechanically took off her net, and let the golden masses float down her back—"Yes; I must make it all smooth and glossy before he comes. I will go with you aunt."

And she submitted to be led away, as meek as a child, the old lady apologizing as she went.

"We try to watch her, but she will break away sometimes," said the matron in a husky voice.

Ten minutes afterward, when the landlady came up to inquire "if there was anything special they would like for tea," Juliet detained her with questions about this fair, crazed Ophelia.

Well, Miss, they only came in the morning stage, and they're goin' away to-morrow; but it seems her brain's turned, poor dear! and her aunt is takin' her to a private asylum in Vermont. She was engaged to a young fellow, Miss, and he left her all of a sudden for somebody else, and just made her the wreck she is. I wish he could be hanged, I just do!" and the landlady wiped her eyes with the corner of her cap stringe. "They an't rich—at least, so I gathered from what the aunt said—and she's an orphan, and this asylum business is a hard pull on 'em; but she grows worse every day at home. She isn't violent exactly, but she is wilful, and always will be dressed in white, because she fancies, poor thing! that she's to be married soon; and she's on the look-out for him all the time."

"They are going on to-morrow morning? then they will travel with us," said Juliet. "Poor, pretty little thing! And her name?"

"Well, properly speakin', it's Margaret Ellsland, but they call her Meta when they speak to her. But I mustn't stand here any longer. Yes'm, the milk-toast shall be prepared, and I've some beautiful currant jelly I think you'll like."

Long after the garrulous woman had gone down stairs Juliet sat thinking, her book closed in her lap, and her eyes mechanically fixed on the far-off panorama of hills and vales and tremulous pine thickets already beginning to be shrouded in the purple mists of twilight. She was pondering over the contrasts of this life; she was placing her own lot side by side with that of the poor crazed creature, who was as fair and as deserving and as much God's child as she.

"I have read of such things in books," she said, half aloud, "but they never seemed so close and real to me before. She, deserted, poor and on her way to a madhouse; and all through man's treachery! I, rich in health, anticipation, and, above all, in Roger's love! Oh, I never realized before how happy I ought to be!"

And one or two tears, springing from strangely commingled fountains, dropped on her folded hands.

"Don't take on so, Miss," said the sympathetic Stephens; "though, to be sure, it's as sad a story as ever I heard; and she's so pretty too, poor dear!"

There was a new vein of thankfulness in Juliet's prayers that night; a new softness in her eyes, as she closed them on the little pillow that smelled so sweetly of dried rose-leaves—while, in another room, she could just hear poor Meta's voice, singing to herself, in cadences, oh so sad and plaintive!

They were fellow-travellers the next day in the lumbering old stage-coach which left the village at 8 o'clock, and Meta insisted on holding Juliet Darley's hand, and sitting close beside her all the way.

"My dear, you will tire Miss Darley," said Mrs. Ellsland, the aunt.

Meta looked eagerly into Juliet's eyes.

"Shall I tire you?"

"No," said Juliet, caressingly, "you need have no fears of that."

Meta nestled close up to the arm that encircled her fragile waist so tenderly.

"I love you," she said artlessly. "I don't think I know exactly who you are, but I love you, because your eyes are so soft, and your hand so firm. I should like him to see you!"

"Where is he?"

"He is coming." Her blue eyes brightened; the two spots glowed out on her hollow cheeks. "Don't you see my white dress, all ready for the wedding? He will be here very soon now; the violets are almost gone. Somehow I get strangely bewildered about the weeks and months and days," she added, passing her hand vaguely over her forehead, "but he will come when the violets are out of bloom."

Mrs. Ellsland wiped her eyes. Juliet's heart ached for the poor, wistful, watching little creature!

"It will not be for long," she thought, as she noticed the almost transparent delicacy of the thin hands, the hectic glow of the cheeks. "She will soon reach her eternal home. But what punishment can be too severe for the man who has brought her to this!"

It was just sunset when they reached Milfield, the little mountain hamlet where Juliet was to be joined by the rest of her party, and when Mrs. Ellsland and Meta were to take a coach route leading in another direction.

Juliet's cheek was flushed, her eyes bright with anticipation. Meta leaned back, quiet and silent. For one, life's joys were just beginning; for the other, they were past.

"Roger! oh, Roger!"

For the stage-coach had hardly stopped at the flight of wooden steps that led rather pretentiously to the "Eagle Hotel" of Milfield, before Roger Wayne had thrown open the cumbrous breaking door, and was looking brightly in. But before Juliet could move from her seat, or even speak a word of greeting, Meta Ellsland had uttered a piercing cry of joy and sprung forward.

"Roger! Roger! I knew you would come. They told me you would never seek me again, but I knew better. See! I am all ready, Roger—in my white dress that you used to say was so lovely! I have waited so long—so long; but you have come at last!"

Roger Wayne grew paler than poor Meta's dress; his eyes, wandering uneasily from one to another, never settled anywhere. Mrs. Ellsland sternly confronted him.

"Roger Wayne, you see the wreck you have wrought! I do not know what evil fate threw you across our path to-day, but I had hoped never to have seen you again. Go! I have no reproaches for you; your own conscience will be a sufficient sting. Come Meta, my darling!"

"Not without Roger! We are to be married now, you know. He has come back to me, just as I told you he would!"

And with the words still on her lips, Meta fainted.

"It is fortunate," said Mrs. Ellsland between her set teeth. "Now I can take her upstairs without any further resistance."

They carried the slight, willowy figure away, with its closed eyes and its trailing golden hair; and Juliet Darley stood no the piazza, looking her lover indignantly in the face

"Juliet, dearest, you will at least give me a hearing?" he faltered, cowering before her lightning glance.

"Roger Wayne," she said, in a firm, distinct voice, "how dare you call me by loving names, when that poor child lies, crazed and dying, under the same roof? I understand it all now. I heard, little dreaming how nearly it concerned me, that Meta Ellsland's affianced husband deserted her for one whom he fancied wealthier and more fair. Roger Wayne, you could not have done a crueller, or a more wicked act, if you had plunged a dagger into her heart!"

"Yes—but, Juliet—"

"You are not on trial," said she scornfully "you are judged already. You have broken Meta's heart; you shall never have a chance to break mine."

She drew a glittering ring from her forefinger, and threw it contemptuously at his feet.

"Take back your betrothal ring Roger Wayne! henceforth I will never look upon your face again! You shall learn that a woman well knows how to avenge a woman's wrongs!"

She turned away with head royally erect and lips quivering with disdain.

"Take the shawl up stairs, Stephens. We shall return by to-morrow's stage; our journey's end is reached."

So Roger Wayne met his Nemesis, and Juliet Darley escaped a future which she could heardly think of without a shudder. While Meta, sleeping in her quiet grave, has long ago ceased to watch and wait for the recreant footstep which never came!

A Legal Tender.

Saul Sereleaf was the paragon of bachelors. His age was a puzzle in chronology. If you judged, as jockeys do, by the teeth, you would set him down at about thirty—for they were perfect, pearl-white, and not one missing. His glossy chestnut locks—granting it wasn't a wig he wore—bore similar testimony, which was further corroborated by a figure, whose symmetery spoke well for the handicraft of Nature—or of Art—whichever was entitled to the credit of it.

He boarded with Mrs. Nothermann, a respectable widow, who furnished accommodations to a few first-class single gentlemen, partly for the sake of society, and partly—not.

Mr. Sereleaf was a man of steady habits. He had taken up his abode with the widow on first coming to the place, and had never since thought of changing. Indeed, neither party had any reason to be dissatisfied. Mr. S.'s room was always tidy, the widow chatty, he affable, and his bills never a day in arrear. What more was wanting to make things pleasant?

After a time, Mr. S. got to be the senior boarder. Others had come and gone, but he remained "permanent." To sit facing the widow at table, say grace, carve the beefsteak, and lead the conversation, were prerogatives more firmly his, by prescription, than they had ever been of the dead and gone Nothermann, by martial right.

It was Mr. Sereleaf with whom the widow counselled in her trials, and in whom she reposed her confidences. He conversed with her, read to her, and accompanied her to church on Sundays; and any little difficulty in the sermon, or knotty point in the trimming of a lady's bonnet, he would clear up on the way home, in a manner equally charming and instructive.

Whether the twain, in time, would have been more—or less—to each other, had the widow adhered strictly to her rule to receive none but "single gentlemen" as boarders, is one of those questions always unsolvable, touching what would have happened, had something else taken place that never did.

Enough to say, Mrs. Nothermann, yielding to influential references, and the offer of a tempting price, let her best suite of vacant rooms—they were next to Mr. Sereleaf's—to a family composed of a gentleman and his wife and baby.

Babies were Mr. Sereleaf's abomination. He looked upon them as toddling monuments of original sin. He had no patience with them, or anybody that had them. The sight of one gave him a turn, and the sound drove him frantic.

In this particular baby, all Mr. Sereleaf's objections to babyhood in the abstract, were summed up in the concrete. It was subject to croup; and when it hadn't croup, it had colic; and when it had neither, it was trembled with teething.

The first night Mr. Sereleaf stuffed the blanket in his ears, but he might as well have attempted to stifle thunder. He tried to count himself to sleep, but the squalls put him out; and when he strove to count them, they became confluent and undistinguishable.

The next night it was worse. He couldn't even say his prayers—in fact, didn't feel like it. He paced the room in sleepless agony. Something had to be done. He had been a boarder in the house for five years, and had never yet uttered a complaint. He was very loth to do it now; but needs must, when a certain person drives.

"I'll propose to Mrs. Nothermann"—and he smote his fist upon the table, by way of emphasis—"I'll propose to Mrs. Nothermann," he exclaimed, "to put me in another room, come what will of it!"

The air of moody melancholy with which Mr. Sereleaf moped through the following day caused the widow much concern. Nor was her trepidation abated when, after tea, he intimated a desire to see her alone.

"It is with much hesitation," he began, in an agitated voice—when they had reached Mrs. Notherman's back parlor—"it is with much hesitation that I venture to speak—" Here he quite broke down, and the widow turned very red and trembled violently.

"I am sure, Madam," Mr. Sereleaf resumed, "if you only knew how much I have suffered—"

"Oh! Mr. Sereleaf!" sighed the widow.

"Mrs. Notherman!" said Saul, making a desperate effort to come to the point, "I have come to propose—"

But before he could explain what it was he had "come to propose," the lady gave a little scream, and started to fall. He caught her, of course, and shouted for help. The first to appear was the mother of the execrable baby.

"What's the matter?" she exclaimed, bursting into the room as if discharged from a catapult.

"I was only proposing—" Saul commenced.

"And a pretty mess you've made of it!" the lady cut him short, at the same time relieving him of his burden and advising him to leave the room—advice which he gladly followed.

Mortified and confounded, Saul packed his trunk, called a porter, and sneaked from the house, like a thief in the night. From the hotel at which he took up temporary quarters, he dispatched a note inclosing the balance due to his landlady, and something over, in lieu of notice, but making no allusion to his sudden departure, or the circumstance that led to it.

It was some weeks later that Saul presented himself at my office, and requested a private interview. We at once withdrew to an inner room, where, with much hesitation and many blushes, the story of the 'proposal' was told substantially as the reader already has it; after which Mr. Sereleaf placed in my hands the following billet, which he had just received:

BIDDLESVILLE, May 10th, 18—

"S. SERELEAF, Esq.: SIR,—Our client, Mrs. Cleopatra Notherman wishes to be apprised through us, at your earliest convenience, of your purpose touching the fulfilment or non-fulfilment of a certain promise of marriage recently made by you to her. We desire an early and explicit answer to the question. Do you intend to marry us, or do you not?

Yours, etc., SCRUTTER & SCRIVER.'

It was so much like the Bardell and Pickwick case, and the letter sounded so Dodson & Foggish that it was impossible to repress a smile.

"What's to be done?" queried Saul seriously.

"First and foremost, you might marry the lady."

Saul shuddered.

"In the next place—" But what passed was under the seal of professional confidence

I dispatched a note to Messrs. Schuyster & Skinner, soliciting, as

The Immigration Society of Peterborough, desirous of securing immigration to this portion of the Province, and supplying whatever demands there may be for the various descriptions of labour, hereby give notice to all who may be desirous of procuring labour—male or female—and to the various municipalities in the County, that James Edward, Esq., Clerk of the Town of Peterborough, has been appointed the Registrar of the Society, and that as such Registrar Mr. Edwards will preserve a record of the different descriptions of labour that may be applyed for to him. From the information thus supplied the Society hopes to induce an immigration that will at least equal the demand for labour, if not assist very materially in settling much of the at present unproductive land in the County.

A registrar of lands for sale or to lease will also be preserved by the Registrar; and those giving information of lands for sale or to lease will have the advantage of having their lands placed prominently in the market, and brought under the especial notice of those who may desire to settle upon improved or partially improved lands.

Emigrants are now on their way from the Old Country, and many have already arrived. In order, therefore, that the efforts of the Society may be productive of benefit to the community, it is essential that information be at once given to Mr. Edwards, verbally or by letter, of the labour required, lands for sale or to lease, &c.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1870.

The Situation.

It must now be quite apparent to every one that Fenianism is indeed the humbug, we ever pronounced it to be, and the unsuccessful attack just made on our frontier ought to convince the most inveterate enemies of Great Britain that her gigantic power and influence, both at home and abroad, cannot, in the remotest degree, be affected by an insignificant Fenian raid.

It is true we have men in our own country who almost openly declare their sympathy with these misguided men, and to such we would say let Fenianism and all other isms alone and settle down to a life of honesty and respectability; learn to cherish the free and liberal institutions of Canada; learn to respect the government which protects alike the men of all nations and which gives equal rights to all;

Let nationalities of every description be emerged in one grand outburst of Canadian patriotism. Let all unite as one man in the glorious work of building up a Canadian nationality, having for its object the consolidation of British institutions on this continent—institutions which will now and in future afford protection and give liberty to the down-trodden people of the old world.

The Fenians may rail against old England, but how is it with them in the U. S. of America? Are they not employed there to dig Canals, and do the dirty work at elections? And are they not then placed upon a level with the much abused and despised African, and, in fact, are they not considered as the bug-bear of American Society.

How different is it with the Sons of the Emerland Isle in Canada! Here they enjoy equal rank and power with the highest in the land. We say, then, to the Irishmen of America, come and enjoy this freedom and power, but don't come as Fenians, for if you do, you know the consequence.—Come prepared to live and act the part of good Citizens, and you will be respected by every class of the community.

Here we offer you Separate Schools for your children; we do not meddle with either your religion or your politics; we do not despise your race, nor do we laugh at your genius; and in fact we offer you every privilege, every liberty, and every advantage that it is in the power of a free people and an enlightened government to give.

Leave the country you have done so much to build up, whose battles you have so often fought, and which now rewards you with starvation and imprisonment, and come to free British North America, where you will have all the rights, titles, privileges and immunities of British subjects, so long as you conduct yourselves as good and lawful citizens. We will not encourage you to commit violence against a friendly people and government, and then imprison you for doing so. No, we will not take such unworthy means of insulting a neighbor as that. We will admonish you first, and if that does not do, we will prove to you and the world that our government is strong enough to stamp out your unlawful acts before they mature, and certainly before you commit open acts of violence against a neighbor.

Nothing ever went so far to prove the weakness of Republican Institutions than the acknowledged inability of the Washington Government to put a stop to the unholy Fenian movement.

Thank God our soil is now free from the presence of invading Fenians. But who have we to thank for it? certainly not the Government of the U. S. On the contrary, we accord all the credit to our Volunteer force, who have by their recent conduct proved to the world, and to the immoral Yankee in particular, that we are able and willing to defend ourselves against any foe—and more especially against the unprovoked attacks of the blood-thirsty Fenians.

This lesson, we trust, will come home to the hearts of the young men of our own Country who may be charged with Fenian proclivities. They should be able to deduce from all this Fenian business, the fact, that long years of residence in the U. S., has not made the Irish content with their lot, for if such were the case, the O'Neil's, the O'Donnell's, and all the other O's would not now be agitating for Irish independence, they may well know, that they (the Irish) are fast retrograding in the social and moral scale, and that the hot-headed, impulsive Irishman, is no match for the cool calculating Yankee.

They do not love the American Republic any more than they do Great Britain, and there is now no doubt but the American people despise the Irish in their hearts.

Show us one Irishman in America who has risen to eminence. No, there is not one, if we except the few who have long ago cut themselves adrift from their own countrymen, and cast their lot with the American people.

How different is it with the sons of Ireland here! Are they not to be found among our first citizens? are they not to be found in our parliaments, in our pulpits, at the bar, and are they not among our most successful merchants?

Hence the total absence of Irish agitation here. There is no use for it, as the Irish of British North America are a contented and a happy people.

We feel confident, then, that there is good reason for congratulation upon our present situation, for if we have been put to great expense, we have gained in prestige, we have given the historian materials for a new chapter of Canadian history, which, if impartially written, cannot fail to stamp us as worthy representatives of that good old stock who fought for British supremacy in the old world.

We have also convinced the Fenian faction, that although they get sympathy from the American Government, nevertheless, President Grant does not dare to extend that sympathy so far, as to provoke the British Lion to war.

Having now silenced our enemies in the United States, we turn our attention to those gentry who may be called our enemies at home. We mean Riel, &c., and before the summer is ended we will be able to congratulate ourselves on the situation of affairs in the North-West. This will also give the historian materials for another page of history, which cannot fail to inspire us with lofty ideas, when we reflect upon the immense influence such a consummation as the union of the North-West with Canada must have upon the trade and commerce, as well as the happiness, of the world.

There has been another fire at Quebec.

As will be seen by the Toronto Market Report, the price of wheat is upward.

Sir John A. McDonald is still in a very precarious state of health. His physicians have very little hope of his recovery.

Part of the Grand Trunk Station at Gananogue, and 600 cords of wood, were burned on Monday morning.

The party who engaged in the row on the morning after the Queen's Birthday were fined each $10 and costs. Served them right.

The Lecture of H. S. Blake, Esq., on Tuesday evening, was well received. The Lecture was a good one.

The rapid fall of the small creeks is likely to work considerable delay to Lumbermen, in getting their logs and timber forward this season.

Two boys, guilty of committing a rape on a woman in Ashburnham, about three weeks ago, are still at large, although a warrant for their arrest is in the hands of a constable. They broke into the house, presented a pistol at her husband, while each scoundrel carried out the hellish design. Lynch law would be good enough for them.

We are indebted to Mr. Grover, for a copy of evidence given on the Red River territory and its troubles. We hope to give our readers whatever portions of it, may throw light on the Country, its soil, climate or inhabitants. Many of our people are looking Westward just now, and more will do so as soon as the present troubles are settled.

BARN BURNED IN DOURO.—On Friday last, the barn of Mr. Patrick Sheehan, of Douro, was consumed by fire, supposed to have caught from a spark from the dwelling house. About 100 bushels of wheat, 100 bushels of oats, two or three tons of hay, and some implements were also consumed. There was no insurance. The loss falls on Mr. Sheehan, we regret to say altogether. Farmers as well as others should insure their property.

STEAM NOWHERE.—During the excitement on Thursday and Friday last, the telegraph reports were kindly furnished to the printers, and to the no trifling amusement of outsiders a regular race for life was got up as to who would get them out first. We need hardly tell our readers that steam was beaten. No match! The boiler didn't burst neither, and there wasn't no one hurt by the Governor, but it looked very much chagrined. The head fell and passion rose, but still the boiler didn't burst. Steam was beaten!

LAWRENCE VALE FARM FOR SALE.—We had the pleasure of a visit lately to this beautiful farm, situated about four miles from Peterboro. The owner, John McKee, Esq., has spent neither labour nor money to make it a beautiful place. The farm is well fenced and well cultivated; the dwelling very commodious and comfortable; the orchard, nursery and garden have few equals; and the sheds, stable, barns, gates, walls, &c., &c., are all that could be desired on any farm. Mr. McKee is about to remove to Kansas, U. S., and says he will sell on favorable terms. A visit to the place will amply repay any one. Read the advertisement.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—A man named Thos. Crahl, a saddler, of Hastings, was found dead on the road near South Dummer, on the 24th ult. His horse was also dead beside him. Crahl had a cut or hole on the head, but there were no other marks on the body. About $80 were found on him. An Inquest was held by Dr. Stephenson, of Norwood, and the general verdict was,—That deceased came to his death by lightning. He leaves a widow and one or two children. We believe a severe thunder storm passed over the section of Country where he was found, the same evening.

All the candidates who presented themselves were successful.

The Fenian Raid.

Last week, the news of another Fenian raid into our peaceful country was received with a little surprise, as few imagined that O'Neil or Donnelly were insane enough for such a mad undertaking. A few hundreds, under the influence of whiskey, no doubt, did venture to the Vermont border of Lower Canada, and at Pigeon Hill made a silly attempt to liberate "ould" Ireland by an attack on Canada, three thousand miles distant; but a silly attempt it was, and only resulted in proving the utter weakness of the "brotherhood" and the imbecility of the leaders.

The following telegrams were received here on Thursday and Friday, and caused some little excitement, but no uneasiness.

Ottawa, May 27.

Word has reached here, that 12 of our men on Picket duty were shot last night at Frelighsburgh, by the Fenian Bushwhackers.

Fenians marching along the Front, on the American side.

An attack on St. Regis, is expected today, or to-night.

The Fenians have guns and horses.

Business here is at a stand-still, intense excitement.

All the Volunteers called out.

Gen. Sherman, in command of 500 regular troops, passed through Watertown this morning, bound for the frontier.

The Ottawa Rifles leave this afternoon for Prescott.

The 43rd Battalion called into garrison.

From best of information received the fenian raid as far as Pigeon Hill is concerned, is a failure.

The Fenians are retreating, leaving arms ammunition, baggage, and wounded behind.

The principal point of interest now is Huntingdon.

It is rumored here that our Government has received notification from the British Government that Minister Thornton has been directed by the Secretary of Foreign affairs to demand the protection of the Canadian frontier by President Grant.

Body of Fenians crossed lines, and after destroying the telegraph wires advanced as far as Huntington.

9 P. M. The Fenians left their old position at Trout River, and advanced.

Uniforms have been served out to them and they look better than before, but have committed no outrages.

An attack by Fenians in force is imminent.

Port Hope, May 27.—Despatches received here from various parts of the States say that the Fenians are marching at Malone, from all parts of the vicinity.

Frelisburgh May 27, 3 a. m.—Despatches have just been received from Coldsmith frontier, that the alarm has been sounded, and that troops are mustering.

They have at least 20,000 men along the frontier in that neighbourhood.

A raid is also threatened at Fort Erie.

Movement at Huntington began at 5 a. m.

Fenians formed breastwork of Rails across a field in the North Bank of Trout River.

At 8.30, Canadian troops came up and opened fire.

The Fenian rabble fired a few shots and took to their heels, being chased to the boundary line, where their officers displayed revolvers and attempted to form them into line, but it was useless.

Not a single casualty on the Canadian side

The Fenians left a few wounded and one killed.

The United States troops are advancing from Malone.

Fenians reported within a few miles of here.

Our troops reported marching to meet them, engagement imminent.

Volunteers ordered to the front at Pigeon Hill.

From latest advices from American sources it seems that an engagement is inevitable.

Huntingdon, May 27, 1870.

Persons who came from St. Alban's last night report the Fenians in force there, but disorganized.

Last evening, the field piece captured on the 25th inst., was brought here, in charge of a party of the Home Guards.

Capt. Muir reports that 300 Fenians and a general left St. Albans last night, to attack Col. Smith's position at day-light to-day.

Huntingbrook, 27th. This morning at 5 o'clock the troops at Huntingdon made an advance.

The force was composed of the 69th. Regiment, the Garrison Artillery, and Engineers of Montreal, and a Huntingdon Battalion.

At 8 30, our troops came up when Col. Bagot ordered the Huntington Volunteers under Col. McPherson to deploy across the field.

The 69th were also ordered to advance along the road, and the Artillery to cross the River and go up the south bank.

These manoeuvres were performed at once, and the whole line opened fire.

The Fenians fled at once, not firing 20 shots.

Such a skedaddle was not seen since Bull's Run.

Our Volunteers followed, firing as they went, until they reached the boundary line, when they stopped.

The Fenian Officers tried to form their men in crossing the line.

The Fenians number 400.

Our troops will remain at the boundary line.

According to the above telegrams, the poor Fenians are a harmless set of fools, desirous of committing suicide, but who have not courage, and throw themselves in the way of Canadian volunteers for the purpose of getting cut off, and even then had not the courage to stand.

General O'Neil, too, is a bold fellow! One man, a U. S. Marshall, took him from the midst of the Fenian scarecrows, pitched him into a carriage and drove him off to Jail. It is true he said he had a pistol, but then he did not show it. It was fortunate to be taken just at the commencement of the humbug; it saved him from future disgrace on the field. Lucky man. He will be able to pocket a few more of the hard earned dollars of the poor servant girls of the Republic. He will thus find funds for a burst, and a show off at Fenian gatherings and pic-nics.

Father McMahon is again among the brotherhood—this time at Malone. Again on his way to Montreal to see his friends. What a pity this old demagogue was not hanged when in Canada! Our government never committed a greater blunder than in letting him out of the penitentiary.

The raid of 1870 is over, however. The dupes are returning to the cities as best they can. Our volunteers will soon return home, and the lesson to the brotherhood will prevent such folly in future. Our people may rest in peace for many years to come.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded.—

John Rowe, of Burlington, was killed.

M. O'Brien, of Moriah, N. H. was killed.

Lieut. Edward Hope, of Bridgeport, Conn., was wounded in the thigh. He claims to have been in 43 engagements in the Union army.

Frank Carrigan, of the same place, was wounded in the groin; probably fatal.

Capt. E. Cronan, of the said Company, was wounded in the leg.

Jas. Keenan, of Fort Edward, was wounded in the leg.

Lieut. Edward Hollahan, of Burlington, was wounded in the arm.

Chas. Carlton, of Cambridge, Vt., was wounded in the leg.

Daniel Ahern, of Winooski, Vt., severely wounded in the hip.

In addition to these,

General J. J. Donnelly, of Utica, received a wound in the spine, which proved fatal.

An unknown man was killed at the same time as Rowe and O'Brien—the total casualities at Pigeon Hill were "three "killed and ten or fifteen wounded, more or "less."

In Captain Cronan's account of the fight at Pigeon Hill, he says:—"We had two "men shot dead and eleven wounded."

A telegraphic depatch to the Detroit Post from Malone on the 28th, states that in the fight at Trout River, "one man was killed, "Two seriously wounded, and two prisoners were" by the Canadians. It adds that the name of one of the prisoners was Moore from, N. Y.

Another Press Despatch from Malone says:—

"Duffy was reported dead last night; "and the men reported missing have re"turned to this place unhurt, but fatigued "with wandering in the woods."

Another Press Despatch from the same place, after describing the Trout River fight and the stampede, says:

DENNIS DUGGAN was numbered among the dead."

A telegraphic despatch to the New York Herald, from Malone, also says:—"The last warning to Vermont Fenians was given here last night. When James Hunt and Patrick McNally were taunting the volunteers and reproaching them, the two men unconsciously crossed the line and were at once gobbled up and conveyed to prison."

It appears, therefore, to be clear that five Fenians at least were killed, namely Bowe, O'Brien, Donnoly, Duffy and Duggan; and that probably a dozen more were wounded, including Hope, Carrigan, Cronan, Keenan, Hollahan, Carlstod, and Ahern.

We have not heard of an accident to a single volunteer during the raid.

MONREAL, May 31.

James Moore, the Fenian prisoner brought in by the 69th, and handed over to the civil authorities, was brought before Judge Coursol; and the deposition of bandsman Potter taken. Potter was present at the arrest, and saved Moore's life from the infuriated farmers and volunteers. The deposition is sufficient to cause Moore's detention in gaol until the Crown sees fit to order his trial. He is much affected and trembles at his future. Two other prisoners taken by a picket of the 60th on the morning of the 25th, are, it is supposed, in the hands of the Missisquoi Battalion. They were taken at Cook's Corners, having strayed into the Canadian camp, which they thought was their own. Their names are Thomas and Lewis Murphy. One of them had in his possession his certificate as a captain and head-centre

PRINCETON, ONT., MAY 31.

A man turned up in the village of Princeton to-day stating that he was a Fenian at heart, and was sent out by the Brotherhood as a spy. He supposed he was confiding in a friend, but was mistaken, and the landlord exposed him. He was arrested and taken before the magistrate. He there stated that he had not molested anyone, and did not intend to, but he was a Fenian at heart, and was a spy and calculated to send back to the Fenians all the important information he could gain; that he had been in the Fenian raid in 1866 at Fort Erie, and if there was another raid he would try it again. He had a silver plate in his scull, the wound he stated was received at Fort Erie by a bullet.

The presiding magistrate signed the committal but could get no other magistrate to sign it with him, so he was obliged to let the fellow go. He made off for the West.

General Starr has returned to Buffalo. His account of affairs at the frontier, shows that the Fenians are fools to attempt to invade Canada. General O'Neill at the time of his capture it is said, had $20,000 to $30,000 with him. He didn't want the British to get it.

MALONE.

The Fenian arms have been taken by the U. S. authorities, and it is reported will be destroyed. 100 saddles were taken here. The dupes are returning home. Several arrests were made by the United States marshalls. The 69th have returned to Quebec. They brought several Fenian spoils with them.

Grant's Proclamation.

President Grant has issued the following proclamation:—

WASHINGTON, May 24.

By the President of the United States of America.—A proclamation.

Whereas it has come to my knowledge that sundry illegal millitary enterprises and expeditions are being set on foot within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States, with a view to carry on the same from such territory and jurisdiction against the people and district of the Dominion of Canada, within the dominions of her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with whom the United States is at peace: Now, therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do hereby admonish all good citizens of the United States, and all persons within the military jurisdiction of United States, against aiding, countenancing, abetting, or taking part in such unlawful proceedings, and I do hereby warn all persons that by committing such illegal acts they will forfeit all right to the protection of this Government, or to its interference in their behalf to rescue them from the consequences of their own acts, and I hereby enjoin all officers in the service of the United States to employ all their lawful authority and power to prevent and defeat the aforesaid unlawful proceedings, and arrest and bring to justice all persons who may be engaged therein. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 24th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1870, and in the Independence of the United States of America the 94th.

(Signed,) U. S. GRANT.

HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

The Lindsay Warder says:—"We are glad to hear of the rivalry which has recently sprung up in Emily and Ennismore in the great cause of temperance. Father Coyle has organized within the last six days a Total Abstinence Society of 508 members and active agents, he himself leading at the head of the roll. All good men wish him success! So say we also.

The Assessor being called, stated that where he had found property damaged by the late freshet he had reduced according to damage done, and stated that he considered Mr. Choate's property Assessed $900 too high. Whereupon it was Fires are raging in the Saugenay district, Lower Canada, and also in parts of New York State; over 5,000 persons have been left houseless.

"The Chicora."

The steamer Chicora once the blockade runner, Let her be, and still later the Rothsay Castle, of Toronto, and now owned by the Messrs. Milloy, of Toronto, and chartered to convey the Red River expedition from Collingwood to sault Ste. Marie, was built on the Clyde for Messrs. Fraser, Trenthohm & Co., and was employed during the American rebellion in running the blockade between Charleston and the Bahama Islands. One occasion she ran out from Charleston through the American convoy, which was closely guarding the harbor, and after being chased for fourteen and a half hours by the fast American gunboats "Atlanta" and "Connecticut," she managed to reach her haven in safety. On this occasion the captain's wife (Mrs. Cozette) stood at the wheel house defiantly waving the British flag in the face of the pursuing yankees. Her undaunted conduct instilled a spirit of bravery into the crew, and cheer after cheer rolled over the deep as shot after shot boomed from the chasers, who did their utmost to destroy or capture the gallant blockade runner.

The End of the Raid.

Although scattered parties of Fenians still linger in some of the American towns along the line of frontier, there is nothing to occasion a doubt that the raid is at an end, and that the most complete and utter failure has attended this last effort of the marauding Brotherhood.

Disgusted with their leaders and ashamed of themselves, the Fenians are travelling back to the holes and corners whence they came, sadder, and we would hope, wiser men, only that the Fenian mind seems just acquiring wisdom. The invasion, which opened with so brave a flourish, has ended in squads of hungry wretches being taken back to New York at half price in hog cars, and we don't know that humiliation could go much further. If the American Government is honestly bent on discharging its duty, it will have a few additional inmates for its prisons and penitentiaries for some time to come.

In Canada there will be for the future an increased sense of security, not only from the utter break down of the Fenian organization, but the consciousness this fresh experience has given of the ability of the country to rely with unwavering confidence on the patriotism, courage and discipline of its Volunteer soldiers.—Globe

THE TROOPS FOR RED RIVER.—This morning 200 men of the Red River Expedition will go from the Northern station to Collingwood, thence for Fort William, by steamer Chicora, which will also take 24 horses, 20 head of cattle, 50 voyageurs from Three Rivers, 15 boats. One hundred men with seven officers, will leave here at the same time to go by the gunboat Prince Alfred. She will also take a full cargo of ammunition and stores. Colonel Gilmor, of the Queen's Own, ordered his band out to play the troops to the station, being under the impression that they would have taken their departure yesterday afternoon, when he found such was not to be the case, he directed the band to go to the Crystal Palace, and play for the delectation of the men quartered there. The volunteers evidently appreciated Colonel Gilmor's kindness and applauded the performance of the band most vociferously.

Certain influential Fenians, who were opposed to the present raid, have, it is said, requested President Grant to use his influence in behalf of the Fenians now held prisoners by the Canadians, and it is further stated that the Secretary of State is to confer with Mr. Thornton upon the matter. We submit, however, that this is a question entirely beyond the jurisdiction or influence of either the President or the British Minister. The Fenian prisoners must be held strictly amenable to our laws which they have grossly outraged, and they will have British justice administered to them. But any attempt to exercise Presidential or Ministerial influence in the trial of these marauders will not be permitted for a moment.

A correspondent of the Ottawa Mail describes Reiffenstein on his way to the Penitentiary: "There is one among the passengers, with a light hat and brown coat, with a very nervous, painful look on his haggard face, which he turns quickly every now and then to the person sitting next to him. Near by sat Sheriff Powell. The person is Reiffenstein. Poor Reiffenstein! with his pale face and anxious, restless expression. There was not a man on the car who knew him and saw him, but said that "Reiffenstein was a scapegoat and that there were others just as bad, who were free," and there is not a doubt of it. The law righteously condemned the gentlemanly-like, acutely-suffering, sensitive-appearing prisoner, for a heinous offence, but why send one without the other! Mr. Sheriff, you should by rights have had more than Reiffenstein to have taken there' the heavy gates of the penitentiary, with its clanking iron bolts, and thick heavy bars.

The Windsor Record says that on last Friday morning Chief Constable Port nabbed a fellow named Ryan, who was at the time amusing himself by jostling a Volunteer and declaring himself to be a Fenian. On searching him, several documents were found, establishing his claim to be a member of the Brotherhood. He belonged to an Ann Arbor Circle, and had in his pocket a receipt for his dues up to Thursday. He, like all the gang who cross the lines, made a decided mistake, and will in solitary confinement find leisure to repent his audacity.

Last Saturday morning Col. Bolton called on Col. Orfley, the United States commander at the Sault Ste. Marie, to ascertain if the gunboat Prince Alfred, which had arrived the day before, would be permitted to pass the Canal. Col. Orfley stated that as the gunboat was a vessel of war, connected with the expedition, he could not under his instructions allow her to pass. The Prince Alfred accordingly returned to Collingwood, where she arrived yesterday morning with the gunboat Rescue.

FROM RED RIVER.—Late news from Red River say that everything was quiet, and business was improving. Riel has only a few men under arms, but says he is ready to resort to force if the delegates' demands are not granted. The hunters are waiting to see how the affair will be settled, and say they are prepared to fight for the Provisional Government. No measures of defence have been adopted as yet. Riel has made some changes in his administration, and made a pacific speech.

The gallantry of the Canadian Volunteers and the energetic arrangements of General Lindsay, have not escaped recognition in England, by Gen. George Napier, who had, on a former occasion, an opportunity of witnessing the bravery and endurance of our troops. The English papers, however, continue to praise President Grant for his promptness in issuing and enforcing his proclamation.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Tuesday, 31st May.

WHEAT.—The market continues very fine, with a tendency to advance, in sympathy with the Liverpool and New York markets. No lots offering, and no sales reported. Street prices—Soules, $1.12; Treadwell, $1.11; Spring and Red Winter, 90c to $1. Receipts, as usual on Monday, light.

BARLEY.—Prime samples of barley were offered at 69c, and some very good at 55c, without buyers. There was a sale reported, however, of 1 car of choice at 56c, delivered at Aldwell's, but it is doubtful if many more cars could be sold for that money at present. Street price to-day 50c to 55c, with light receipts.

PEAS.—No sales reported. A small cargo lot was offered at 71c f.o.b., but so far as we heard the transaction was not completed, probably 70c might be obtained. Street price for two or three loads, 67c.

OATS.—No wholesale transactions reported. Street price 37c to 38c.

WOOL.—26c to 28c.

BUTTER.—14c to 16c.

EXTRACTS.—Fellows Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites rank foremost among remedies used in incipient Phthisis, Croupe Bronchitis, and other affections of the chest, and I have no hesitation in stating it

St. John, N. B. S. Z. EARLE, M. D

I strongly recommend the use of Fellows' Compound Syrup Hypophosphites to all who suffer in any way from diseases or weakness of the Lungs, Bronchial Tubes, or general debility

Gagetown, N. B. J. H. W. SCOTT, M. D.

THE ERIE CANAL.—This Canal is 360 miles in length, and the Tolls collected upon it for 1869 amounted to over three million dollars, which is nearly double the amount collected in any previous year; and while our neighbors have so much reason to be pleased at this result, it is gratifying to know that the sale of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" for the cure of coughs, colds, sprains, bruses, rheumatism, frost-bites, chilblains, & Co., is increasing much faster. Sold by all Medicines dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

"He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Proclaim the glad tidings far and near! let all the world rejoice, for the days of excruciating agony, the sleepless nights of woe will be no more! Pain will be but a phantom, a thing of the past, for Briggs' Alexandor will conquer pain, will speedily drive it from the system like chaff before the wind. No matter from what cause, no matter in what portion of the body, when Briggs Allevantor is applied all pain must cease. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 268 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West Toronto.

Save your Doctor's Bills.—When Dr Wister Balsam of Wild Cherry will cure coughs, cold bleeding at the lungs, and arrests the fell demon, Consumption, it does more than most physicians can do. The use of a single bottle costing one dollar, will satisfy the incredulous that they need look no further for the rebuired aid.

If a man wants a bottle of Whiskey, let him buy it and take it home like a man, and not sneak home with a bottle of "Bitters" or "Cordial," and pretend that it is medicine. If he wants a tonic that is better than a temporary simulant, he should get a bottle of Peruvian Syrup (an iron tonic), that will vitalize the blood, and give durable strength to system.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer, consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and has proven as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A WORD.

For every word in the following certificat fenand catrus, after writing to the parties nenged: and to the U. S. Consul, at Rio Janerio, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid.

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 28th, 1866.

- Messrs. Raymonde C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta [a large proprietor, in the Cidad de Campos] was staying at my house he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tosseo, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (16 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tosseo, declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co.s medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might prospire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one desert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the merical of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant

Joaquim Pinto Filcao, Merchant.

SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION.—The general symptoms of this disease are an habitual cough morbid expectoration, pains in the breast, casual flush or feverish heat in the hands, feet, and cheeks, change of voice thin fingers, and nose, bent or crooked nails, falling of the hair &c. This disease has been divided into three four, and even five stages by medical writers; but, for practical purposes, three stages will be found best adapted to the course of the disease. To entirely cure this cough, eradicate all the early symptoms of this fatal malady Dr. J. Briggs' Renovator, the Great Throat and Lung Healer, is thoroughly adequate and sure It is not unpleasant to the palate, and its properties are all of a healing and purifying nature. The Mystic Sea.

BY J. W. QUINBY.

On the sea we go a sailing—
Sailing on the mystic sea,
Waters man hath never measured
Bearing onward you and me;
Wondrous heavens bending o'er us,
Shine with silent mocking ray;
Dark between the stars, the other
Stretches endlessly away,
And through all the unseen Power
Moved with his resistless sway,

Mark, another world within us,
Yes, another world and sky
Yawning sheer with deeps unfathomed,
Towering into mountains high,
Bending heavens tempest-shrouded,
Now with holy stars aflame,
Now with thoughts like meteors flashing,
Dimmed with passion now and shame,—
Who shall solve us this deep riddle—
Give our world a place and name?

None the mystic sea has fathomed,
Read the silver-lettered sky,
Still unfathomed tides about us
Silently go sweeping by,
But the thought comes—God hath sent it—
"Living souls have eyes and ears—
Eyes not vainly made and mocking,
Open, they shall yet be seers;
Ears with grateful rapture hearing
'Come up higher: dry thy tears."

A Sectarian Dog.

A gentlemen owns a dog that has some remarkable instincts. On week days he has all the passions of other dogs, but on Sunday his peculiarities and sectarian sentiments comes out. Unlike the crow, he can count. He knows when Sunday comes. He is not the same dog as on other days. He indulges in no pastimes, encourages no company, and says in action louder than words, 'Six days shalt thou play and do all thy sport.' The family are Presbyterian; the dog is a Methodist. On Sunday mornings he attends the family to the Presbyterian house of worship, and there holds on his solitary and unbroken way until he comes to his own Church, where he sits. No belle or madam of fashion, who sweeps up the side of a popular Church and finds a plebeian in her pew, can give a more decided expression of displeasure than does this dog if he finds any one in his seat. He attends divine service, and pays dogmatical attention to the word of doctrine. An example to many professed Christains, he may be seen on his way to Church in foul weather as well as in fair—not a half-day hearer either; while his denominational preferences are well as those of any gentleman in the city.

What Breaks Down Young Men.

It was a commonly received notion that hard study is the unhealthy element of a college life. But from tables of the mortality of Harvard University collected by Prof. Pierce, from the last triennial catalogue, it is clearly demonstrated that the excess of death for the first ten years after graduation is found in that portion of each class of inferior scholarship. Every one who has seen the curriculum knows that Aeschylus and political economy injures one, late hours and rum punches use up a dozen, and their two little fingers are heavier than the lions of Euclid. Dissipation is a sure destroyer and every young man who follows it is as the early flower, exposed to untimely frost. Those who had been inveigled in the path of vice are named Legion. A few hours sleep each night, high living, and plenty of 'smashes,' make war upon every function of the body. The brains, the heart, the lungs, the flesh, every part and faculty are overtaxed, and weakened by the terrific energy of passion, loosened from restraint, until like a dilapidated mansion, the 'earthly house of this tabernacle falls into a ruinous decay. Fast young men, right about turn, forward.

How To Manage Mistakes.

As a minister and a lawyer were riding together, said the minister to the lawyer:

"Sir, do you ever make mistakes in pleading?"

"I do," said the lawyer.

"And what do you do with the mistakes?" inquired the minister.

"Why, sir, if large ones I mend them; if small ones, I let them go," said the lawyer. "And pray, sir," continued he, "do you ever make mistakes in preaching."

"Yes, sir, I have."

"And what do you do with the mistakes?"

"Why, sir, I dispose of them in the same manner you do—I rectify the large ones, and pass the small ones. Not long since," continued he, "as I was preaching, I meant to observe that the devil was the father of liars, but made a mistake, and said the father of lawyers. The mistake was so small that I let it go."

Advertising for Husbands.

The ladies of Hungary have a knack of advertising in a sensational way. "I am Madlle. Pepi, and my sister is called Netti. Kindly nature has endowed us with all the charms of womanhood. We are both engaged at the Theatre National. I am the chorus. Netti dances in the ballet. We are both of us virtuous girls, especially Netti. If any one believes we are girls to be deceived, he makes a mistake, and has only to enquire of the woman who acts as box-keeper, Madame Kovas. We only desire to be married, firstly, because religion says it is the duty of women; and secondly, because the time has arrived when we should settle, especially Netti. Finally, any one who wishes one or two wives has only to apply. Dated Pesth."

Betrothal of the Prince Imperial.—It is reported in Paris that the Prince Imperial of France, who has lately passed his fourteenth year, is soon to betrothed to a 'German princess of high lineage.' Neither the family nor the name of this princess is mentioned. The Emperor of Austria has one daughter, the Archduchess Gisaale-Louise-Marie' who is now in her fourteenth year. She was born on the 11th of July, 1856, while the Prince Imperial was born on the 16th of March, 1856, so that the Austrian Princess is just four months younger than the French Prince. We suppose this match, which for many reasons, Napoleon would like to see consummated.

To Remove Acid Stains and Restore Color.—When color or fabric has been accidently or otherwise destroyed by acid, ammonia is applied to neutralize the same, after which an application of chloroform will in almost all cases restore the original color. The application of ammonia is common, but that of chloroform is but little known.

Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. The Girl for Me.

Just fair enough to be pretty,
Just gentle enough to be sweet,
Just saucy enough to be witty,
Just dainty enough to be neat.

Just tall enough to be graceful,
Just slight enough for a fay,
Just dress enough to be tasteful,
Just merry enough to be gay.

Just tears enough to be tender.
Just sighs enough to be sad,
Just bold enough to be brave,
Just pride enough for ambition,
Just thoughtful enough to be grave.

A tongue that can talk without harming,
Just mischief enough to tease,
Manners pleasant enough to be charming,
That put you at once at your ease.

Disdain to put down presumption,
Sarcasm to answer a fool,
Contempt enough shown to assumption,
Proper dignity always the rule.

Flights of fair fancy ethereal,
Devotion to science full paid,
Stuff of the sort of material
That really good housewives are made.

Generous enough and kind-hearted,
Pure as the angels above—
Oh! from her may I never be parted,
For such is the maiden I love.

Physical Basis of Life.

If the researches of science have proved anything they have proved this: That the changes which matter undergoes, when organised by the life presence, are distinct from the changes of life which it is capable when that conditioning power is absent; they are wider, more various, more radical. It is not the matter which is changed in its nature; it is the conditioning energy which is different, capable of causing it to assume new combinations, and exercise the power function—a power which is not one with which, in the organized form, it is always associated. Neither is it one in its degree. Between an organic cell and a man, a far wider gulf exists than between an atom and a planet; yet each in physical nature is but an aggregation—the man, of cells the planet, of atoms. Science may never answer the question What is the essential difference between the physical structure and the life which is made manifest through it? It may continuously simplify the subject pointing out which effects are due to one, which to the other; but it does appear to be outstepping all bounds of legitimate enquiry and true philosophy when it seeks to merge the one in the other, and offer, as an explanation of the complex phenomena and manifestations of life, "that it is utterably impossible to prove that anything whatever may not be the effect of a material and necessary cause." This is virtually to stop all inquiry by assuming the very question to which research is endeavoring to find an answer. It does seem to us that, when rightly interpreted, all science but echoes the words of inspiration: "There are differences of administrations, but the same Lord, and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all." All, life, as well as all conditioning and operating physical power, has one grand source—the source of sources—God. Why should science seek to escape from this, the one great, the only fact of the universe, without which all its phenomena are mysteries never to be solved, and around which, if we neglect this the only source of light, there must hang the blackness of darkness forever? The acknowledgement of an all-intelligent, ever-active, ever-sustaining First Cause alone can satisfy the requirements of the question, alone teach us that beneath the "physical basis of life" there lies a more powerful cause, from which, as from an unfailing fountain, the stream of existence has ever flowed. "All things were made by Him; and without Him was not anything made that was made. In Him was life."—Methodist Quarterly (Eng.)

A Crooked Stick.—The other evening a number of persons were relating to one another the various extraordinary incidents which had fallen within their observation. A traveller attracted their attention by the following:—'As I was passing thro' a forest, I heard a rustling noise in the bush near the road, and being impelled by curiosity, I was determined to know what it was. When I arrived at the spot I found it was a large stick of wood, which was so very crooked that it would not lie still.'

A schoolmaster in Michigan advertises as follows: "I propose to spel with enny man, woman or boy in Okelands County for $100 aside, the words to be celected by a committy of literary gents, and the prise to be rewarded by the empires to the one who misses the fewest words. If you hear of enny one who dares to take up this challenge, let them pitch in, solus, bolus; I am ready."

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions and equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

IMPORTANT TO KNOW.

One of Dr. Radway's Pills (made from Vegetable Extracts, prepared in vacuo), taken one hour before dinner, will insure a good appetite, promote digestion, and make healthy flesh. Taken in doses of from 4 to 6, every night, will cure Indigestion, Costiveness, Liver Complaints, Jaundice, and all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, etc.

These Pills are free from drastic, griping and nauseating drugs! They purify the blood, cleanse the intestines, and purge from the system all corrupt and acrimonious humor. Ladies in ill health should use them. Aged persons, subject to Costiveness or Paralysis of the bowles, should take two or three every night, for a few weeks; and the weak, infirm and paralysed bowels will become healthy and vigorous as in the prime of life.

An old gentleman in the city of New York has suffered with costiveness for 20 years, used injections during that time. One dose of Radway's Pills gave him a natural evacuation; six boxes cured him. He now feels more active and enjoys better health than he did 40 years ago. Price 25 cents.

See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.—R R R. Sold by Druggists.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Impure or corrupted blood, which undermines the health and breeds disease, wherever the system may be assailed by its insidious approach, is counteracted and cured by it. Scrofulous complaints, which were aggravated to the most malignant character, and active virus, have been purified and cured by it. Even those apparently hopeless cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders

MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Some Mother's Child.

At home or away, in the alley or street,
Wherever I chance in this wide world to meet,
A girl that is thoughtless, or a boy that is wild,
My heart echoes softly, "'Tis some mother's child."
And when I see them o'er whom long years have rolled,
Whose hearts have grown hardened,' whose spirits are cold
Be it women all fallen, or man all defiled
A voice whispers softly, "Ah! some mother's child."
No matter how far from the right she hath strayed;
No matter what inroads dishonor hath made;
No matter what element cankered the pearl—
Though tarnished and sullied, she is some mother's girl.
No matter how wayward his footsteps have been;
No matter how deep he is sunken in sin;
No matter how low in his standard of joy—
Though guilty and loathesome, he is some mother's boy.
That head hath been pillowed on tenderest breast;
That form hath been wept o'er, those lips have been pressed;
That soul hath been prayed for in tones sweet and mild;
For her sake deal gently with some mother's child.

Literature.

Only one Fault;
OR THE DRUNKARD'S WIFE.

You may see it in Kensel Green Cemetry. A splendid tombstone, with a woman's name upon it. Not Ruth Holly,—though that is the name under which you shall know her—but a prouder name, and one you may have heard. Flowers grow about her tomb, and the turf lies softly over it. You would scarcely guess her life and its sad end as you stand there. Rather would you fancy that love and tenderness surrounded one over whom such a costly pile of sculptured marble rears itself, from her birth to her death.

It is a story such as I seldom write—this life of hers,—one that cannot be ended by happy reunions and the sweet sound of marriage bells; but there are too many such stories in the world, to be quietly passed over, if happily there be any warning in them. The lives of others are, if we read them rightly, the best sermons ever preached; and this one of Ruth Holly's is only too true. Yet it began sweetly, like some old pastoral poem.

She loved, and was beloved again, and the man she loved had only one fault. He was young, he was brave, he was witty, he was handsome, he was generous; his love was devotion, his friendship no lukewarm great power. [illegible] many an audience worth the thrilling.—What he wrote touched the soul to the very quick. He was an amateur painter and musician, and everywhere was loved and honored and admired. He had only one fault in the world—he drank too much wine at times. When he did so, he turned, so said convivial friends, into a very demigod. It was wrong; but not so bad as might have been, and he would sow his wild oats some day, they said, loving him as his friends all loved him; and so Ruth thought. Sweet, loving, beautiful youth, to whom he had plighted his troth, and wooed in verse and song, and with his most eloquent eyes long before he put his passion into words; but so did not think Ruth Martin's father. This one fault of Edward Holly's overshadowed his virtues in his eyes; and he refused him his daughter's hand, giving him the reason why plainly and not kindly.

"You'll be a drunkard yet, Ned Holly," said the old man, shaking his head sternly. "I've seen men of genius go the same road before. I've often said I'd rather have no talent in my family, since it seems to lead so surely to dissipation. My sons are not too brilliant to be sober men, thank heaven; and as for my daughter, only a sober gentleman shall have her for a wife. You'd break her heart, Ned Holly."

So the dashing man of letters felt himself insulted, and retorted hotly, and the two were enemies

Ruth suffered bitterly; she loved her father, and she loved Edward; to disobey her parent or break her lover's heart seemed the only chance offered her. She had other lovers, she had seen much society, and had been introduced to the highest circles in France as well as in England; but amongst all the men she had known, none pleased her as well as Ned Holly did. Not what one styles an intellectual woman herself, she reverenced intellect, and her affections were intense. The struggle in her heart was terrible.

She met her lover by stealth, and against her father's will; but for a long while she resisted his entreaties to marry him in defiance of the old man's refusal. At last, angered by her pesistence in obedience, Edward accused her of fearing to share the fortunes of one comparatively poor,—one who must carve his own way up life's steep hill without assistance. The unmerrited reproach sank deeply into her warm heart, and in a sudden impulse of tenderness and sympathy she gave him the promise which he had so long sought in vain. They were married accordingly, and on their way to London, where Edward, sanguine and conscious of power, believed that he should make for himself a name and position of which any woman might be proud. To her father Ruth wrote a long and loving letter imploring his forgiveness, but the answer crushed all hope within her bosom.

"As you sow, so must you reap," were the words the old man wrote. "I have no longer a daughter;" and Ruth knew that henceforth (for she had been motherless for years), the had in all the world only the husband for whom she sacrificed fortune, and what is far more, the tender protection of a father.

In those early days Edward did his best to make amends for all, and she was so proud of him, and so fond of him that she soon forgot to grieve.

She heard his name uttered in praise by all. She knew that he had but to keep steadily on to mount to the proudest seat in Fame's high temple; and for a year she had no fear of his faltering. Now and then a feverish something in his voice and manner, a strange light in his eye, a greater flow of eloquence in his talk, a more passionate demonstration of love for her than usual, told that he was under the influence of wine; but the fact seemed only to enchance his power of fascination; never was he so brilliant, never so handsome. Almost could Ruth have laughed at the sermons preached by temperance folk, of the harm sure to follow wine-drinking.

If the story could end here,—the true story of Ruth Holly's life, it would be almost a happy one; but alas! the sunny slope down which it seemed so easy to glide daily drew darker as the year flew on. How they began to tell her the fate before her, Ruth hardly knew.

A little flush of shame came first when his step was unsteady and his voice too loud. Then a grieved tear or two when he was unreasonable. Then a sorrow that kept her heart aching day and night, for the man who had first won inspiration from the glass now lost in its depths; lectures to be delivered were not given to the expectant public, because "of the illness of the lecturer."

Ruth knew what that illness meant and tried to hide it. Literary work was neglected also. Money was lost that might have been easily won. Debts grew and credit lessened; the handsome suite of rooms were exchanged for one quite shabby. Ruth's dress became poverty-stricken, her husband was out at the elbows; he was intoxicated from morning until night; and yet she clung to him and to sober moments he loved her as fondly as ever. Sometimes the old strength and the old hope would be aroused in him, and he would struggle to gain his lost position, but it was all in vain; gin triumphed, and five years from her wedding day Ruth found herself and her one remaining child (the first had died within a year of its birth) in the dingiest of wretched houses, in a state bordering on beggary.

Edward had been more madly intoxicated that day than ever before; he had given her a blow, and now, as the night wore on, he muttered and raved, and called for gin, and cursed her and himself, until she trembled with fear. At last, as the clock struck ten he started to his feet, and staggered out of the room, vowing to get drunk somewhere.

Poor Ruth stood where he had left her for a few moments. The memory of the past was strong on her that night. On that day, five years before, they had fled from her father's home together. How tender he was, how loving, how gentle! How he had vowed that she should never regret that day, and how had he kept those promises? He had broken every vow—he neither cherished nor protected her. His worldly goods he had given to the ravenous demon, drink; his love had become a something scarcely worth having; and yet she loved him and clung to him. She tried to feel cold and hard to him, she strove to remember the blow he had given her, the oaths he had uttered, she answered herself as she did so. "It was not he who did it—it was drink. She listened to the uncertain footsteps in the street below, and burst into tears.

"My poor darling!" she whispered, as she thought some grievous calamity had smitten him into the thing he was, and he had not himself "put an enemy into his mouth to steal away his brains," unmindful of her pleading, unmindful of her woe and shame. She thought of him reeling hopelessly along the street, and feared that some harm would come to him. He might injure himself, or some one might injure him. He might fall in some out of the way place, and lie there undiscovered, and so freeze to death that bitter night; and, in her agony of terror, poor Ruth could not restrain herself from following him.

Her poor weakly babe slept; she wrapped it in a blanket and laid it in its cradle. Then she threw her warm shawl over head and hastened down the street, busy this Saturday night with market-going people of the poorer classes.

some, broad-shouldered figure of her husband; and she, a lady bred and born, fastidious, elegant, accomplished, reared in luxury, heard poor laborers wives warn their children to beware of that "drunken fellow."

She heard coarse laughs at his expense, and under the shadow of her shawl her cheek burnt hotly; but, for all that, she never thought of going back and leaving him to himself. As soon as she could, she gained his side and called to him by name, "Edward! Edward!"

He turned, and unsteadily looked at her in a bewildered way.

"You?" he said, "You ought to be at home this time of night."

"So ought we both," said Ruth. "Come dear."

He threw her hand off.

"I'm my own master," he said; "I'm not tied to say womans apron-strings!" and staggered away, Ruth following, through the long street, with every face turned towards them as they passed—some laughing, some contemptuous, some terrified; out at last upon the wharves, and there the besotted sot down more stupified by the liquor he had swallowed, in that fresh, cold air.

Ruth was thinly clad,—the chill of the night wind seemed to reach her very heart. She thought of the babe at home, and tears coursed down her cheeks. Again and again she pleaded with the madman at her side. Again and again she tried to bring to his mind some lingering memory of the past days when his love and protection had been hers. In vain; wild fancies filled his brain; demons, born of the fumes of strong drink, held possession of his senses. Sometimes he thrust her from him; sometimes he gave her a maudlin embrace, and bade her bring him more liquor; but go home he would not.

The hum of the great city died out at last, all was still with the strange stillness of a city at night. The frosty stars twinkled overhead. Now and then a boat passed up the river, with measured beat and throb.—Once a rough looking fellow sauntered past them on the wharf; but though he flung her an insolent word, and a yet more insolent laugh, and went away singing yet more insolently, he did not approach them. So benumbed had Ruth grown, so cold to the very heart was she, that the power of motion had almost deserted her, when at last, as the church clock not far away tolled the hour of four, the degraded man staggered to his feet and reeled homeward. She followed feebly; only by clinging to the balustrade could she mount the wretched stairs. It was bitter cold within as without, but she was glad to find herself at last under shelter Her babe still slumbered, and she did not awaken it. Her frozen bosom could only have chilled the little creature. There were a few bits of broken wood in a corner; and with these she made a fire, and crouched over it, striving to gain a little warmth, while her husband slumbered heavily upon the bed in the corner to which he had staggered on his entrance.

Thus an hour passed by, and Ruth also fell asleep. The silence, the pleasant warmth at her feet, the fancy that all her trouble was over for the night, lulled her to pleasant dreams. From them she was awakened by the loud ringing of a neighboring factory bell, and by the sound of cries and shouts in the street below. She cast her eyes toward the bed—her husband was not there! toward the cradle—it was empty! She flew to the window—the street below was full of factory boys. Some great jest amused them mightily. They roared, they danced, they tossed their ragged caps on high, they shrieked in unmusical laughter; and the object of all this mad mirth was only too evident.

On the steps of the public-house opposite stood Edward Holly holding his child in his arms, and exhibiting, for the benefit of the delighted crowd, all those antics of which an intoxicated man alone is capable! He called on the grinning landlord of the gin-shop to "Give this child some brandy," and turned the screaming infant about in a manner that left no doubt that he would end by dropping it upon the pavement.

Wild with terror, Ruth rushed out into the street, and made her way through the crowd to the spot where her husband stood; but before she reached him, the scene changed. Some boy, more brutal than the rest, had thrown a handful of mud into Edward Holly's face; and he, reeling and blaspheming, had dashed forward to revenge the act.

The child had been flung away at the first step, but fortunately, had been caught by an "unfortunate" who, though a degraded creature herself, had enough of the woman remaining to save an infant from injury.

And now the whole horde of boys beset the drunken man, pelting him with sticks and stones and decayed vegetables from the kennel, and revelling in the brutal delight with which such a scene always seems to inspire boys of the lower classes.

Ruth saw that her babe was safe, and that her husband was in danger; and, forgetful of all else, flew madly to him, thus cared nothing for the jeers of the mob; before them all she flung her arms about him, and interposed her beautiful person between him and his assailants. The head that had carried itself a little proudly in the presence of the highest of the land, now dropped itself low on the bosom of the drunken wretch who was the jest and the cure of a low mob; and only in love and pity, not in anger, did she speak to him.

"Come home, Edward; they'll hurt you, my poor love, come home with me."

Mad as he was—filled with the demon of drink, to the exclusion of the soul God had given him—the soft, sweet voice, the fond touch of the white finger awakened some memory of the past in the man's breast.

"Go home, girl," he whispered; "I'll kill them. Don't fret. I'll kill 'em, and ——"

"Come home, darling," she whispered again; and he stooped and gave her a kiss. At that the boys yelled derisively, and flung more mud and stones at them. One threw a stone—a heavy stone, sharp-pointed and jagged. Whether he ever intended to strike the man is doubtful, but the missle flew fiercely through the air, and crushed against the golden head of the devoted wife. A stream of blood gushed from the white temple and poured down upon her bosom. Only with a quivering shudder of pain she felt for the face of the man who had sworn to love and cherish her, and had broken that vow so utterly while hers had been so truly kept.

"Good-bye, Edward," she whispered; "I can't see you now—kiss me! Oh, be good to baby! Be good to baby!" and so word more.

The crowd was hushed to silence. The culprit slunk away in terror. A sobered man bent over the dead woman, whose hands had dropped away from his breast; and the love, and truth, and tenderness of the heart were all manifest to him in that terrible moment,—manifest in vain, for repentance could not restore her to life, nor blot out the love which had crushed her heart through all those weary days of her married life.

"What is the matter here?" cried a voice as a portly man forced his way through the crowd. "A woman hurt?"

"A woman killed," said a policeman, and that brute is the cause of all.

The gentleman bent forward, and started back with a cry of anguish.

[illegible] into the [illegible] and death-like swoon.

Forgiveness and repentance had come alike too late for poor Ruth Holly. Her father could give her nothing but a grave.

The child, born amidst want and penury nourished by a half-starving mother, pined away and died in the luxurious home to which its grandfather bore it; and now, as the old man sits alone in his splendid mansion, he sometimes hears a strange, wild cry in the street outside, through which a drunken creature reels and staggers, howling over and anon. "Ruth, Ruth, Ruth!"

It is Edward Holly, who, ever in his drunken madness, searches for his murdered wife. It is the painful, horrible, heart-breaking wreck of the splendidly beautiful man of talent, who had only one fault.

Death and the Grave.

"I am hungry," said the Grave. "Give me food."

Death answered: "I will send forth a minister of awful destruction, and you shall be satisfied."

"What minister will you send?"

"I will send alcohol. He shall go in the guise of food and medicine, pleasure and hospitality. The people shall drink and die."

And the grave answered: "I am content."

And now the church bells began to toll, and the mournful procession to advance.

"Who are they bringing now?" said the Grave.

"Ah," said Death, "they are bringing a household. The drunken father aimed a blow at his wife. He killed the mother and her child together, and then dashed out his own life."

"And who," said the Grave, "comes next, followed by a train of weeping children?"

"This is a broken-hearted woman who has long pined away in want, while her husband has wasted his substance at the tavern. And he too is borne behind, killed by the hand of violence."

"And who next?"

A young man of generous impulses who, step by step, became dissipated and squandered his all. My agent turned him out to be frozen in the street."

"Hush!" said the Grave, "now I hear a wail of anguish that will not be silenced."

"Yes, it is the widow's cry. It is the only son of his mother. He spurned her love, reviled her rod, and a bloated corpse he comes to thee. And thus they come—further than the eye can reach, the procession crowds to thy dark abodes. And still, lured by the enchanting cup which I have mingled, the sons of men crowd the paths of dissipation. Vainly they dream of escape, but I shut behind them the invisible door of destiny. They know it not, and with song and dance and riot, they hasten to thee, O Grave! Then I throw my fatal spell upon new throngs of youth, and soon, they too, will be thine."

When a girl of fifteen years of age marries a man of forty-five years, he, of course, is three times as old as she. After having lived together for fifteen years, she will be thirty and he sixty; the husband being but twice as old as his wife. How long, according to this rule, would they have to live together until she would be the same age as he.

A pledge of total abstinence from wine and all spirituous liquors is required as a condition of admission to the Theological Seminary of the Western Turkey Mission at Marsovan. That is a grape-growing district.

Four thousand women, of Manchester, N. H., signed an appeal to the liquor-dealers to stop their deadly business, and appointed a committee of one hundred ladies to carry the appeal personaly to the rum-sellers.

Sixty illict distilleries have been broken up during the last few weeks in the mountain counties of Eastern Tennessee and Western North Carolina.

The Drunkard.

Very few persons would be willing to marry an habitual drunkard: but it is not generally known what a great risk is run in marrying the son or daughter of an habitual, although they themselves are strictly temperate from high moral principle; indeed, it is not an uncommon thing to find the children of beastly drunkards the very model of temperance, from having had before their own eyes, for years in succession, the terrible evils of habitual inebriation.

It is one of the indisputable facts in physiology, and the observations of intelligent men confirm the truth, that certain diseases and taints of body, and traits of mind, are transmitted from father to son. So well and firmly is this impression fixed on the minds of men, that when a man becomes insane one of the very first efforts is to endeavor to ascertain if it is not "in the family," and it is comparatively seldom that such is not proved to be the case.

Another important fact is this: hereditary traits and taints sometimes overleap a generation, arising most probably from the fact that one parent has extraordinary good health, sufficiently vigorous to stave off the malady for a time; but the germ of virus the malady is in the immediate decendant for all that and to the utmost that if the grand child marries one who has a similar taint, the offspring develops the characteristic of the grandparent.

Drunkenness is a transmissible malady, because anatomical investigations demonstrate that the brain of a drunkard, after a comparatively few indulgences, becomes organically impaired, and when that is the case it is just as impossible to repair the injury as to have a new finger grow in place of one which has been remov

THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1870.

RAILWAY MEETING IN PETERBOROUGH.

On Tuesday evening, a Railway Meeting was held in the County Council Chamber. The members of the County Council, and a few of the Town Council were present.

The Mayor in the Chair.

M. Bowell, Esq., M. P., North Hastings, addressed the meeting on behalf of the scheme of a Railway from Belleville to Peterboro, with the prospect of a Western extension to Georgian Bay.

P. M. Grover, Esq., M. P. followed him, advocating strongly the road, and showing the great advantages it would be to the Town, as what benefited the one must benefit the other largely, and instancing the progress of places with several lines of Roads or Canals leading to them.

Mr. Diamond, of Belleville, followed, of course, in the interest of the railroad to Belleville, and made a very telling speech on its behalf, remarking that they only came to hear if Peterboro was in favor of or against it, so that they of Belleville might be guided accordingly. He also showed the advantages of increased communications and consequent cheaper freight.

P. Pearce, Esq., was called on, and gave the history of the Grand Junction, showing that this County first originated this scheme and got the charter, but that they were sold, and the chartered transferred to the Grand Trunk Co. The County too had spent $6,000 or so in survey and other preliminaries, while Peterboro and Victoria voted £125,000 stock in the road. He was still desirous to see the road constructed, and he believed the East would sustain it if now submitted.

Mr. Carnegie being called, remarked that he was on the fence in the matter, as it would depend much on how much asked for, and the chances of getting dollar for dollar back. He was opposed to the road, unless in connection with the Grand Trunk road, and an arrangement that bulk would not be broken at Belleville. The rate of freight should also be settled, and a guarantee given that it would never exceed that from Port Hope to Belleville.

Here there was some cross-firing between Mr. Carnegie and Messrs. Diamond and Bowell.

Mr. Dumble remarked that he thought the railway would be of advantage to the Town and County, and it could do no injury. The road to Belleville would make us a frontier Town.

Mr. Carnegie was so peculiarly connected with a paper that opposed everything but the Port Hope Road, that he must be the people. The Deputation only asked us were we in favor of the road, or did we believe it would do us any good; they did not ask money yet; and he thought we ought at once to say that we believe it would do us a great good, as most assuredly it would—freight on the Port Hope road being enormously high—as high nearly from Port Hope to Peterboro as from Montreal to Port Hope.

Mr. Way explained that the road would be so much more level that larger trains would pass over it than could over the P. H. R. R., that freight would be less, and then the distance would be 30 miles less.

Mr. Carnegie said that freight now to Montreal was as favourable by the P. H. road as it could be, and that freight from Belleville to Montreal was no cheaper than from Port Hope, and retorted warmly to Mr. Dumble's remarks, receiving them with contempt.

Here Mr. Bowell referred to the fire of Editors generally, and reminding Mr. Carnegie that he was no exception and rather insinuated selfish motives to his opposition, as no guarantees could be obtained, no Company ever gave them, the opposition of roads would equalize all difference of tariff.

Mr. Dumble explained that any person raising opposition to the scheme put obstacles in its way, which he thought should not be done as the road would largely benefit the town, and should be favorably received.

Mr. Clurton, as a director, defended the Port Hope road against charges of high freight, and concluded by saying it might be the duty of the county to support the Belleville road, but it was not the interest of the town.

Mr. Carnegie raised the subject of the "Gauges," "broad," "narrow" or "medium," and contended that that should be settled before the Town did anything.

Mr. P. Pearce thought the discussion of the guages premature. When the Company should be formed, Mr. Carnegie would be a Provisional Director, and then he could discuss the subject of "guages."

Mr. Stevenson followed in nearly the same strain of remarks, but twitted the Reeves of Smith and Otonabee, for their unwillingness to vote money for improvements.

Mr. J. F. Donnistoun supported the views of Mr. Carnegie, and thought there should be guarantees given before voting them any money.

The parties quieted down here after some remarks from Mr. Bowell.

It was moved by Mr. Bowell, seconded by Mr. Carnegie to the following effect. That in the opinion of this meeting, a Road from Belleville to Peterboro with a view to extension westward would be of immense advantage to the section of Country through which it shall pass, and to the Town and County generally.

This was carried unanimously. The meeting then dispersed.

Owing to the lateness of the Keene meeting we are unable to do more than give a synopsis of their minutes.

CHILD SCALDED TO DEATH.—We regret to learn that on Monday last, while Mrs. Welsh, of Ashburnham, was lifting a pot of boiling water off the stove, her little child, about 18 months old, caught the pot and turned the contents on itself, so severely scalding it that it died in a short time.

Railroad Meeting at Keene.

On Wednesday, a Deputation from Belleville, on behalf of the Grand Junction Railway, met the people of Otonabee, at Keene. The Deputation consisted of M. Bowell, M.P., — Brown, M.P. and Messrs. Diamond, Benjamin, Robinson and Kelso. Mr. Millar, Reeve of the Township, occupied the Chair. The members of the County Council also availed themselves of the opportunity of being present.

About 150 farmers from the different parts of the Township were present, and appeared quite interested in the scheme of a Railroad from Belleville to Peterboro', through Otonabee, Asphodel, Seymour, &c.

As soon as the meeting was called to order, Mr. Kelso, President of the Board of Trade, Belleville, handed in a letter from the Hon. Billa Flint, expressing his regret for his inability to attend, and referring to the advantages of the railway, and expressing strong hopes for the future of the scheme.

It was moved by Dr. McRae, seconded by Wm. Laing, Esq., and

Resolved,—That the construction of a railroad from Belleville to Peterborough would greatly develope the resources of of the Country, and be of great advantage to the section of country through which it should pass.

Mr. Diamond, of Belleville, was called on to inform the meeting of the scheme, and the object of the Deputation.

He commenced by referring to the interest everywhere manifested in the undertaking, and to the fact, that the County of Peterboro' first, about 18 years ago had been instrumental in obtaining the Charter for the Grand Junction R. R., and had also at that time promised half a million dollars to the road. The Charter had been transferred, through influence to the Grand Trunk Company, but it had failed to build it, and now Belleville had resuscitated the matter, and in consequence, a Deputation from that Town was there before them ready to explain the object of the promoters of the scheme. They had come to see, were the people still in favor of the road, and if so, would they lend their aid to it now. He referred to the advantages of communication from the interior of this section with the front via Belleville, contrasting the present era of railroads with the old stage coaches of 30 years ago.

Of course the deputation were not before them as beggars praying aid for a Belleville enterprize, but they were there to discuss the mutual advantages, and to ask the Ratepayers that if there were advantages, as undoubtedly there would be, and important ones too, were they ready to come forward and join with Belleville to construct the road. They had been asked at Peterboro, if the people would grant $200,000 or $250,000 how would they get it back. Farmers would like to know this too, but the amount of return could not be calculated as the advantages of increased trade and conveyance are such as cannot be easily calculated.

He referred, in proof of this, to Chicago 30 years ago, and Chicago with its 200,000 inhabitants, and immense railway communications of to-day. Then it exported 78 bushels of grain; last year, 67,000,000 bushels; and at present it pays about $22,000,000 of freight annually—a sum greater than the revenue of the Dominion. He also said what would Peterboro' be to-day without a railway, and what would the section of the County be without it? It is said that buyers in Peterboro do not give within 10 cts. per bush. of front town prices. But, he remarked, that this was in part at least because freight out was so high, which a second railway would tend to modify very much. The road too was to run through some townships that would afford a large traffic. Manufactories could be started at every point of the Trent, and this the country become wealthy. He did not favor taking stock in the road, but rather bonuses, and being done with future annexation. The money too would be spent among ourselves, and flow back into the pockets of the donors.

He expected opposition from the Town of Peterboro,' but that opposition was from interested parties, parties in interest of the Port Hope Road, but two roads must prove of great advantage to that Town. He concluded by expressing a hope that ere long they would again meet to take some more tangible step in the great work, as at present their only duty was to discuss the matter, and see if they were in favor of the Grand Junction, and would they come forward and aid in the work?

Wm. Laing, Esq., the seconder of the motion, gave his reasons for so doing. It was because he believed a road would be of immense advantage to the section of the country through which it would pass, and more especially to Otonabee. He made a calculation, based upon giving $40,000 of a bonus, and he found that the cost to pay off all in 20 years would be about $3 per $1,000 of assessment; but he thought a gain of 4 cents on every bushel of grain would be ensured, and then 100 bushels would realize $1 more than would have to be paid on every $1,000 of property, which would amply repay for the outlay, besides the increased trade in cattle and other things.

P. M. Grover, Esq., M.P. being called on said he was in favor of the Railway, as he knew it would benefit the whole Country through which it passed, and indeed the whole county.

It would create a market for every thing raised, and would enable the farmers to turn to other products than wheat, which at the best was a dear, doubtful crop. It would bring the front thirty miles back and make Dour, Dummer and other places in the same position as Port Hope and Cobourg.

The money to be given by us, will not be equal to what was spent in the Municipalities, while the property will be increased in value. The Deputation came to urge to a duty, and he hoped the people would not be slow to take the advice.

Moved by Geo. Read, Esq., M. P. P., seconded by Thos. Blezard, Esq., and

Resolved,—That this meeting is of the opinion that the Board of Provisional Directors, should be organized with all convenient speed, for the purpose of preparing a proper scheme for the construction of such Railway, and to lay the same before the Municipalities interested, with the view of their granting such aid by way of bonus.

Mr. Read, in proposing it, remarked that he was in favor of railroads, and that it was wise to organise the company and see what could be done. He was in favor of having the road as near Keene and Allandale as possible. It would bring Otonabee as near the front as Port Hope, and this would be a saving of fifty per cent on cost of getting to market. It was most assuredly the interest of Otonabee to aid the road, and without delay, as by doing so Otonabee would then be one of the best townships in the province.

P. Pearce, Esq., being called on, said that he believed his views and those of the people of Otonabee were one. Otonabee was an influential Township, and had always paid largely to other Townships for improvements, and he thought now they could ask the others to come forward and assist them now in return.—The measure was undoubtedly a County measure, and should be taken up by the County, and then the work might be expected to prosper. He hoped that the next time they all met, it would be in connection with the approach of the Iron Horse to Keene and Peterboro'.

These ideas seemed to meet those of all present.

Mr. Bowell, M. P. P., of Belleville, was called for, and in a few remarks stated the object of the Deputation, and said that the road would be of mutual advantage to all concerned, and hence they merely came to see if the people considered it an advantage, and if so, would they aid by their money.

Mr. John Kindred, wished to know where it would be located, as if it only passed through a corner, it would not receive much support.

The chairman, Mr. Miller, stated that as there was not a determined survey, the location could not be named.

Mr. Way, a member of the deputation urged the advantage to the Country, and hoped that yet the road would run West to Lake Huron, and as it is the shortest route it would be the great carrying route of the west.

All the resolutions were carried almost unanimously.

Mr. Millar was then requested to leave the chair, and the Warden, S. S. Peck, Esq., voted into it, and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Millar for the able manner in which he had discharged the duties.

Thanks to the Deputation were proposed by Mr. Read and seconded by Mr. Kindred.

A vote of thanks being proposed for the Warden and County Council, Mr. Peck remarked that they deserved no thanks for doing their duty. He was there to find out the wishes of the people, and he would have no hesitation in submitting a by-law to the ratepayers, and be guided by their vote.

The meeting then broke up, well pleased with the result and with each other.

County Council.

JUNE MEETING.

Tuesday, 7th inst.

S. S. Peck, Esq., Warden, in the Chair.

The Council met. All the members present.

The Warden read the following address:

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

GENTLEMEN,—

I have deemed it for the best interest of the County to call you together two weeks earlier than usual, to enable you to take such action as you may think advisable for the repairs of the various roads and bridges damaged by the recent floods.

In accordance with your instructions, I have made certain improvements in the Council Chamber, which I trust will meet with your approval.

The following communications herewith submitted have been received, viz:

From G. Zowskie, in regard to the Ontario Rifle Association; from J. B. McGann, Superintendent of the Deaf and Dumb Institution, asking a donation; from the Secretary of the Peterboro' Immigration Society of the Town of Peterboro', asking for a grant to enable said committee to assist and encourage immigration to this County; from the Commissioner of Public Works, in regard to immigration; from the Council of the County of Peel, in regard to extra pay to the volunteers; from the Commissioner of Crown Lands, in regard to necessary repairs on the Bobcaygeon and Burleigh Roads.

It becomes your duty at this meeting to equalize the different Assessment Rolls and provide for the current expenses of the year.

It will also be your duty at this meeting, in accordance with the Jury Act, to pass a By-law regulating the payment of certain fees to the Sheriff.

The award of the arbitrators fixing the amount to be paid by the Town of Peterboro to the County of Peterboro, in connection with the administration of Justice, expires with this year, and it will be your duty to appoint an arbitrator on behalf of the County.

The plans, specifications, estimates of costs and tenders for the erection of the Lakefield Bridge, will be laid before you.

(Signed) S. S. PECK,
Warden.

June 7th, 1870.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Armstong, Messrs. F. Peck, Walton, Rogers, Millar, Clogg and the Mover and Seconder were appointed a committee on the address.

Mr. Millar mentioned that a deputation from Wallace Point Bridge were present.

On motion of Mr. Millar, seconded by Mr. Blezard, Mr. Willan addressed the Council, praying that they would take some action with a view to assist in repairing said Bridge.

On motion of Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Coughlan, the matter referred to by Mr Willan, was referred to the committee on Roads and Bridges.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, Messrs. Gilmour, Millar, Brown, Rogers, Walton, McDonald and the Mover and seconder were appointed a committee to equalize the Assessment Rolls.

On motion of Mr. Coughlan, seconded by Mr. Brown, John Carnegie, Junr. was appointed Sessional Clerk for the present Session in place of Mr. Balmer, who was absent from the County.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Armstong, the memorial of the Municipal Council of Dummer, praying for aid to erect Bridges in Dummer and Burleigh, was referred to committee on Roads and Bridges.

The Council adjourned to 9 o'clock on Wednesday.

WEDNESDAY.

All the members present. The Warden, S. S. Peck, in the chair.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The Warden stated that the auditors had submitted certain papers, and

On motion of Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Walton, the report of the auditors was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Armstrong moved that application for aid to construct certain bridges in Belmont, be referred to the Road and Bridge Committee.

Mr. Walton was only in favor of repairing County Roads and Bridges.

Mr. Armstrong wished to know why certain roads or bridges were considered belonging to the County, and if Mr. Walton's principles were carried out, why should Belmont be called upon to aid in building the Lakefield Bridge.

But the bridge referred to was a necessity, as well as certain other bridges belonging to the County; and he, Mr. Armstrong, was willing to aid the other parts of the County, but he wished to be treated in the same way.

Mr. Millar thought it was hard to ask townships to build bridges in other municipalities after building their own.

Mr. Rogers explained what were County Roads and Bridges, and remarked that Ashburnham had to re-build five bridges, and if the County did re-build them it would be the same as if the municipality did it.

Mr. Blezard thought it was better for each municipality to build its own bridges, as it could do it cheaper than the County Council.

Mr. Walton thought that only those bridges and roads over which they had control should be provided for by this Council.

Mr. Armstrong only wished the matter referred to the committee.

Mr. Brown thought then that Mr. Armstrong was taking up time of Council to no purpose. He believed that each township could build its own bridges cheaper, as a practical man could build them for nearly the cost of an engineer.

The Warden read the statute referring to County Roads and Bridges, showing what roads, &c., are County Roads, and he thought it would be better to go into committee of the whole on the roads and bridges.

Mr. McCarthy thought that the matter of grants was settled when the division was made last January. There were bridges destroyed everywhere, and as the old townships have to pay the heavy taxes, he was in favor of dividing to each township all grants, certainly not of special grants to special townships.

Mr. Garbutt had spent several days examining bridges in Smith, and his township had spent $1,000 on bridges. He was not in favor of special grants except to new townships such as Burleigh, &c., as not being able to rebuild their own bridges, and these new townships would require aid.

Mr. Armstrong did not ask for a special grant for his township, but surely he had a right to ask for aid for a County road or bridges, and he thought in this, Belmont and Dummer should be treated as other townships, and other townships might get a special grant if they desired it, but Belmont was not in a position to borrow money.

Mr. Millar would favor lending money to Belmont, provided Belmont gave Debentures to pay back, and interest.

Mr. Coughlan was not in favor of completely locking up certain bridges, if the Municipality was not able to do the repairs.

Dr. Clegg thought the County Council should aid the new townships, as they were not able to do the recent repairs, as they are certainly broken down, and require aid. Like a kind parent the Council should put them in a position to help themself. Other matters, too, will come up in committee.

Mr. Walton begged leave to correct the Reeve of Burleigh, in reference to the division of money for roads, &c. The old townships had granted liberally to the new, and it was ungrateful in the Reeve of Burleigh to talk as he had done.

Mr. Miller thought the Township Councils should add a mill on the dollar for bridges.

Mr. Carter marked that that the new townships were highly taxed, as high as 2½ cents on the dollar and it was certainly oppressive.

Mr. Coughlan remarked that Messrs. Choate & Armstrong were working nicely together.

Mr. McCarthy would remark that the Reeve of Burleigh might get thousands of dollars, and not satisfy him. He, (Mr. McC,) was in favor of going into committee of the whole on a general grant.

Mr. Rogers thought it better for Council to go into committee of the whole, and he moved in amendment that they do go into committee of whole and discuss the matter, and let all the claims be submitted.

The Warden explained that the meeting at Keene takes place to-day (Wednesday,) and several members had to attend.

Mr. Armstrong with leave, withdrew his motion, to bring it before committee of the whole.

Mr. Rogers' amendment was carried, and the Council went into committee of whole, but moved to sit again on Thursday at 9 o'clock.

COUNCIL RESUMED.

Dr. Clegg then read report of committee on Warden's address, which was adopted.

REPORT.

The committee in the Wardens address beg leave to report:

1. Your committee regret that circumstances have required the Warden to call us thus earlier together than usual, but quite coincide in his views of the matter considering the requirements of the public.

2. Your committee express their entire approval of the arrangements of the Council Chamber.

3. In reference to the communications from various institutions, your committee recommend the matter to the several committees connected therewith.

4. Your committee feel assured that the committee appointed for the equalization of the Assessment Rolls will use great care that each Municipality shall be fairly rated, and in just proportion.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) SIDNEY W. CLEGG,
Chairman.

On motion of Mr. Blezard, seconded by Mr. Millar, a By-law to appoint an arbitration between the Town and County was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. Choate, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, a By-law to fix certain fees to Sheriff was read a first time.

The Council adjourned till 9 o'clock on Thursday, to meet in committee of the whole on grants to roads and bridges.

57th Battalion Band.

We have received the following communication from a committee of the band for publication. It will, we trust, remove some wrong impressions in regard to Mr. Rackett:—

To CAPT. H. ROGERS,

Chairman Band Committee.

Sir,—At the recent interview held by your committee with the Band of the 57th Battalion, it was represented to us that, owing to a variety of circumstances, you found it very difficult to raise the amount required to pay the salary of our bandmaster, Mr. Rackett, for the ensuing year. Amongst others, reference was made to certain prejudices existing against Mr. Rackett by a few parties on account of certain charges alleged to have been made by him for the services of the Band rendered on some occasions, which were considered excessive, while on others a comparatively small charge is stated to have been made to travelling companies, such as theatres; and the responsibility of such acts imputed to Mr. Rackett alone, such statements are calculated to prejudice the public opinion against him, and we thought it better to address you in this public manner to remove that difficulty, as Mr. Rackett never took a prominent part in any engagement the band ever made, but always submitted it to a majority of the band.

It was with feelings of regret, that we have since learned that you have decided to terminate the existing engagement, on account of lack of public support, and we take this opportunity of expressing our sense of the worth and ability of our present leader, and we believe we are justified in saying, also, that the people of Peterboro share with us in the same sentiments. We are satisfied that he is entitled to the gratitude of the Peterboro public, and we believe, that if an appeal was made to them, they will promptly respond on his behalf.

This being the case we would like to see Mr. Rackett remain, and so help to keep an efficient band together, as he has their entire confidence. We therefore ask that you will give the public of Peterboro one more chance to say whether they will pay his salary or not.

And we remain,

Dear Sir.

THE BAND.—We are glad to announce that the Band of the 57th Battalion will play in the Court House park, on Friday evening, the 10th instant. We believe that the band will play out every week during the summer on the same evenings.

IMMIGRATION COMMITTEE.—We have been requested to state that there will be a meeting of the Immigration Committee this evening, at 8 o'clock, p. m. in the Council Chamber.

THE ROCHESTER MUSICAL TIMES.—The first number of the second volume of this musical monthly is before us. It is attractive in appearance, ably conducted, newsy and readable, containing 16 pages large octavo—including eight [illegible] of musical reading, and from three to four pages of choice new music for the piano or cottage organ, and a supplement to each number containing a piece of music carefully arranged for a full Brass Band of twelve instruments.

It also contains all the current musical events of interest, and discusses every variety of musical topics, interesting and valuable to the teacher, the chorister, the minister, the entire membership of brass bands and orchestras, and especially the home circle, where the harmonizing influences of music are most potent and refining. No family having a musical instrument can afford to dispense with the MUSICAL TIMES, since they obtain, besides all the valuable reading matter, $5 worth of music for $1 the subscription price of the paper. And every brass band in America should take it with the Supplement, at only $3 a year, obtaining twelve excellent pieces of music for a full band for the price ordinarily paid for one. Mr. J. P. SHAW, the publisher, will promptly answer all inquiries in reference to the Supplement, and desires to obtain the names of every band leader in the country.

Father McMahon.

The Reverend Father McMahon appears to have a peculiar fondness for Canada and Canadians. He is only a few months out of our penitentiary, and yet here is on the border, trying to get in again. When arrested in '66, he vowed and declared, and was willing to swear, that he had nothing to do with the Fenians, but merely happened to meet them at Buffalo by chance, and was in a measure pressed into the service by them. Is it by chance that he is amongst them again? Our despatches state that he is at Malone, that he is encouraging the ruffians all he can, and that telegraphed to Chicago advising them to "keep sending them to the front." What a consummate liar this renegade parson is. He appears to want hanging. Probably he thinks we treated him badly in not hanging him when we had him before. He can make up his mind that he will be accommated with a rope this time, should he afford us an opportunity. But he will take good care that he keeps south of the boundary line, for he knows that a halter is ready for him. While we write, a despatch informs us that Father McMahon has been arrested by the American authorities, and clapped in jail. A prison is not a fit place for a clergyman, but it is no novelty to Father McMahon. We are sorry for him, as it unfortunately reduces our chances of hanging him. Gen. Gleeson, the commander-in-cheif since O'Neil's arrest, is McMahon's companion in prison, he also having been taken into custody by the American authorities.—Telegraph.

A Fenian Reviewed.

One man was more communicative than his neighbor to the Sun reporter.

Reporter—Well Dennis, how did you enjoy your trip?

Dennis—Devil such a trip I iver had.

Reporter—What was the matter?

Dennis—Everything; gitting to the front was all right, but whin we got there we were like babies without a mother.

Reporter—How so?

Dennis—We were like sheep in a pin.

Reporter—You did some fighting!

Dennis—We might ha' done some, but there was thousands of red-coats ready for us. Whin we marched up the open road, the blackguards got up from behind ivery stone, and were as thick as flies around a hogshead

Reporter—But your troops opened fire?

Dennis—Devil the bit! Before we knew the rouges were near us; they blazed away a thousand guns.

Reporter—Did'nt your general give you orders?

Dennis—How could he, begora, when he was away in the rear, drinking "gin and milk" in a farm house?

Reporter—What did you do?

Dennis—Well, I took to my legs and ran as hard as I could, and never looked at what the others did.

ST. ALBANS, June 1.—Gen. Donnelly was arraigned to-day before U. S. Commissioner H. B. Smalley, and waived examination. He was ordered to be committed to the Franklin County Jail in default of $10,000 bail. He is able to be about his room, but hardly able to go to jail, and, as he hopes to get bail in a day or two, he remains at the Weldon in charge of a Deputy Marshal.

The body of Rowe was willingly given up to his friends on request being made to Gen. Col. Wolcott Smith, commanding the Canadian forces on the southern frontier, by Deputy Marshal J. M. Smalley. The request had been granted, except to keep armed men on the grave. At the disinterment Col. Smith would not even permit Montreal photographers to take the scene.

The following is extracted from an account of the fires near Fort William:—A tremendous fire occurred in the vicinity of Fort William. For twenty-five miles the fire swept over the country, devasting everything it came in contact with. Some twenty of the bridges on Dawson's road have been completely destroyed, and three hundred men have been set on the road to renew them. So fierce and rapid was the rush of the fire that the inhabitants at the silver mine, five miles from Fort William, had to betake themselves, men, women and children, to the shaft of the mine, and remain there from nine in the morning till five in the afternoon. The devouring element has swept over an extent of fifty miles, destroying everything in its course. Subsequent investigation shows that it was caused by settlers who were clearing their lands. So suddenly did the fire sweep down upon the mines above Fort William, that those lying in that vicinity were forced to take refuge in the shaft of the mine, and remain there from ten in the morning until five in the evening.

TO BOYS.—Boys listen to us a moment. Do you wish to become good men, influential citizens? Do you wish to command the respect of the wise and good? Then abstain from all that is evil. Go not into improper society; use no profane or indecent words; speak no falsehood; never cheat; never lie;—be perfectly honest. Remember your conduct now, will have an influence over your life. If you are virtuous and improve your time in useful pursuits we have no hesitancy in saying, that if you live you will become ornaments to society. On the contrary, if you yield to bad examples and influences, have no regard to virtue or truth, break the Sabbath, wander about with the profane and idle during your leisure evenings, we tell you plainly that it will prove your ruin Be careful then to do right, to have the fear of God before you, and to walk in the path of integrity. Then your early days will be the precursors of a glorious manhood and a useful and happy life.

A BRIGADE CAMP.—A memorandum from Ottawa recently instructed the Deputy Assistant Adjutant General commanding the District to place himself in communication with officers commanding corps in his district, in order to ascertain and report at once as to what period during the approaching season will be most convenient for carrying on the annual drill of the several corps in Brigade Camp, or otherwise; report to state the most desirable locality for camp, and whether rifle ranges are available or convenient. We believe that this form has been complied with, and that a camp will be formed this month at or near Cobourg, in which all the force of this division, four battalions of infantry and one squadron of cavalry will be concentrated. The benefit of brigading the Volunteers together would be inestimable if the time were extended to a month.—Cobourg Star.

SUNSTROKE IN A PROCESSION.—We understand that one of the children who were lately carrying banners in a Catholic school procession, has since been taken sick, and is pronounced to be dangerously suffering from sunstroke received on that occasion. We have frequently felt called upon to condemn the exposure of children bare-headed in processions, particularly during hot weather, and this is only another instance of the danger attending the practice.

THE NORTH-WEST INDIANS.—A letter has been received in town from the Indian Agent at Fort Francis, in which he states that he had just returned from a visit to the Indian Chiefs, and that he found them all favorable to the Canadian Government and open to make a Treaty. The writer of the letter has resided for twenty years past at Fort Francis, as Agent of the Hudson's Bay Company.—Globe.

Ontario False to Herself.

There is one thing we cannot understand, and that is how Ontario has permitted Manitoba to be hoodwinked over to the Church of Rome. It is said that in vain in the arts of the sleight of any bird, but it was spread in this case in full view of the entire Province of the Dominion,—a Province which has only to say "hold, enough!" to frustrate any combination [illegible] and which has not yet resigned into Bishop Taché and Father Richot's arms, with a gushing readiness that is quite inexplicable.

Ontario naturally feels jealous of the sectional preponderance of French Quebec in the Dominion Councils; why, then by her own voters, establish another French Province on her other side. When they catch a wild elephant in India they put it between two tame elephants, till it be completely subdued by a liberal application of "crook" on either side, and a similar policy appears to be adopted by the French race, under the dictation of the Catholic Church, in British North America, towards restive Ontario,—a policy which is adopted by the votes of Ontario's Macdonalds, Merrices, Fergusons, &c.

All this is marvellous; and we may remark here that the Orangemen of Ontario, who, from their lived professions, are said to be the foremost to resist the encroachments of the Church of Rome, has ever been the most subservient tools of that Church when test questions came to the vote in Parliament. That such men as the last-named should represent any portion of the people of Ontario is indeed to be lamented —the disgrace of his public conduct being only surpassed by that of the constituency that returns him.

Ontario, by Confederation, meant the annexation of a free North-West for her sons to overflow into. She has got a North-West, as far as organized, tied up to the Hudson's Bay Company, Roman Catholic priests and half-breeds. She meant to pay the least possible price in the shape of a railroad to Halifax, and she has been made to pay the greatest possible amount.—She went to be free from Quebec, which, like the Old Man of the Sea on Sinbad's shoulders, had goaded her to desperation, and she finds the Old Man (Mr. George Cartier) still where he was, digging away as lustily as ever, with his heels digging into her sides. Is it not possible for Ontario yet to act as unitedly as Quebec does, and thus Lucinate the machinations of the other—or rather of his servants? Assuredly would only pluck up a spirit and say that thus and thus it shall be, she would find herself heartily seconded by New Brunswick and Nova Scotia: but so long as, with all her tremendous power, she is false to herself, how can she hope for help elsewhere?—Exchange.

How to fit a collar to a horse.—In purchasing a collar for your horse, it is important to get one that fits, as both the animal and yourself will be saved much annoyance. The method of making a collar fit is given in the "Harness and Carriage Journal." It says: "The plan adopted with us in the West and which, we are assured by men who have long been in the collar business, does not injure the collar in the least; it is to dip it in water until the leather is thoroughly wet, then put it on the horse, secure the hames firmly, keeping it there until it becomes dry. It is all the better if heavy loads are to be drawn, as that causes the collar to be more evenly fitted to the neck and shoulders. If possible, the collar should be kept on from four to five hours, when it will be perfectly dry, and retain the same shape ever afterward, and as it is exactly fitted to the form of the neck, will never produce chafes or sores on the horse's neck.

The Microscope.—One of the most interesting experiments, and one which is easily performed, is to watch the change in the blood of a delicate or very pale person while using Fellows Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. The colourless or dead corpuscles are steadily removed from the system, and are replaced by the red or vitalized particles, so necessary to vigorous existence.

Price $1 50 a bottle; six for $7 50. Sold by apothecaries and by F. Cundill & Co., wholesale agents, Montreal.

R. R. R. in BRAZIL

We refer the reader to the following testimony in favor of Dr. Radway's Remedies, from gentlemen of high character in Brazil. Persons doubting the genuineness of the same are requested to write to the parties, also to the U. S. Consul at Rio, as to the correctness of the statements and status of the writers. For every word not true the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid:

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 22nd, 1866.

Messrs. RAYMUNDO C. LEITE & BRO:

GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your favor of 20th instant, asking my opinion in regard to the efficacy of Dr. Radway & Co's preparations I am happy to say that I consider the Relief and Pills the best remedies ever known, and to form such an opinion I am obliged to prove it, which I will do willingly, via: I suffered so much from "colic" that when I was attacked it pained me so much that I preferred death to such sufferings, I took everything that was recommended, but it was of no use: at last I took 4 of Radway's Pills, of which the pains were very moderate, and then I thought that I was cured, but the pains were still more violent (which I attribute to the negligence in my part in not following it up as directed,) that I was obliged to give into my friend's request to take some "Relief" which he gave me in a dose of one tablespoon in a tumbler of water. In the interval of three minutes I felt relieved immediately, and fifteen minutes after the pain ceased. It is three months since I had an attack, and should I feel any symptoms of it I take the "Relief." I will do all in my power to convince the Doctors of the good results of these medicaments, so that they may prescribe them.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant

Two Follies.—First, to eat a hearty supper for the pleasure experienced during the brief time it is passing down the throat, at the expense of a whole night of disturbed sleep, and a weary waking in the morning. Second, to try all the remedies in existence for rheumatism, pains in the back and sides, coughs, colds, cramps, sprains, bruises, &c., before trying the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Sold by all Medicine dealers, at 25 cts. per bottle.

It is an established fact, that consumption can be cured; but it is far better to prevent the cruel disease from fastening itself on the system, by the timely use of a remedy like Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. This standard preparation will speedily cure a cough or cold, and even Consumption often yields to its great power.

Over-Exertion, either of the body or mind, produces debility and disease. The usual remedy is to take some stimulant, the effect of which is the same as giving a tired horse the whip instead of oats. The true way is to fortify the system with a permanent tonic like the Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron), which gives strength and vigor to the whole system.

Dr. Wistar's Wild Cherry Balsam.—This Balsamic compound has become a home fixture. Let all who suffer, and have in vain attempted to cure their coughs, colds, bronchial or pulmonary complaints, make use of this unequaled remedy. It can be relied upon, the mass of testimony that has been published since its introduction, being ample proof of its efficacy.

The most Unhappy Person in the world is the Dyspeptic. Everything looks dark and gloomy; he body "out of sorts" with himself and everybody else. Life is a burden to him. This can all be changed by taking Peruvian Syrup (a protoxide of iron). Cases of 27 years' standing have been cured by it.

Money makes the Mare go.—This is an old and true saying, and it is equally true that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" will make all pains go from the body and cure Bowel complaints, Tooth Ache, Head Ache, Sprains, Bruises, &c., sooner than anything else discovered. Price 25 cents a bottle.

Messrs. Raymundo C. Leite & Bro:

Gentlemen;—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Mattos Pimenta [a large proprietor, in the Cidad de Campos] was staying at my house he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a good deal of in Campos, but the fever instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr Tonoco declared that there was not the slightest hopes of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the relief pure on the chest, back and wrists; three of Radway's Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one desert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed to the astonishment of every one who witnessed the method of Dr. Radway & Co's. medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen, yours very obedient servant

Joaquim Pinto Filcao, Merchant.

Dr Radway's Remedies are sold by Druggists and County Merchants. See Dr. Radway's Almanac for 1870.

In one of Doct. Ayer's lectures he states that Chemistry confers more practical benefit on mankind, than any other science, yet from no other source could more be so easily obtained. The arts and economies which chemistry would teach, if more thoroughly and generally studied would speedily exercise a most beneficient influence. He freely confesses that he is indebted to this science for the virtues of his remedies, and advises, that the practical application of chemistry to medicine, the arts, manufactures, and agriculture be enjoined upon our colleges and schools.—Wrightsville, Pa., Star.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins, and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs; at times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, &c. A disagreeable itching in the anus is constant. At certain times a stinging or burning pain is experienced, being often very severe; and after the fecal discharge, there is more or less bearing down or tenesmus. For this painful disease, Dr. J. Briggs' unrivalled Pile Remedy is a specific cure; used according to directions, the greatest sufferer will feel the benefit of its virtues. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 308 Broadway, N.Y. and No. 6 King St. West Toronto.

In the first incipient stage of consumption there will be found some difficulty in breathing, perhaps amounting to a shortness of breath, more especially on exercising. Cough is a very early symptom; it may be slight and hacking at first, but gradually becomes more and more distressing and frequent; at first it is dry, but is soon attended with an expectoration of a thin or frothy character, or resembling mucus. Very frequently the expectoration will be streaked with blood, and sometimes the first observable symptom of consumption will be more or less profuse bleedings from the lungs. To those singled out as victims to that fatal malady, we offer a remedy, sure in its results to bring back health to the poor weakened frame, and joy to the hearts of the friends. Dr. J. Briggs' Renovator, the Great and Lung Healer. Sold by Druggists and country dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 308 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Is health worth having? If it is protect it,—it is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In this climate, and more particularly at this season of the year, people are apt to take cold and suffer from sore throat, cough, spitting of blood and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked immediately lead to serious consequences. The question arises—which is the quickest and most effectual remedy? Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have been before the public for twenty years, and have given perfect satisfaction, and invariably effect permanent cures when taken in season. Sold by all medicine dealers and country stores generally throughout the province, at 25cts per box

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 75 cts. per bottle.

HORSES SAVED.

The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Dadey's Condition Powders and Arab an Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on the package. Northrop and Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has a steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

Bryan's Wafers, (The great public Remedy) have now been in use over twenty years, hence cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been throughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box

IMMIGRATION.

To Farmers, Manufacturers and Others in quest of Ordinary or Skilled Labour.

The Immigration Society of Peterborough, desirous of securing immigrations to this portion of the Province, and supplying whatever demands there may be for the various descriptions of labour, hereby give notice to all who may be desirous of procuring labour—male or female—and to the various municipalities in the County, that James Edwards, Esq., Clerk of the Town of Peterborough, has been appointed the Registrar of the Society, and that as such Registrar Mr. Edwards will preserve a record of the different descriptions of labour that may be applyed for to him. From the information thus supplied the Society hopes to induce an immigration that will at least equal the demand for labour, if not assist very materially in settling much of the at present unproductive land in the County.

A registrar of lands for sale or to lease will also be preserved by the Registrar; and those giving information of lands for sale or to lease will have the advantage of having their lands placed prominently in the market, and brought under the especial notice of those who may desire to settle upon improved or partially improved lands.

Emigrants are now on their way from the Old Country, and many have already arrived. In order, therefore, that the efforts of the Society may be productive of benefit to the community, it is essential that information be at once given to Mr Edwards, verbally or by letter, of the labour required, lands for sale or to lease, &c.

Those making application to the Registrar will be supplied with labourers at the earliest opportunity, and will be promptly notified of their arrival.

The Shepherd's Lament.

[We find the following verse lines in the Liverpool Albion of 3rd ult. It is stated they were addressed by W. Dunn, a Lanarkshire shepherd, to the Hon. F. Vankoughnet and Hollo Campbell, a returned passenger per steamer North American, from Canada. There is doubtless some degree of truth in this poorly shepherd's lamentable lamentations; but a residence of somewhat longer than six months would have reconciled him to Canadian life, and induced him of his home sickness.—Scottish American Journal.]

I was well but would be better;
Like a fool I sold my gear,
Took a passage o'er the water,
Now I've been a lang half year!
Money on us, nie a country!
Wouldn't but weeds wherever one flees,
Weeds would fright our British gentry,
Though to feed o'muckle trees.

Now I gane till I am dizzy,
Twist and throw my neck agee;
It's enough to drive one crazy,
For the heavens I canna see!
Cloven sticks laid like an ensot,
Fences around ilk swampy fluss;
But no a hill for ane to look at—
All's flat, dull, and uniform.

Skeeter—pig-eyes that resemble,
Which their ragged lairds enjoy;
Reeds (bleedam, fear and trumble!)
Of infernal corduroy.
A' the Egyptain plagues beside us,
Bugs and fleas alternate strive;
Bored and riddled by mosquitoes,
Flayed by prickly Irish alive.

Frogs of every size and sample,
'Mong the pow-head puddles swarm!
Ane can hardly step, but trample
On a snake as lang's my arm!
Hailstones, big as musket bullets,
Knock the wheat crops out o' sight!
Fiery flies, with bissen gullets
Fly, like bogles, through the night.

Scorching days would roast a herring,
People's cork back never dry;
Peals o' thunder bodies scarin',—
Pest up Canada, say I!
Oh! for Scotia's blooming heather!
Gushing burn and craggy linn!
Oh, for good and misty weather,
Though it wet me to the skin!

Oh, for hills of lofty grandeur!
Oh, for Cheviot at my beiss,—
Among the potted ewes to wander,
Where the whistling plover wheels!
While wi' grief I'm nearly greetin',
Thus I o'er my sheep forsook,
Still I think I hear them bleating,
And see Cheviots honest look.

Oh, for joy unmixed wi' sorrow,
Oh, for happy nights I've seen,
When, wi' pleasure none can borrow,
Maggie met me late at e'en!
Oh, for spiceres I've seen at Moffat,
Nights o' frolic, fun, and sang;
But I stop, or loons will laugh at,
My disconsolate harangue.

Intolerance is the attributes of any sect wielding power.

Good Breeding.—A man's own good breeding is the best security against other people's ill-manners.

Talent and Character.—Talents are nurtured best in solitude, but character in life's tempestuous sea.

Labor.—As the sweetest rose grows upon the sharpest prickle, so the hardest labor brings forth the sweetest profit.

Owing and being Owed.—Never owe any man more than you are able to pay, and allow no man to owe you more than you are able to lose.

Love.—Shut not thy bosom to the tenderness of love; the purity of its flame shall enable thy heart and soften it to receive the warmest impressions.

Charity.—That which you devote to charity disburse personally. Systematic benevolence is too often an excuse for laziness, and an encouragement for professional impostors.

The number of cotton mills in the Northern States is 664, running 6,359,020 spindles, and consuming annually 385,952,021 pounds of cotton; in the Southern States, 86 mills, running 225,063 spindles, and consuming annually 31,415,750 pounds of cotton. In the Northern mills each spindle is made to spin 60 pounds of cotton a year, while in the Southern mills each one spins 138 pounds, showing that a coarser quality of goods is manufactured at the South. There are, altogether, nearly 100 fewer mills in operation now than there were in 1860. The total consumption of cotton for manufacturing purposes last year was 450,000,000 pounds, which, at the usual estimate of 400 pounds to a bale, equals 1,125,000 bales, or nearly one-half the production of the United States. The total consumption in 1868, in Europe and the United States, was 2,094,105,000 pounds, against 1,976,520,000 pounds in 1858, and 2,284,901,000 pounds in 1859.

Moths in Carpets.—The following remedy is better than camphor or any other volatile repeller. Wring out a crash towel, and spread it smoothly on the carpet wherever moths are suspected or detected. Then iron it dry with a hot iron, repeating if necessary. The hot steam will penetrate the carpets, (not injuring the color at all,) and kill both worms and eggs.

Ground Rice Cake.—Break five eggs into a stewpan, which place in another containing hot water; whip the eggs for ten minutes till very light, then mix in by degrees half a pound of ground rice, six ounces of powdered sugar; beat it well; any flavour may be introduced; pour into the buttered pan, and bake half an hour.

Quaking Pudding.—Boil one quart of cream, and let it stand till almost cold; beat four eggs a full quarter of an hour with a spoonful and a half of flour; then mix them with your cream, adding sugar and nutmeg to your taste. Tie the mixture close up in a cloth well buttered, let it boil an hour, and turn it carefully out.

To Keep Milk Sweet.—A peculiar method is mentioned as very successful. It simply consists in placing a piece of newly hammered iron, or three twelve-penny nails, in each tin pan previously, and then pouring the warm milk on them. It is believed that electricity has something to do with producing the result.

For Chapped Hands.—1 oz. of saltpetre 1 oz. of spirits of rosemary, 16 oz. of water. To be applied to the hands after washing, and to rub them perfectly dry.

STOP AND SEE!
THE following remarks on Testimonials of a most wonderful and extraordinary cures a Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.
For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that to the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Brucetown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

A Dream or a Reverie.

BY ADA DILLARD.

I had returned from a Sabbath service, and threw myself upon a sofa to rest.—Whether I slept and dreamed, or was lost in a reverie, I may never know; but the scene that passed before me was so distinct and real as if it had actually occurred.

John B. Gough was giving one of his most effective temperance addresses. He was imitating, as no other man can do, a person intoxicated. His whole being became so absorbed in the action that he reeled and fell as if dead drunk upon the stage, and went into a drunkard's heavy sleep.

For a moment all supposed it was only a part of the play—that it was all assumed. But soon the suspense became painful, and some one touched him.

He started, cast a wild and hasty look upon the audience; then sprang to his feet, his nostrils distended and his eyes flashing with wildness, and, after a moment's pause, he exclaimed,

"Ah friends! I entered too deeply into my own past experience. I was as if intoxicated, and I fell, as, alas! how many times I have fallen, into the deep sleep of the drunkard. And oh!" said he, a tremor coming over his whole frame, "no sooner had I fallen than a troop of imps from the pit came rollicking with infernal laughter around me, jeering and hissing at me; and, in an instant, such a motley throng—drinkers of all classes, from the slavering drunkard to the genteel wine-bibber; dealers of all grades, from the keeper of the lowest grog-shop to that of the first class hotel and of the most gaudily-furnished saloon; and opposers of temperance and prohibition, of all ranks and professions; and, oh! how they raised on me, and pointed at me the finger of scorn; and then, with bursts of the wildest laughter, shouted,

"Ah Gough! it is all over with you now. One more champion of prohibition is laid out." And then the fiends from beneath and these fiends among men united in the wildest manifestations of joy over a fallen, ruined man!

"And, friends," said he, "should I fall, is not this just the manner in which thousands who oppose our cause would triumph over my destruction? Have they not thus triumphed over a fallen brother?

He then burst forth, and, with an eloquence that thrilled every listener, portrayed the depths to which the paltry dust of gain, or a perverted appetite, will plunge a human being, so that he can rejoice over a fall that will send a poor mortal, struggling to break away from his chains of bondage, back into this cruel slavery, and hurry him to the drunkard's grave and the drunkard's doom in eternity!

And, reader, would not such a scene occur, should this valiant and noble champion of temperance be left to fall? Are there not thousands who watch for the halting, who live upon the faults, and eat up the sins of those who are striving to break away from the chains of intemperance, and of those who are seeking to save men from this great evil?

Old Times in Canada.

On Monday, October 14, 1792, General Simcoe prorogued the first Parliament of Upper Canada, at Niagara. In the forenoon, as we learn from the journals, they had 'prayer and a sermon,' the Rev. Mr. Addison being chaplain. Eight members and the speaker, in a house of 17, were a quorum, being a majority of the whole.—The Clerk's salary was £91; the Chaplain's, £26; the Sergeant, £45; the doorkeeper, £20. These were the officers, they were "specially sworn." Instead of wasting specie by the ton in defiance of law, they raised contingency money by the bill. The clerk was ordered "to give timely notice to the chaplain" whenever they expected his attendance. John MacDonell was speaker, Angus MacDonell was clerk. They started popular legislation on Monday, Sept. 17, and sat 28 days. A quaker (Dorland) was elected from Prince Edward, but they could not take his affirmation.

Simple Tastes.

Knowledge so far from being incompatible with simplicity of pleasure, is the quickest to perceive its wealth. Chaucer would lie for hours looking at the daisies. Scipio and Lælius would amuse themselves with making ducks and drakes swim in the water. Epaminondas, the greatest of all the active spirits of Greece, was a flute player and dancer. Alfred the Great could act the whole part of a minstrel. Epicures taught the riches of temperance and intellectual pleasures in a garden. The other philosophers of his country walked between heaven and earth in colloquial bowers of Accademus; and the wiser heart of Solomon, who found everything vain because he was a king, has left us a panegyric on the spring, and the voice of the turtle, because he was a poet, a lover, and a wise man.

A celebrated divine, who prided himself upon the originality of his sermons, was once told, jocularly, that a sermon he had preached was excellent. "But," said the wag who told him, "I had previously read every word of it in a book I have at home." The astonished clergyman begged for a sight of the volume. "Oh, I have no doubt you have the same book in your library. it is Johnson's Dictionary."

It is said that when Lord Byron sent to his wife the well known touching lines,

"Fare thee well! And if forever, Still, forever, fare thee well!"

he enclosed in the same envelope a butcher's bill, with the penciled remark, "Please look over this; I don't think we had so much meat.' The conjunction of ideas was truly affecting.

CHARACTERISTIC OF A GREAT MIND.—It is one of the properties of a great mind, that it can contract, as well as dilate, itself; and it is stated by Bacon, one of the highest of human authorities, that mind which cannot do both is not great in the most important sense, and to its full extent.

I'LL COME FOR YOU!—"If I'm not at home from the party to-night at 10o'clock, said a husband to his better and bigger half, don't wait for me." "That I won't," said the lady, significantly; "I won't wait, but I'll come for you." He returned at 10 precisely!

A strong temperance society has been started at Beu, Fejee Islands; one hundred and sixty persons have become members, with the King and Queen at the head.

Ten thousand persons have signed the pledge of the Temperance Society of Surrey Chapel, England—Rev Newman Hall, pastor—the last ten years.

In the village of Tipton, Indiana, all the liquor-saloons are closed and have crape on their doors. The explanation is, a revival and a raid by the ladies.

SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION.—The general symptoms of this disease are an habitual cough morbid expectoration, pains in the breast, casual flush or feverish heat in the hands, feet, and cheeks, change of voice this fingers, and nose, bent or crooked nails, falling of the hair &c. The disease has been divided into three four, and even five stages by medical writers; but, for practical purposes, three stages will be found best adapted to the course of the disease. To entirely cure this cough, eradicate all the early symptoms of this fatal malady. Dr. J. Briggs' Renovator, the Great Throat and Lung Healer, is thoroughly adequate and sure. It is not unpleasant to the palate, and its properties are all of a healing and purifying nature. After once having used it, no person would hesitate to acknowledge its superior efficacy in obeying the hand of that fell destroyer, Consumption. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers Dr J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 308 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was there ever any before so universally adopted into use. In every country and among all classes, as "the multitude" can testify, it is the most reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of the remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued in, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Hair Vigor,
For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
HAIR DRESSING,
nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those woo have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

FEVER & AGUE CURED
FOR FIFTY CENTS.
There is not a remedial agent in this world that will cure FEVER & AGUE, and all other Malarious, Bilious, Scarlet, Typhoid, Yellow, and other Fevers (aided by Radway's Pills), as quick as Radway's Ready Relief.
RADWAY'S READY RELIEF
has proved infallible, and will cure these terrible fevers quicker, and without question, the fearful casualties of Ship-board fever. Put Spleen, Disordered Kidneys, and Rattle-Colored Skins, that are rare in fever and ague, and the "Cholera," "Ague Cures" and other agents of the heroic Quinine, Mercurial, Arsenic, and other treatments where the medicines used accumulate, and become deposited in the system.
RADWAY'S READY RELIEF
is the best, cheapest, and safest remedy that can be used for Fever and Ague, Bilious and other Fevers.
NOT ONE
person need suffer, be they ever so much exposed to Fever and Ague, if they will only take Radway's Ready Relief, and keep their bowels open with Radway's Pills. Hundreds in the West, who have hitherto been doctoring at the rate of one and two hundred dollars for a few months' treatment, are keeping themselves and families free from Fever and Ague, Chills and Fevers, Rheumatism, &c., for one or two dollars a year, spent for Radway's Ready Relief and Radway's Pills (coated).
The Ready Relief will afford instant ease to all. Price only 25 cents per bottle.
N.B.—See that every bottle has an India Rubber Stopper. Sold at all Druggists, and at Dr. Radway's Office, No 87 Maiden-Lane, New York, and 439 St. Paul Street, Montreal, Canada.

SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.
NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE
Of all Wasting, Scrofulous, and Eruptive Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Ears, Head, LUNGS, Kidneys, Bladder.
THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.
Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent establishes a new principle of Cure of all Chronic diseases, and proves to the medical world that Consumption and other Scrofulous diseases are curable. The fact has been demonstrated in over
One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption, where one lung or more cavernly cases was destroyed and dead up, and no sooner
800 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION.
Dr. Radway, three years since, published to the world his analysis of the Blood in the several stages of Consumptions, showing in every stage, that where tubercles become deposited in the Lungs and other organs, as in the Kidneys, Liver, Spleen, Bronchial Glands, Mesentery, establishing Consumption of those organs, the Blood is thin, weak, pale, watery, and is deficient of such constituents as fibrin Albumen, Phosphate, and the rich red coloring discs of the Blood Corpuscles. In the absence of these constituents in the Blood, the Blood is exhausted of strength and nourishment, and wherever there is inflammation, it deposits tubercles and decomposition, it has not the power to hold in solution its natural constituents, and Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Cancers, and Virulent Humors are formed, the presence of which causes inflammation, gathering, and consequent suppuration.
This, reader, is the true cause of the formation of Tubercles and Consumption. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory of the cause of Consumption and its kindred diseases, and prepared the Radway's Resolvent to supply the Blood with such constituents it was deficient of, in these conditions of system, and to give it the nourishment and strength to hold its natural constituents in solution. Dr. Radway's theory was published in England, France, Germany, and America, and was acclaimed upon by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his text medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption, but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory, and the first and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure. In Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption, and all Diseases of the Lungs, Bronchial, Kidneys, Bladder, Womb, Throat, Glands, and Urinary Organs.
In all Wasting Diseases, such as Involuntary Loss of Sperm, Emissions, Weakness of the Genital Organs, Impotence, Diffused and all Uterine Affections, Gravel, Stone, Brick Dust, Uric Acid, and Calculous Concretions, the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is a positive cure. In Dropsy, Diabetes, Venereal, Syphilis in its many forms, it cures when all other medicines fail.
EVERY DAY
an increase of flesh, weight, and strength is experienced. It is Fat-tening, Caloric or Heat-making. It is to the blood what oxygen is to the atmosphere air—it supplies the life principle. It swiftly removes from the system all Specs, Blemishes, Pimples, Tetters, Rash, Boils, Humors, Worms, &c. &c., imparting a Clear & Transparent Complexion to all.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada
Madoc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.
This is to certify that during the winter of 1866-7 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoness Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to anyone afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,
MARY ANN DOUGHTY.
Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869
A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.
I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

The Demon Alcohol.

He walks! He walks! o'er the glad green earth
By the side of the reaper DEATH.
He dazzles mankind with the glow of mirth,
Or quenches the light of the household hearth,
With his foul and with'ring breath.

He stalks abroad with his hydra head.
And he has gathered in his train,
The unsteady foot, and the strong man's tread
The restless living, and the ghastly dead,
With Woe and mis'ry want and pain.

He nerves the arm of relentless hate
With the wine cup's maddening foam.
He barks in the halls of the rich and great,
In the beggars mess, at the palace gate.
And he curses the poor mans home.

He barters the wealth of a spotless name,
For the wine cup's inticing glow.
He scathes the pinion of deathless fame,
Till they droop with a load of guilt and shame,
Mid'st the dregs of sin and woe

There seemeth ev'r a sorrowing wail;
In the path of his blighting tread,
And childhoods cheek, waxeth weary and pale,
And its heart is faint, and its footsteps fail,
For the want of its daily bread.

And beauty, and manhood,—live with mirth,
Shall drink of the languishing wine.
But the blighted home,—the desolate hearth,—
The tears of the sorrowing ones on earth,
Lies deep in its glance and shine.

He robs the poor of their daily bread,
And he filleth the drunkard's bowl,
Causing misery and woe; remorse and dread,
With a palsied hand, and a wandering head
He curses his deathless soul.

The Demon he waits with tiresome will
For the swift and the downward tread,
He knows that the wise, by his subtle skill,
Shall gather alike, the good and the ill.
Neath the curse of his iron tread.

Hildegarde's Career.

"I have always wanted a career," said Hildegarde Gray, with a backward toss of her slender throat, "and now I have reached the mount of my aspirations."

Mrs. Penfield and Sarepta her daughter, looked at beautiful Hildegarde in the same way wherewith a tribe of domestic hens may be supposed to regard an outlandish, gold-plumed bird of paradise, which has suddenly alighted in their midst. They admired her; and yet, so to speak, they knew not of her.

The farm-house door was wide open; the square of sunshine on the white boards of the floor was moving like a lake of light, as the day wore on; and the brown birds in the apple-tree boughs were singing their merry hearts out; while in the south borders, under the "keeping-room" windows, the daffodils were bursting into sheaths of golden bloom; and the shoulders of the great hills were blue with the first April violets, whereon the sunbeams laid their sienier lances or the balmy south wind blew.

Hildegarde had a knot of these same blue blo soms in her hand as she sat by the wide open window—a tall, fair-haired girl, with big gray eyes, whose brightness flashed on you like an inspiration. Sarepta Penfield had grown up at her side, but Sarepta was no more like her than day is to darkness.

"Well," said Mrs. Penfield, taking a fresh stocking out of the darning basket, "I s'pose we can't always control our own feelin's; but it don't seem exactly right for a woman to open a public studio, if that's the new-fangled name af the place, just as if she was a man, and go to sculp'in' marble and dabblin' in blue clay."

"Why not a woman, as well as a man?" said Hildegarde boldly. "There is no such thing as sex in art."

"You're better at argufyin' than I be," said Mrs. Penfield, working her needle nervously in and out of her stocking heel; but I can't help feelin' just the same, that you'd ha' been happier if you could have been contented to settle down as some honest man's wife," with an almost imperceptible glance under her spectacles at where Edwin Penfield sat picking out seed-corn, silent and apparently absorbed in his work, "and spend your days as the Lord meant a woman should."

"Now, Aunt Penfield, that is nonsense," said Hildegarde sharply. "What right have we to suppose that the Lord meant any woman to settle down into a mere domestic drudge? Why did He give me my one talent, if it were not to be used? Don't be vexed, there's a darling!" as the shadow crept over Aunt Penfield's kindly old face. "I know you've brought me up and been a mother to me, but the little ducklings will make for the water, in spite of all that he then can do, and I can't help my nature!"

"Well," said Mrs. Penfield, "I'm sure I hope that you'll do well. Sarepta, go and see if that bread's most light enough for the over."

"There is no danger of failure, I think," said Hildegarde quietly. "My little statuette of the Goddess of Evening sold for one hundred and fifty dollars!"

"Humph!" commented Aunt Penfield. "I don't know who'd want one o' them half-naked heathen creetures on their mantel tree pieces."

"And the basso relievo of Faith is to bring sixty dollars as soon as it is finished," added Hildegarde triumphantly; "and that is one reason why I must go back immediately, for Mrs. Dorsay wants it for her birthday fete on the seventeenth of next month."

"It's a short visit you are makin' us," said Mrs. Penfield discontentedly; "but I see plain enough how it is—the fine new city friends are crowdin' out the old ones!"

"Of course one likes to be appreciated," said Hildegarde a little consciously; "but I am sure I can never forget all your kindnesses, Aunt Penfield."

Edwin brought up the old brown horse and the buffalo-draped wagon, to drive her to the depot, early the next morning, while the blue mists were yet lying low in the valleys along the river-side, and the sun peeped like a great golden eye over the crimsoning maple swamps on the eastern horizon."

"You'll come and see me in my studio, Edwin?" said Hildegarde softly; for although no word of love had ever been exchanged between them, she knew very well that she was the sanctuaried queen of that honest homespun heart.

"Do you want me to come, Hildegarde?" he asked; and she could not but own to herself that there was a manly sort of beauty in his clear blue eyes and square mouth and sun-burned brow, as he looked gravely into her face.

"Of course I do. Should I ask you, else?"

"Then I'll come."

And Hildegarde Gray went back to the city, to resume the great work in which her life was gradually being absorbed. For there was genius in this slender, untrained young slip of womanhood, and the public were begining to recognize the burning glow of its torch.

The April violets had faded long ago on the hill-side, and the white roses were just budding out on the great bushes by the farm-house door stone, when Edwin Penfield kept his word, and walked, one glorious June morning, into Hildegard Gray's studio.

What a pretty, picturesque scene it was! the room hung with crimson velvet draperies and lighted from the glass dome above; the carpet of moss gray; the pretty little gems of art and luxury strewn around in every direction; while a basket of hot-house flowers, with a card tied to the handle, stood on a gilded table by the door. And, partially hidden behind a screen, a stately marble nymph, half dazzling perfection of white uplifted arm and lovely brow, half shapeless marble, stood.

Hildegard's new statue; and Hildegard's herself sat in a low chair before it, her eyes sparkling, her cheeks flushed, her slight figure all aglow as it were with electric enthusiasm. Nor was she alone. Two ladies clad in India cashmeres, lace and diamonds, were viewing the marble dream through critically poised eye-glasses, and half a dozen gentlemen stood around—one, dark and handsome-eyed, whispering in Hildegard's ear, his breath stirring the silky curls as he spoke.

"Hildegarde!"

"Oh, Edwin, is it you!"

She started up and came to meet him with outstretched hands, but he could not but see that there was an impalpable something of embarrassment in her manner. She introduced him eagerly to her friends; she called, with an artist's pride, to the marble nymph, apparently blind to the supercilious stare with which the dark-dyed critic was surveying him. But Edwin Penfield felt the contemptuous glance, and his blood boiled within him; for it is not pleasant to be despised.

"Hildegard," he said as she followed him to the door, "who is that Colonel St. Serre?"

"A friend of mine;" and the eyelashes dropped over reddening cheeks.

"Nothing nearer than a friend?"

"No—at least not yet!"

"I am glad of that," said Edwin Penfield bitterly. "He is a puppy!"

"Ah, Edwin, you don't know how good, how noble he is!"

"I see it all now," he said coldly. "You love him."

"You have no right to talk so to me, Edwin."

"I know it," he said abruptly, "well God bless you, Hildegard, and—and—by. It is not likely that we shall meet again."

"Why not?"

"Because—don't you see that our life ever want a friend, Hildegard, come to me.

She half smiled, thinking how unlikely that was, as she went back to her thronged studio. For people were already beginning to whisper that Colonel St. Seerie was "smitten" with the beautiful young artist; and life seemed opening with such flower-garlanded portals of promises to her

* * * *

"Not blind! Oh, for sweet heavens sake, do not tell me I shall be blind!"

The kind old physician's heart bled within him at the piteous outcry of the pale young girl.

"Well perhaps not entirely blind, Miss Gray, but you will never be able to see perfectly again. You have overtasked your eye, and Nature will avenge herself.

Hildegarde's head sank back among her pillows; her lip quivered. Was this to be she end of all her ambitious visions! Blind at twenty-one! a lifetime of vailed shadows stretching out before her!

"Has Colonel St. Serre been here to enquire, since my illness?" she nerved herself to ask of the friend who sat beside her arm-chair.

"Then you hadn't heard?" exclaimed Miss Walton, with wide-open, wondering eyes. "Col. St. Serre sailed for Europe two weeks ago. I thought, of course, somebody would have told you."

Hildegarde did not answer, but she bit her lip until the sharp pain compelled her to desist. Was this the upshot of a man's vaunted love! Poor lonely girl! she was being disenchanted in more respects than one.

"Did you send that message to Mrs. Penfield?" she asked, after a momentary silence.

"Yes, three days ago."

"And have not sent, nor written!"

"Not as yet."

"They are all alike," Hilldegarde murmured to herself. "Oh, why did they not let me die while I lay on yonder sick-bed; then I should have troubled no one any further!"

The day crept on, and Hildegarde, worn out by weariness and a heavy heart, fell into a troubled sleep at last. When she awaked, the sunset beams had softened into twilight, and some one sat beside her who was not her patient nurse.

"Edwin!" she cried, half doubting her own senses.

"You are not vexed to see me, Hildegarde? I have come to take you home."

Back once more to the velvet-green meadows and the dancing butterflies of the old Penfield homestead—back to the hay-scented air and the sweet breath of cows at twilight, and the silver song of the whip-poor-will in the woods at nightfall! Hildegarde felt like one who has been in a troubled dream, and waked up at last.

She grew better and stronger every day; the coveted boon of health came back like a recovered blessing; but the gift of sight should her sealed eyelids never more.

"Edwin," she said one evening, after a long, sad silence. "I have been pondering what to do. This sort of life cannot continue longer, however sweet it may be."

"No," said Edwin calmly; "it cannot continue longer, Hildegarde."

"I was afraid you would think so," she said, the flush of mortified pride dying her cheek. "I know I am trespassing sorely upon your kindness, but—"

"Hildegarde," interrupted Edwin Penfield, "I had not courage to ask you before, but your words give me new strength. Dear Hildegarde, will you be my wife? I have loved you ever since you were a child!"

"But, Edwin, I am blind."

"What then, dearest! I will be eyes for both of us!" he pleaded eagerly.

"And I am so helpless."

"Far dearer to me now, in your helplessness, than ever you were in the pride of your health and independence. Hildegarde, you are the one woman I need to complete my existence. Will you give yourself to me?"

A low garden seat in the rose-scented twilight, the sound of children's voices at her side, and a husband bending over her with the tender devotion which passing years can only strengthen—this is the end of Hildegarde's career. Nor would she have it otherwise, even if she could.

A Pagan Legend of Jesus.

Publius Lentulus, assumed by some to have been procousul of Judea prior to Herod, is reported to have seen the Saviour, and to have written the following letter to the Roman Senate:—"At this time appeared a man who is still living and endowed with a mighty power; his name is Jesus Christ. His disciples call him the Son of God; others regard him as a powerful prophet. He raises the dead to life, and heals the sick of every description of infirmity and disease. This man is of lofty stature and well proportioned; his countenance severe and virtuous, so that he inspires beholders with feelings both of fear and love. The hair of his head is of the color of wine, and from the top of the head to the ears, straight, and without radiance, but it descends in shining curls. From the shoulders the hair flows down the back, divided into two portions, after the manner of the Nazarenes; his forehead is clear and without wrinkles; his face free from blemish, and slightly tinged with red, and his physiognomy noble and gracious. The nose and mouth are faultless. His beard is abundant, the same color as his hair, and forked. His eyes are blue and very brilliant. In reproving or censuring he is awe-inspiring; in exhorting and teaching, his speech is gentle and caressing.—His countenance is marvelous in seriousness and grace. He has never been seen to laugh, but many have seen him weep. He is slender in person, his hands are straight and long, his arms beautiful.—Grave and solemn in his discourse, his language simple quiet. In his appearance he is the most beautiful of the children of men."

The Colorado Potato-Bug.

This pest is renewing its ravages. We hear of its swarming in Michigan.

What remedy is there?

First. Capturing and destroying them. An interesting account of Mr. Gage's struggle with them may be found in the Michigan Agricultural Report.

He fought them by hand, but was at last compelled to give over by reason of their multitude. When gathered in a pan, they are often destroyed by pouring hot water on them; but in such case the fumes have sometimes proved poisonous.

A machine has been contrived which may be dragged along the rows, and by a properly adjusted reel, knock the bugs into receptacles prepared for them.

Second. A dusting of the vines (while moist with dew) with Paris green, or with white hellebore, has, in many instances, proved efficacious.

Third. The planting of some special sort of potato which the bug is found to prefer will frequently save an adjoining crop—since this pirate is found to be very strong in his prejudices.

The main hope of ultimate relief must come, however, we suspect, from the multi-

HOW TO BE HAPPY.—The first and most essential point in order to lead a happy life, is to lay aside all mean and sordid cares for the future to treat petty misfortunes with disdain, and turn a deaf ear to every imaginary trouble. Don't make a fool of yourself by trying to ape the silly affectations of others; look at every body as honest, until they prove themselves rogues; fancy every one good natured as you are yourself; eat well, drink well, sleep well these will to low in a sensible mind as a matter of course. Don't owe a farthing that you cannot pay; mind your own business; never try to make it up between man and wife; and above all, don't recommend any one you have not proved.

WHAT IS MODERATE DRINKING?—It is the doctor's easy chair, lined with yellow, white and brown, in which all the patients feel quiet happy. It is the light fingered gentleman who intends to feel every corner of the drawer and the very bottom of the purse. It is a beautiful serpent, whose fangs and deadly venom are concealed in the dazzling of its coils. It is a ship on a troubled sea, without an anchor, or rudder, or compass. It is the landlord's bird lime, by which he secures his victims and shuts them up in his cage. It is a delightful avenue, lined with beautiful flowers and filled with melodious sounds, but leading to the caverns of the dead.

ANTIDOTES.—A noted English chemist proposes that, in addition to the word "poison," the labels on the bottles or packages containing poison should have printed on their margins the appropriate antidotes.

On bottles of alcoholic poison no antidote can be given, but well might it read,

It biteth like a serpent,
It stingeth like an adder.
Death is in it!
Touch not! Taste not! A. W.

A Sad Acknowledgement. The following is a funeral sheech which a Paris paper assures us was actually pronounced at Montmatre, the other day, by a father at the grave of his son:—

"Gentleman," said the father, in a voice full of emotion, "the body before you was that of my son. He was a young man in the prime of life, with a sound constitution which ought to ensured him a hundred years. But misconduct, drunkness and debauchery of the most disgraceful kind, brought him in the flower of age, to the dich which you see before you. Let this be an example to you and your children. Let us go hence.

A man was just starting from home one evening for the "Pig and Whistle," (tavern) when his son, a bright little fellow, said, "I know why they call the public-house the 'Pig and Whistle'!" "Do you?" asked the father. "Why?" "Because," replied the child, "you feed the landlord's pig, and leave us to whistle for bacon." Workingmen should learn to feed the their own pig, and save their own bacon.—London Record.

A venerable member of a Presbytery lately fell into a certain canal. He was drawn out half drowned, and conveyed to a house in the neighborhood and put to bed. "Will ye tak' some spirits and water, sir?" asked his considerate host. Na, na! I have had plenty of water for ae day; I'll tak' the speerits noo."

An old toper was recently heard to advise a young man to get married, for the following reason: "Because then, my boy, you'll have somebody to pull off your boots when you get home drunk."

Why is a lady putting on her corsets like a man who drinks to drown his grief? Because in so lacing herself she is getting tight.

The Boy who Won Himself.

I was going up the Mississippi in 1844, Judge Underwood of Kentucky and Henry Clay being on board.

"That's a tough crew, from Natchez," remarked the clerk, who came upon deck as we were about going below. "They play hard and high."

"Let's go and look on for a while," said the Judge.

We went down into the saloon, where we found two parties at play. At one of the tables sat four men, about whom were gathered a large number of lookers-on; and as these proved to be the heavy players, we joined the group of spectators. The game was "twenty deck poker," and money was changing hands with startling rapidity. One of the players, a middle-aged man, whose face showed but too plainly the ravages of an excess that was sapping his life, and who, I afterwards learned, was a cotton planter, had staked his last dollar, and "called" his opponent's hand. He held four queens, against which were laid down four kings. And he was "broken." He started to his feet as though he would leave the table.

"Are ye dead-broke, Colonel?" asked he of the four kings.

"Yes—to the last pinyune."

"Give me yer note, and I'll lend ye."

"No," replied the planter, with an oath, "I can do better than that. Where's Wackman?"

"Here," answered a dark-visaged man.

"Bring the girl and boy here that I bought at Natchez—Hold on the game just one minute, gentlemen, and I'll make a raise."

The man went away, and shortly returned accompanied by the "girl and boy."

Said "girl" proved to be a bright Mulatto woman, of five-and-thirty, or thereabouts; and the "boy" was her son.

The boy was not far from ten years of age, with a face lighter in color than was his mother's; his features really handsome.

"Look here, gentleman," spoke the planter, rising, "here's as lik

We are glad to hear that Mr. T. D. M. Croly has been awarded the erection of the New Bridge at Lakefield.

A communication from S. Fowlis, Esq., will appear in our next issue, it is unavoidably crowded out this week.

We beg to call attention to the sale of dry lumber on London Street, at 2 p. m., on 22nd of June inst. See Posters.

We expected the volunteers to be called out next week for Brigade drill but learn that this will not take place till after harvest.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the Bank of Ontario, no steps were taken to remove the Head Office. The affairs of the Bank are in a very favorable position. The old directors were re-elected.

Charles Dickens, the great novelist, is dead. The day before his decease, he is said to have been in his usual good health. An over wrought brain is beleived to be the cause of his sudden and unexpected death.

DOMINION DAY:—The Steamer Enterprise we understand, will run to Campbelltown and back, on Dominion Day, for the pleasure of excursionists who wish to enjoy themselves. Music we believe, will be provided.

Timely and most refreshing rains have fallen since our last issue,—the whole face of nature appears changed. The hay crops will be largely increased by these fine showers, and the fall and spring crops much benefited.

The imposing ceremony of investing Prince Auther with the noble order of St. Michael and St. George, took place at Montreal on Monday last. The Witness says, the assemblage was probably the most brilliant ever gathered together in Montreal.

We regret to hear that Mr. Geo. Campbell, of North Monaghan, died very suddenly on Tuesday, of inflamation. Mr. Campbell was a young man, and within a day or two was attending to his business in his usual health.

ACCIDENT.—While Mr. Turver, of the Caisse House, of this Town, was driving to Lindsay, on Saturday evening, on going down a hill the harness gave way causing the horse to run off. Mr. Turver, we regret to say was hurt, and a gentleman in the carriage got his leg broken.

A man naned Charles Beckett, of Hamilton, drowned himself in a fit of temporary insanity. He was afraid his wife and family would come to want, and that, he thought he could not bear to see. His body was found in the wharf.

Louis Pappa has been awarded the watering of the streets. George Street, from Brock to Charlotte; Simcoe Street, from Bank of Montreal to Aylmer; Hunter Street, from Mr. Chambers' store to Aylmer; and Water Street, between Hunter and Simcoe Streets, for the sum of $230.

CORRECTION.—In our report of Mr. Langs remarks at the Keene Railway meeting, we understood him to say that he had based his calculation on granting $40,000. Mr. Lang writes us to say that it should be $20,000, we most willingly make the figures to suit Mr. Lang.

Col. Chamberlin, M. P., for Missisquoi, has received the appointment of Queen's Printer at Ottawa, with a nice little salary of $2,000 a year. This is the reward of three sessions of thick and thin support of the present government. The gallant Col. now reaps the reward of his readiness to vote, right or wrong, for John A. and Cartier, on every question.

The proprietor of our Town neighbor will feel a little annoyed at this appointment over his head. It is currently reported that he has been in Ottawa two weeks, urging his claims, and to fail must be no little chagrin to him. We may expect him in opposition next Session, if not at once. His politics are matters of dollars and cts, and this may decide his future course.

Mr. Weir, of Montreal, has given notice that on and after the 1st of July, discount on Silver will be eight per. cent. All having American Silver, would do well to dispose of it at once. But why does Sir. F. Hincks detain or delay the issue of Canadian Silver? It is almost impossible to obtain small change now. There is not enough of even Skin Plasters as his currency is termed. If he is getting three to four millions of Silver by forced loan, surely he can afford to issue a promise to pay a few tyenty-five cents back some day.

List of Teachers who received certificates at the late examination:—Mr. John Braden, 1st B; Mr. John McLeod, 1st C; Mr. D. Robertson, 1st C; Mr. John Mason, 2nd B; Mr. Wm. Smith, 2nd C; Mr. Jas. Hogan, 2nd C; Miss Rate Hall, 2nd B; Miss Mary Ann Jameson, 2nd C; Miss M. A. Houlihan, 2nd C; Miss Mary Watts, 2nd C; Miss M. Borrowman, 2nd C; Miss Martha Hunt; 2nd C; Miss C. Delany, 2d C; Miss C. Leonard, 3rd.

The sittings of the County Council were brought to a close on Saturday, about 11 o'clock a. m. There appeared to be no relaxation during the days of the Council, everything was as expeditiously got through as was possible. The spring freshets had done so much damage that all expected that large sums would be necessary to repair the injury. The Council wisely determined to put the costs over a number of years, so that those who may enjoy the new bridges shall have to help to pay for them. It was found that about $10,000 will be required for Roads and Bridges.—Hence a By-law was introduced to provide for issuing debentures, to that amount payable in fifteen years.

To meet this a yearly tax of about $750 will be necessary, which will divide the amount so that nothing oppressive may be felt by the ratepayers of the County.

The Townships have had to contract for repairs to large amounts, and these are now going on, and it is to be hoped that all work done will be of a substantial nature, and be built to meet any return of such freshets as were this spring. The country is now in a position to provide against sudden risings of the creeks and rivers, by erecting better structures over those streams, and the Councils, we are sure, will avail themselves of this, and by a wise and timely outlay prevent such delays and destruction of property in future.

The County Council also made arrangements to assist in the repairs of the bridges across the Otonabee River, leading to South Monaghan. The Town Council will no doubt also grant something towards the same object, and if the Counties of Northumberland and Durham do their part, these bridges will soon be passable.

If the Counties of Northumberland and Durham do nothing, the people of South Monaghan should assist, as the bridges are of most importance to them. The movement of our County Council to free them of toll is also a boon to South Monaghan, which they should appreciate. They will now see what Port Hope will do for them. There is not a reason to doubt but that these bridges would be at once put in a state of repair if South Monaghan were united to us. Everyday's separation from us is an injury to that Township, which they will soon be able to see.

The County Council of Peterborough having generously agreed to contribute one-half of all expenses necessary to repair and keep in repair, the bridges, would it not be prudent for South Monaghan to urge her claims on the United Counties, and if refused apply at once for annexation to Peterborough. They would then be freed from such annoyances again.

PERSONAL.

The people of this community were somewhat startled on Friday last, by a paragraph in the daily papers, charging the respected Reeve of Asphodel, T. Coughlan, Esq., with fenian proclivities, and asserting that a subscription list had been found on the person of Rahal, who was lately found on the road near South Dummer, dead; on which list Mr. Coughlan's name appeared as the donor of $40 to the brotherhood.

Upon the strictest investigation we find, that there is not the slightest foundation for the report. The Coroner found no such paper, and no Juror can be found who saw it. The whole has been manufactured by some one unfriendly to Mr. Coughlan. Whatever Mr. Coughlan's sympathies for Ireland may be, he has no sympathies with the Fenian scarecrows. It is certainly much to be regretted that the Toronto papers allowed themselves to be deceived by their correspondent at Harwood, they are innocent of any intention of injuring Mr. Coughlan, but their correspondents who publish mere unfounded rumors, may lead them into trouble, as we understand that Mr. Coughlan has authorised his attorney to take legal proceedings against the publishers of the paragraph referred to.

The following letter has been given for publication, which we most gladly do, as Mr. Coughlan should have every opportunity of vindicating his character against the slanders of unprincipled enemies:—

"NORWOOD, June 10th, 1870.

"TIMOTHY COUGHLIN ESQ., REEVE

"Dear Sir.—I have been requested by Peter Pearce, Esq., to furnish you with a statement of any papers or documents found on the body of the late Thos. Rahel, found dead on the road, in the Township of Asphodel, in the month of May last, and on whose body I held an inquest.

On searching the body I found the following viz: two pass books, in which were the names of parties from whom he had bought cattle, sheep, and hogs, with the amount paid to each and the amount still to be paid. Some pieces of dilapidated paper on one of which I noticed the words "Prayer" printed, what followed was illegible from wear. I must positively state that there was nothing relating to Fenianism found on his person. I further state that your name did not appear on any of the papers found on his person.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGEONS.—A meeting of the above institution was held in Toronto, on the 7th. inst. After routine business, the Secretary introduced the names of the following gentlemen in England, who had applied for the honorary degree of L. D. S., which was granted, viz:—Richard Ashby and E. H. Limbert, London; J. H. Parsons, Halifax, Yorkshire; T. Isaac Lloyd, Preston; F. C. Halford, Stratford; and W. T. Bryan, Liverpool. Mr. O'Donnell the Secretary, was appointed returning officer for the next two years, the same to take place this evening, (7th inst.) At 7 p. m. the Licentiates met in the St. Lawrence Hall. After an address or report, and explanations by the late Secretary, as to the previous course pursued by the Board, and a defiance of charges made in a pamphlet, the election was proceeded with, and resulted as follows; five of the old members being re-elected, viz:—Dr. Day, Kingston; Messrs O'Donnell, Peterboro; Callender, Toronto; Relyea, Belleville; and Wood, Cobourg. A NEW BANK IN PETERBORO.—We understand that a branch of the Bank of Commerce is about to be established here, almost immediately. The President of the Bank was in town lately making arrangements, and expects to have the branch established before the fall trade commences. We are glad to learn that J. A. Hall, Esq. has been appointed manager here. Mr Hall's knowledge of the people of this Town and County, and his amiable and upright character, eminently fit him for the position.
